Values Education Draws Complaints

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

There's a "moral war" being waged in many school districts, and the subject under siege is what is called "moral" or "values" education.

Originally near the center of the battle, which has now expanded to other fronts, are small stories like this one:

"In Europe a woman was near death from a special kind of cancer. There was one drug that the doctors thought might save her. It was a form of radium that a druggist in the same town had recently discovered. The drug was expensive to make, but the druggist was charging 10 times what the drug cost to make. He paid $200 for the radium and charged $2,000 for a small dose of the drug.

"The sick woman's husband, Heinz, went to everyone he knew to borrow the money, but he could only get together about $1,000, which is half of what it cost. He told the druggist that his wife was dying and asked him to sell it cheaper or let him pay later. But the druggist said, "No, I discovered the drug and I'm going to make money from it." So Heinz got desperate and began to think about breaking into the man's store to steal the drug for his wife.

"Should Heinz steal the drug?"

Designed for ninth graders, this story is one of six "ethical dilemmas" originally developed by Lawrence Kohlberg at Harvard university and refined with scoring mechanisms by James Rest, professor of education at the University of Minnesota.

Rest's version is called the defining issues test, published as part of the Minnesota moral research project.

University of Minnesota test is used specifically to measure students' moral development before and after course work, and is used in nearly 30 school districts in the United States and Canada, and in many colleges and universities, as well as the U.S. army.

"There's hardly a school that doesn't use the moral education material in some way, or use value clarification, legal values education, or environmental values material," said James Mackey, also a professor of education at the university.

So who's objecting? "There are local viligante groups from North St. Paul to Longview, Texas," Mackey said. The Texas group, run by a couple named Gabler, will send extensive "war plans" to any right wing group in any community. Groups like these object to schools teaching social values at all, and certainly to classifying students into stages of moral development.

"Now local commando groups are forming on the other side, in favor of moral and values education," Mackey said. Allied with the pro-moral-education groups are national groups such as the Institute of society, Ethics and the Life sciences, in New York, also known as the Hastings institute, an early proponent of moral education for professionals, Rest said.

Because of opposition, among other reasons, many teachers don't reach ethics as a separate course. Values clarification exercises — in which students discuss their values and teachers merely guide the discussions — are often used only as part of another class, Rest said. In the Boston area, some classes are studying moral issues in the context of history; after studying the dates, places and causes of the American Revolution, for example, students discuss when, if ever, overthrowing authority is justified. "Combining moral education with social studies or humanities courses is a good idea anyway," Rest said.

When the Kohlberg-Rest story dilemmas are used, students can be classified into stages of moral development. It's not so much the answer they give, but the reasoning behind it, that shows their level of moral development, Rest said. To the story of Heinz and his sick wife, for example, students responded in these ways:

—"You shouldn't steal the drug because you'll be caught." An example of Stage one, the morality of obedience or "Do what you're told."

—"The druggist can do what he wants and so can Heinz." An example of Stage two, the morality of instrumental egoism and simple exchange, or, "Deals are possible."

—"If you were so heartless as to let your own wife die, you would feel terrible and everybody would really think you were inhuman." An example of Stage three, the morality of personal concordance, or "Be a nice person".

—"No one else is allowed to steal. Why should he be? If everyone starts breaking the law in a jam, there would be no civilization, just crime and violence." An example of Stage four, the morality of law and duty to the social order, or, "Laws are important."

—"The people are the ones who have gone together and decided on these laws, so they should follow them." An example of Stage five, the morality of societal consensus, or, "We choose our system."

—"Where the choice must be between disobeying the law and saving a human life, the higher principle of preserving life makes it morally right — not just understandable — to steal the drug." An example of Stage six, the morality of nonarbitrary social cooperation or, "Go with the highest principle."

Rest has done extensive research into who gives what answers to ethical dilemmas, and has come up with findings like these: People with higher IQs and those with more education score higher, no matter how old they are (once they're past high school age). Sex, socio-economic status, political party, profession or type of residence seem to make no difference. People do not change stages rapidly, even with a significant amount of school time devoted to moral education. However, once they change, they hardly ever regress. People vary a lot in how often they act the way they talk. The nation as a whole shifts back and forth a bit: a higher ethical consensus seems to follow a higher living standard.

As for Heinz himself — maybe he should write to Ann Landers or Deary Abby. He'd never have a calm moment discussing his problem in the schools these days.

FUELED UP FOR FITNESS

CONVENIENT CHICKEN A BASIC BARGAIN

If you lead an active life, you may become a meal skipper or find yourself headed for the convenience food aisle in your supermarket. Great timesavers, convenience foods are ready to serve with minimal work. In terms of nutritional quality, you may need to add some vegetables, fruit or a salad. Learn to read labels carefully. If you are trying to cut down on your intake of saturated fat, avoid breaded entrees or those in gravies and cream sauces.

If you spend lots of time working out, put convenience to work for you by developing a file of adaptable, easy recipes for foods which will keep you fit. Chicken and Rice is a good example of a basic dish, which, like a basic wardrobe, can be dressed up or down, depending on the occasion. Less than an hour to prepare, it is ideal for unexpected company since you are likely to have most of the ingredients on hand. A glass of wine, a spinach salad and a cheese-fruit board are the elegant touches your guests will appreciate. Bread or rolls could be served with family-style meals.

Chicken, a good buy from both the nutritional and economic standpoints, is the low-fat focus of this meal-in-one dish. Fleischmann's Corn Oil Margarine and spices add flavor, without saturated fat. At only 500 calories a serving, you will find Chicken and Rice a basically satisfying and nutritious dish, fitting your active schedule.

CHICKEN AND RICE

2 tablespoons Fleischmann's Margarine
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
3 pounds chicken parts
1 can (1 lb. 3 oz.) tomatoes, chopped
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup sliced onion
1/4 cup chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 medium bay leaf
1 medium clove garlic, minced
1-1/4 cups uncooked rice
1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas

Heat margarine and oil in Dutch oven or large heavy saucepan. Add chicken and brown well. Add tomatoes, chicken broth, onion, parsley, salt, pepper, bay leaf and garlic. Cover and cook over low heat 25 minutes. Add rice and cook 10 minutes; stir occasionally. Add peas and cook 10 minutes longer, or until done and all liquid is absorbed. Makes 6 servings. Contains about 500 calories per serving.

DEAR VOTERS:

You undoubtedly have thoughts as to qualities important to a good city alderman — — — I know I do, and would appreciate sharing my thoughts with you:

He will search out all avenues available in providing a positive atmosphere for living in Thief River Falls, as they apply to all citizens, of all ages, in all walks of life — — — for now and in the future.

He will give time necessary to answer your questions and receive your input — — being available to you.

He will treat fairly every person, not showing favoritism; — — — give full consideration to all sides of every problem, avoiding conflicts of interest — — and make objective decisions.

He will accept the challenge of providing necessary and desired services wanted by the majority, — — — on the most economic basis, within parameters of sound fiscal policy and keeping taxes as reasonable as possible.

To better acquaint you with me — — — a brief statement of my background:

A native 64 year old Minnesotan, I attended public schools in So. St. Paul, received a BBA degree from the University of Minnesota, completed several graduate courses and participated in management seminars. Our family moved to Thief River Falls in 1958 when I became President of the now First Northwestern State Bank, serving in that position until retirement in 1975 — — — presently am Secretary-Treasurer of Toreq, Inc.

My years in Thief River Falls permitted me membership in many organizations and boards — — —

Affiliation with the original Junior College Citizens and AVTI Citizens Advisory Committees confirmed my assessment of the value and its necessary availability of higher education to our citizens.

Service on the Hospital Board has shown me the values of a Community Hospital and Health Care with its attendant professional and non-professional personnel — — — United Fund Board membership has given me a picture of charity value. I have given and enjoyed time on the Concert Association and Arts Council Boards. Serving on the Thief River Falls Planning Commission affords me a broad viewpoint of planning necessary to keep open paths of progressive development. I believe I made a large contribution to this area by assisting in arranging original financing for Arctic Enterprises, Hydra-Mac and Toreq — — — all large employers benefiting the regions economy.

My wife, Everetta, and I have a strong affection for Thief River Falls and I hope to continue making it a City in which its citizens will enjoy a "good life".

I have the time to serve, the desire to serve, and I believe, the ability to serve. If elected, I seek to live up to the aforementioned views and to be a good City Alderman.

Respectfully, I ask for your support and your vote on November 6.

Sincere thanks,
J. J. Womack

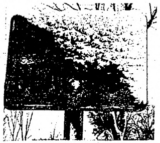
Volume 68. (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Monday, November 5, 1979 Number 87

SUNFLOWERS awaiting harvest throughout the Thief River Falls area bowed their heads to receive crowns of snow during the season's first snowfall Wednesday night. Many fields of sunflowers, which have become an important cash crop in the area, had not been harvested at the time of the snowfall.

INTRICATE PATTERN was created when part of the season's first real snowfall in the Thief River Falls area was captured by vines on a stucco wall on the north side of the Credit Bureau of Thief River Falls.

STUBBORN LEAVES which refused to admit that their season was ended and the time of snow had arrived still clung to branches of a fledgling hedge after Wednesday night's first real snowfall of the season.



HIGH MOISTURE CONTENT of the season's first snowfall in the Thief River Falls area Wednesday night caused snow to stick to vertical surfaces, such as this sign which will go largely unheeded for many months.

NW Education Plan Will Be Meeting Topic

House education committee of the Minnesota state legislature has scheduled a meeting with the public to begin at 7 p.m. at Thief River Falls on Thursday evening to discuss the northwest area educational plan.

This plan covers the period of time through 1983 and has been prepared by the Northwest Minnesota education planning task force. The meeting will be held in room 114 of the area vocational technical institute.

No School In Goodridge Fri.

There will be no school in the Goodridge public schools November 9 due to parent-teacher conferences.

Events Planned By ACE Group To Learn Needs

"We're separate but not," were the words used by Arlyne Forsberg, Adults continuing education (ACE) coordinator, to express the idea behind the adult education group formed in 1974.

"We are a support system for people going to school," she said. "The organization offers personal enrichment and career enhancement to interested people."

Most of the people who attend Northland community college and who are involved in ACE are employed outside of school — for full days, Arlyne said, and the organization is loosely knit.

"Adult students are busy people and we don't want to impose," she said.

Mrs. Forsberg stressed the importance for people, especially adults to be part of a group. "The college is a good place to go to meet those of the same age, especially since the ACE group was organized to try and get adults together," she said.

"It helps to know someone else is there if you're in trouble or just need to talk to someone."

Presently, ACE is planning a number of activities for the near future. During American education week, November 12-16, ACE will be conducting an open house November 15 which will give adults the opportunity to sit in on classes at Northland community college is they wish. ACE members will act as guides to give tours, introduce college administrators and answer questions. Winter schedules will also be available for distribution at this time. Open house will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

A needs survey is also being planned for adults to try and find out what time classes should be offered at NCC that would be of most benefit to adults, transportation problems, child care for those who wish to attend school and need assistance in caring for their children, finances and the type of classes that would be most helpful to adults.

"The written survey will give adults the opportunity to get acquainted," Arlyne said. "They are mainly part of an effort to contact people con-

Infant Mortality Is Area Problem

Sixteen or more of every thousand babies born each year in the Agassiz health systems agency (HSA) area do not live to celebrate their first birthdays. This figure is significantly higher than the national standard of 12 deaths per thousand live births. Data shows that most of the infants die within the first 28 days of life, and of those, a large percentage die within the first 24 hours.

Premature births—infants born weighing less than 2,500 grams—respiratory diseases and congenital defects lead the causes of infant deaths.

In the northwestern Minnesota counties of Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Beltrami, Polk, Pennington, Red Lake, Clearwater, Norman, Mahnomen and Hubbard the infant mortality of residents has been declining in the past four years.

In 1975 there were 42 deaths of resident infants from birth to one year of age among 2,335 live births that year for a rate of 17.99 per 1,000. In 1976 the death number dropped to 29 among 2,449 live births for a rate of 11.84 per cent. In 1977 the rate dropped to 10.95 with 29 deaths among 2,649 live births and in 1978 the rate was 10.74 with 29 deaths among 2,700 live births.

Several factors influence the success and safety of childbearing. Among them are:

—The age of the mother; teenagers and women more than 35 years old are considered to be at higher risk of developing complications.

—Prenatal care; women receiving early prenatal care have fewer and less severe complications.

—Nutrition; proper diets are required for healthy mothers and babies. Also required are lifestyles which will not harm the mother and baby during pregnancy, such as not smoking and not drinking too much alcohol.

—The mother's desire to have a baby; an unwanted pregnancy may be counter-productive to proper self care and obtaining adequate prenatal care.

What can be done to improve maternal and infant health and to lower the high

Hog Housing Ventilation Workshop Set

On Wednesday the Marshall county extension service will sponsor a meeting dealing with housing and ventilation systems for swine production. Scheduled for 1:30 p.m. at the new community building in Newfolden, the meeting will deal with farrowing systems, nursery, gestation and finishing systems.

Larry Jacobson, University of Minnesota extension Ag engineer, will be the speaker. Coffee will be served, and there will be plenty of time to discuss any personal swine housing and ventilation problems individual producers may have.

Clothes Pickup For Lutheran World Relief

Area American Lutheran churches will have their 34th annual clothing ingathering November 13, at Moe Lutheran church, Roseau, from 1 to 3 p.m., and in Thief River Falls November 14 at Zion Lutheran church, all day.

Please arrange to load directly into the truck at these designated locations. Send only children's clothing, men's work clothes, sweaters in all sizes, quilts, blankets, layettes, kits and soap. L.B. Hartz wholesale will transport the clothing to Minneapolis at no charge to the churches.

Invite Nurses Not Practicing To Take Class

An information meeting for inactive or non-practicing nurses who are interested in a re-entry skills refresher program will be conducted by Northland community college on Wednesday at the college beginning at 7 p.m. in room A16.

The seminar is being held in response to a recent survey conducted by NCC which indicated enough area interest for such a meeting.

At this seminar inactive or non-practicing nurses will be informed about what will be required to become an active nurse again. Any such nurses in northwestern Minnesota interested in a re-entry nursing program are urged to attend the meeting.

Only One Contest In Election Tues.

Candidate Allan Nichols

Candidate J.J. Womack

Mayor Bob Carlson

Alderman Ambrose Wysoski

Alderman Milan Borsheim

Alderman Clayton Restad

Unlike the past two city elections when there were a number of contests and some controversial questions on the ballot, the 1979 Thief River Falls city election Tuesday will have only one contest on a city-wide basis and none within the individual wards.

Only in the alderman-at-large race, where Allan Nichols and J.J. Womack have filed for the position vacated by Clayton Restad, will there be more than one candidate for the open positions this year. Restad has decided to run for the fifth ward alderman position rather than alderman-at-large. Fifth ward alderman Milton Reierson, a veteran of city government, did not seek reelection this year.

In the first ward alderman Milan Borsheim is unopposed for his second term. In the third ward, Ambrose Wysoski has no opposition as he seeks reelection to begin his 17th year on the council. Mayor Bob Carlson is also unopposed as he seeks reelection.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. at each of the five polling places in the city. Polling places for each ward include: First Ward, Northrop school, 914 LaBree av. N.; Second Ward, Masonic hall, 219 Fifth st. W.; Third Ward, city auditorium, 119-123 Main av. N.; Fourth Ward, Knox school, 701 Hughes st. E.; and Fifth Ward, Franklin school, 300 Spruce av. S.

Each member of the city council is elected for a four-year term with terms to expire December 31, 1983. Term of mayor is for two years with the term to expire December 31, 1981, according to Gerald A. Wigness, city clerk-treasurer.

Two years ago the city turned out in large numbers as 2,211 votes were cast in the city election. In that vote the sale of Sunday liquor was rejected 1,689 to 509 while a bond issue for a new fire hall was approved 1,277 to 890. Dr. Donald Goodrich unseated incumbent alderman-at-large Roger Worth 1-269 to 894 and Ole Engelstad and William Penning were elected to second and fourth ward alderman positions without opposition.

The 1977 vote total was accumulated despite rainy and snowy weather. In 1975 the voter turnout was 1,796 on an exceptionally nice late autumn day with four contests on the ballot.

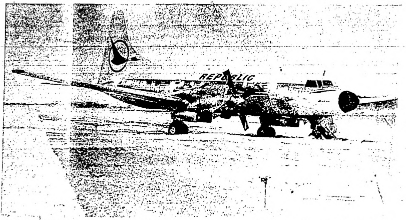
Registration Still Open For Dairy Meeting

Registration for the workshop on "Planning Your Dairy Future" is still open. Dairymen who would like to attend are asked to call their county extension offices as soon as possible. Sessions will be held four days from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Best Western Inn at Thief River Falls.

Workshop dates are November 13, 19 and 20 and December 11. Speakers at the meeting will include University of Minnesota extension dairyman Bob Appleman, University of Minnesota agronomist Neal Martin, extension farm management economists Ken Thomas and Bill Penning, extension nutritionist James Linn, University of Minnesota ag engineer Don Bates and extension veterinarian John Anderson.

This will be the biggest and most complete seminar on dairying ever scheduled in this area.

Fee for the course is $45 and can be paid for the first meeting night. Registration forms and meeting details are available at your local county extension office.



UNSCHEDULED STOP was made by this Republic Airlines plane Wednesday evening when heavy winds and heavy wet snow caused it to veer off the runway while landing at the Thief River Falls regional airport. Flight 897 from the Twin Cities via Brainerd and Bemidji had 18 passengers on board when landing on the snowy runway with temperatures right at the freezing mark and winds gusting from 25 to 30 miles per hour. One propeller blade was damaged when it struck a runway light as the plane slid off the runway surface onto the soft grassy area. There were no injuries and passengers were transported to the terminal within 15 minutes by airline personnel and law enforcement officials. At mid morning Thursday two wreckers were used to winch the plane back on the runway and the propeller blade was replaced before the plane was flown back to Minneapolis. The accident caused the cancellation of Flight 898 (the same plane, which normally overnights here) at 6:26 a.m. and Flight 894 which comes up from the Twin Cities and leaves at 10 a.m. Flight 893 was canceled due to runway conditions and the proximity of the first plane to the runway.

Group For Single Adults To Be Formed In TRF

Christian Singles, a new group for single adults, ages 18-32, is being formed in Thief River Falls. The group will have three emphases:

1) Small group discussions consisting of Bible study groups or topics of particular interest to single adults;

2) Fellowship — going places and doing things together. Contrary to what many married people believe most single adults are content in their present status and are not always looking for a mate. Christian Singles will not be a dating bureau.

3) As a group or individually, methods of helping each other will be explored. Also explored will be ways of providing community service and serving God through the churches.

Adults of all faiths are welcome to attend. The first meeting will be held Tuesday, November 6, at 7:30 p.m., in the Fireside room at the United Methodist church, Second and Horace. Anyone wishing further information may call 681-4388.

Homemakers of Wyandotte Met At Houske Home

Wyandotte homemakers club met October 26 at the Viola Houske home. Club president Kathy Carlson presided at the business meeting which included the discussion of club projects.

Christy Johnson And Les Stensrud Are Wed

Christy Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Johnson, 510 North State, became the bride of Les Stensrud, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Stensrud, 216 North Tindolph, on Saturday, September 22, at St. John Lutheran church in this city.

Rev. Barrie Henke officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Mrs. Sherman Idso, who played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her parents. During the ceremony, Jeff Liden, a friend of the couple, sang "The Lord's Prayer," and "Wedding Song."

The fresh yellow and white carnations that graced the altar, were given by the groom's parents in honor of their son's wedding.

The bride was attired in a gown of white nylon chiffon. It was styled with a fitted bodice with sheer V-yoke outlined by a gathered caplet, edged with lace. Matching lace complemented the cuffs on the long sheer sleeves and accented the flounce on her softly gathered skirt. In her hair, whe wore a wreath of babies' breath. She carried a nosegay of yellow baby rose buds and white daisies, backed by ruffled lace and yellow ribbon streamers. Her only jewelry was the string of pearls worn by the groom's mother on her wedding day.

Melody Gilbert, a friend of the couple, was the bride's personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Crystal Liden, a friend of the bride. Other attendants were Holly Johnson, sister of the bride, Debbie Johnson of Newfolden, a sister-in-law, and Patti Myers, a friend of the couple. They wore identical gowns of ivory polyester accented with brown bolero vests with cotton lace collars. They carried three long-stemmed yellow roses with yellow silk ribbon, matching the yellow flower pinned in their hair.

Serving as flower girl was Danielle Grandbois, St. Hilaire, a niece of the groom. She wore a white eyelet dress topped by a pinafore featuring a brown print. She carried a basket of daisies and yellow roses. The rings were carried on a satin heart-shaped pillow by Devon Grandbois of St. Hilaire. He wore a brown suit with a yellow rose bud boutonniere.

Mitch Berger, a friend of the groom, was best man, Ron Gilbert, a friend, and Dan and Clint Stensrud of Minneapolis, brothers of the groom, were groomsmen. Serving as ushers were Michael Johnson of Newfolden, a brother of the bride, and Orville Stensrud, East Grand Forks, an uncle of the groom. They wore off-white tuxedos with dark brown trousers, vests and bow ties. Their boutonnieres were yellow roses. A similar boutonniere was worn by the groom, who wore off-white attire.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Johnson selected a pink floor-length gown with lace at the neckline and around the sleeves. The mother of the groom wore a long-sleeved, plum-colored gown topped by a matching capelet. Both wore corsages of white carnations and yellow rosebuds, corresponding with boutonnieres worn by the fathers. All the flowers worn at the wedding were of silk and were made by Mrs. Chet Aubol of this city, a friend of the bride's family.

A reception for about 125 relatives and friends followed. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Harbott, friends of the couple. Kathy Grandois, St. Hilaire, a sister of the groom, registered the guests as Corey Jorde and Tammy Rantanen served the punch.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered chocolate wedding cake, iced in off-white and decorated with yellow roses and white daisies. Between the tiers were white bells with yellow rose bud clappers. Topping the cake were a minature bride and broom seated on a loveseat beneath an archway. The cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Dwayne Olson and Debbie of Newfolden, who also catered the reception. It was cut and served by Mrs. Willard Yonke, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Walter Birner, Wasaw, N.D., aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Orville Stensrud, East Grand Forks, aunt of the groom, and Mrs. John Thorstad, cousin of the bride.

Waitresses were Julie Johnson, Suzie and Paula Eggerud, cousins of the bride, and Debbie Grandbois, niece of the groom. Addie Ennesvedt, Minneapolis, pinned the flowers; Dorrie Grandbois, niece of the groom, distributed the scrolls, and Lorrie Stensrud, Annette Peterson and Cindy Rae arranged the gifts.

The evening, prior ot the ceremony, the groom's parents hosted a dinner at the American Legion club for members of the wedding party and immediate families.

For traveling on the wedding trip to Minneapolis, the bride and groom wore matching attire. The couple is now at home in Newfolden. The bride is employed at Oakland Park Nursing home and the groom by Falls Concrete. Both are graduates of Lincoln high school. Photo, John Thorstad, godfather of the bride.

12 Resolutions Adopted at Nat'l WCTU Convention

Twelve resolutions were adopted at the 105th annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union held in Oakland, Calif. The group, aware of the growing tensions, unrest, increasing economic programs and the lowering of moral standards, believes that alcoholic beverages, other narcotics and tobacco, have contributed to this condition.

In the resolutions, the group called upon school administrators and teachers, and the ministers and members of churches to promote a narcotic educational program giving scientific facts about beverage alcohol, other narcotics and tobacco, stressing the physiological, psycological and economic effects upon the indidual and society. They emphasized preventeon and total abstinence, together with the reinstatement of signing the total abstinence pledge within the church.

They urged parents to assume their responsibilities in the home, training in high standards of honesty, social behavior and respect for authority, and to assist in refuting the image of alcohol as a normal part of family living.

They urged greater emphases be placed on the sacredness of marriage and deplored the current trend of some people causing a decline in morals by living together without the benefit of marriage.

In view of the great increase in alcoholic beverage advertising, the group resolved to seek the passage of a number of bills. Included were the Brown Bill H.R. 167, that such advertising can not be listed as a deductible expense; the George E. Brown bill H.R. 4441, supporting the warning labeling on alcoholic beverages and in all advertising of alcoholic beverages; the Bennett Bill H.R. 136, prohibiting air carriers from dispensing alcoholic beverages and tobacco, with or without charge to passengers; the Thurman Bill S. 249, and the Hammerschmidt bill H.R. 1382, which would prohibit television broadcasting of programs portraying nudity, obscenity, violence, profanity and explicit sexual activity. They also supported the monitoring of television programs, reporting the offensive programs and commending the good programs to the president of the broadcasting companies.

Due to the rise in crime, the union urged a moral reawakening and reestablishment of respect for law and order by enforcement of present adequate laws. Churches, civic and political organizations were also challenged to assist in developing good character among young people.

Realizing the harmful effect of alcohol and other drugs on the fetus, the Union stressed total abstinence during pregnancy. They also joined the medical profession in working for strict laws regarding drugs prescribed for pregnant women. They urged the labeling of over-the-counter drugs that are harmful if used during pregnancy, be marked with warning labels.

Noting the widespread establishment of shops selling drug usage paraphelalia and instruction, the union will work for the eliminations of such paraphenalia from the market as it is a major source of education for the use of illegal drugs.

Being concerned by the shortage of food in many areas of the world, and the effect of malnutrition and hunger upon people, it was urged that grain, both here and abroad, be used for food instead of the manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

In recognition of the International Year of the Child, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will continue to stress the harmful effects of alcohol, narcotics, tobacco and drugs and to aid in the home protection program by elevating the spiritual and moral behavior of the family with facts, constant action and unceasing vigilance.

Due to the increase in traffic accidents and crime since the drinking age was lowered from 21 years to 18, the group agreed to request every state legislature return the drinking age limit to 21 years.

The union also supported the fights of children to offer voluntary prayer in school, as stated by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The last resolution was in regards to Pari-Mutual betting, a form of gambling. Members went on record as opposing this type of gambling where it is allowed and to prevent it in the stages which do not have it at this time.

Mrs. Herman Stanley of Evanston, Ill., president of the national organization, presided at the meeting and gave the keynote address, "Guardians on the Home Front."

The convention included reports by state presidents, a memorial service, youth program, Diamond speech contest, White Ribbon program, a banquet, and a tour to Petaluma they celebrated the 100th anniversary of the California North WCTU by dedicating a fountain and park bench.

Attending the National convention was Mrs. Tarkel Ose, president of the Thief River Falls Alice Mae Stuart union.

LINDSTROM TEAM will appear for a rally in Thief River Falls December 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lincoln high school auditorium. Lundstroms has been conducting rallies, camp meetings, crusades and youth conventions for the past 21 years.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Older Persons Are Getting Around More

Our bodies have a fantastic ability to recuperate when given the proper stimulus, observes the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

Many of us have acquaintances in their eighties and nineties who are able to walk considerable distances to maintain their functions. This, in turn, helps to stimulate their whole body to remain healthy. It's really never too difficult to start an exercise program. Frequently these programs can be tailored to meet the needs and the ability of the individual, even if arthritis or some other physical disability makes it difficult for the individual to increase the range of motion of affected joints.

Surprisingly, the muscles will respond to increased physical activity. As a result many of these older persons are able to move about satisfactorily regardless of whether they live at home or in a nursing home.

There are a variety of physical and systemic changes which can take place as we grow older. However, our attitude toward accepting and dealing with these changes can often make the difference.

For example, stooped posture, stiffened joints and porous bone structure all too often contribute to a less attractive physical image of the aging person.

These and other changes which occur as part of the aging process often impair or curtail the activities of daily living including limited mobility and independent living.

As we age, a number of us can expect to grow shorter. This can occur when the spaces between the vertebrae decrease in size. In some instances, osteo porosis can cause the vertebrae to collapse. Osteo porosis is a condition which can occur in older persons when there is abnormal drainage of calcium from the system. The process is irreversible. No amount of exercise or medication will help.

Osteo porosis can be prevented with adequate diet. However, it is important to note that this condition is the result of many years of improper dieting including inadequate milk intake, an inportant source of calcium.

Often as we grow older, our eating habits change. Sometimes efforts to prepare a well balanced meal are neglected and the result can often lead to additional health problems in our later years.

Generally the stooped appearance seen in older persons is the result of faulty posture or exercise habits rather than a systemic disease. The inactive person who tends to sit in a certain position for long periods of time or the patient confined to a nursing home bed are examples of persons who are likely to develop contractures which can be extremely difficult to treat after they have developed.

A carefully planned physical exercise program geared to meet the needs and the ability of the individual can often delay the onset of these disabilities.

After becoming involved in a well planned exercise program older persons have sometimes found that it isn't necessary for them to be confined to a wheelchair unless they choose to do so.

With proper physical activities some older persons have found that they can improve their ability to get around to better enjoy their golden years.

Hypoglycemia (pronounced hi-po-gli-see-me-ah) means that there is too little sugar or glucose in the blood. It occurs whenever the pancreas secretes too much insulin, explains the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA). It may also occur if the diabetic takes too much insulin and the body's blood sugar gets too low.

Some forms of hypoglycemia may occur naturally, when for various reasons the body's mechanism for controlling blood sugar is not in tune.

The brain is the most vulnerable organ of the body to be affected by hypoglycemia. The brain uses sugar for all of its work. It doesn't store carbohydrates. When the blood sugar starts to decrease, the brain sends out signals. The first signal is usually that of hunger. Other symptoms of low blood sugar may be tiredness or trembling. Insulin reaction, on the other hand, is an acute condition for the insulin dependent diabetic, who may become shakey, sweaty, tired, irritable and at times may experience convulsions of unconsciousness. Occassionally low blood sugar can be a pre-condition to diabetes, which is the result of high blood sugar. When this takes place, it usually indicates that the body's control mechanism is going awry.

Surveys have shown that a low blood sugar condition is a frequent forerunner of diabetes.

Occassionally, hyoglycemia will appear in children who may also exhibit the symptoms of shakiness, fainting or a convulsion.

Mild hypoglycemia can cause problems and some diabetics may experience confusion in the early stages of this condition. During that period the potential hazards of operating a motor vehicle are substantially increased.

Unconsciousness or even general convulsions occur in the diabetic who is either not aware of a hypoglycemic condition or chooses to ignore it.

Permanent brain damage could occur if this condition is allowed to continue untreated.

Carbohydrates may be given to a known diabetic who is experiencing the symptoms of hypoglycemia.

Any person with symptoms indicating blood sugar problems should consult a physician.

Increase in Crime Noted During 1978

More than 11 million crime index offenses were reported to law enforcement agencies in 1978, two per cent more than in 1977 and nine per cent higher than in 1974, attorney Gen. Benjamin R. Civiletti announced recently.

The 1978 total represents an average of 5,109 offenses per each 100,000 persons residing in the United States, according to the statistics compiled by the Federal bureau of investigation.

Violent crimes of murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault, which collectively represented 10 per cent of the total volume of index offenses, increased five per cent. The more voluminous property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft were up two per cent as a group.

Law enforcement agencies were successful in clearing 21 per cent of the index crimes reported to them in 1978. Forty-six per cent of the violent crimes and 18 per cent of the property crimes were cleared. Persons under 18 were involved in 28 per cent of the total index clearances.

During the year, an estimated 10.3 million arrests were made for all crimes except traffic violations. Of those arrested, 40 per cent were under 21 and 57 per cent were under age 25. Arrests of males outnumbered those of females by five to one.

These final 1978 figures were extracted from the annual publication, "Crime in the United States," released recently by FBI director William H. Webster. The FBI's uniform crime reporting program serves as a clearinghouse for crime-related statistics voluntarily submitted by more than 15,000 local, county and state law enforcement agencies nationwide.

Other highlights from the 1978 publication are:

— Murder offenses rose two per cent over 1977 but decreased six per cent from 1974. In approximately three of each four murders, males were the victims; more than half of the murder victims were acquainted with their assailants; and one of five was related to the offender. Nearly half of all murders resulted from arguments, while 17 per cent were the result of some felonious activity.

— Forcible rape was up seven per cent in 1978, and an estimated 60 of every 100,000 females were victims of forcible rape during the year. Fifty-four per cent of persons arrested for forcible rape were under 25.

— Robbery offenses accounted for an estimated loss of $181 million during 1978 and, although they increased three per cent over 1977, there were six per cent fewer of these offenses than in 1974. Seven of every 10 robberies occurred in cities with populations of 100,000 or more, and nearly half of all robberies occurred on the streets or highways. Firearms were the weapons used in 41 per cent of the robbery offenses.

— Incidents of aggravated assault were up seven per cent over 1977 and 22 per cent over 1974. Law enforcement agencies cleared an average of 62 per 100 cases of aggravated assault in 1978.

— Sixty-five per cent of all burglaries in 1978 were residential burglaries, and 73 per cent involved forcible entries. Total loss resulting from these offenses was estimated to be $1.6 billion or $526 average loss for each burglary.

— Larceny-theft, the most voluminous index crime, accounted for 5,983,401 offenses in 1978, or more than half of the index total, and resulted in total losses estimated at $1.3 billion. Females were arrested more often for larceny-theft than for any other crime in 1978 and made up 32 per cent of all those arrested for this offense.

— An estimated average of 1 of every 145 registered motor vehicles was stolen in 1978. Volume of these thefts was up two per cent from 1977, and up one per cent from the 1974 total. Seventy per cent of those arrested for motor vehicle theft were under 21 and 51 per cent were under 18.

— Nationally, there was an average of 2.1 full-time law enforcement officers for every 1,000 inhabitants in 1978. Sixteen of every 100 officers were assaulted during the year, and six of these sustained injury from the assault. Ninety-three officers were feloniously killed in 1978; the same number killed in 1977.

Annual Wheat Grower Meet Nov. 28 To 30

Billy Ray Gowdy, USDA assistant to agriculture undersecretary Dale Hathaway, has accepted the invitation to speak at the Minnesota association of wheat growers annual convention November 28, 29 and 30 at the American Inn in East Grand Forks.

Former Oklahoma agriculture commissioner Gowdy will be the featured speaker at the Thursday night banquet. Gowdy still resides in the Oklahoma panhandle area, where he raises cattle as well as being a large wheat producer.

"We're very pleased to have a speaker of Gowdy's quality on our agenda," said wheat growers president Jorgen Knutson. "As both a wheat producer and one who works in the legislative division of the USDA, Gowdy can present a broad range of viewpoints."

Knutson also noted that Gowdy is one of several outstanding speakers on the agenda for the three-day convention. "A line-up like the one we have planned should lead to very good attendance. Each year, the number of people attending the convention has doubled, and this year should produce the largest crowd ever," Knutson asserted.

Convention opens Wednesday, November 28, at 3 p.m., with a meeting of the resolutions committee. "We're in the process of holding county meetings throughout the state and each group is discussing resolutions to present at the convention," Knutson said. "This is just the kind of input we're looking for."

Official opening of the convention will be November 29. Registration is set for 8 a.m., to be immediately followed by a general session. Following the day's activities, a reception has been planned for 6 p.m., followed by the 7:30 p.m. banquet at which Gowdy will be speaking.

"We hope every wheat producer in the state will make a concerted effort to attend this convention," Knutson concluded.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—If a service person is totally disabled at time of discharge or release from military service, what kind of coverage is he entitled to under the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI)?

A—SGLI coverage will continue for one year or until the service person's disability ceases to be total in degree, whichever occurs first. The insured may apply for Veterans Group Life Insurance at any time during the one-year period SGLI is in effect.

Q — I am a World War I veteran with a service-connected amputation. Am I eligible for a specially-adapted automobile from the Veterans Administration?

A — Yes, if you meet all requirements of the law passed last year providing this benefit for World War I veterans. Check with your nearest VA regional office or seek assistance through local veterans service organizations.

KIM SUNSDAHL, dressed as a fat mouse, won first prize at the Lions annual Halloween party Wednesday in the Thief River Falls armory and was awarded $5. Second place winner and winner of $4 was Amy Spong, who was dressed as a scarecrow. Three dollars and third place went to Heidi Berning, dressed as Tweety Bird, fourth and $2 went to Joel Fremstad, dressed as Little Kiss and fifth and $1 went to Jason Brunkhorst who was dressed as a robot. Judges for the event were Mrs. Jim Erickson, Mrs. Jerry Hendrickson and Mrs. Everett Kompelien. The party, conducted for children from pre-school to sixth grade, was chaired by Vern Lee. Roger Tunberg acted as publicity chairman.

1,340 Vietnam Veterans Seek Disability Help

Exposure to dioxin-bearing agent orange and other powerfully toxic defoliants used in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam war has already led 1,340 Vietnam veterans to seek help from the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) in filing claims for service-connected disability benefits from the Veterans administration (VA).

Follow-up on these inquiries and requests for claims representation is now being handled by DAV veterans' benefits experts at the 625,000-member organization's 67 National Service Offices across the United States. In addition, a system is in place at DAV National Service headquarters in Washington, D.C., to bring all information relevant to these claims together under one roof.

Representation by DAV National Service officers in the VA claims process is free of charge to veterans and their families.

"Claims for service-connection of disabilities that veterans believe are the result of exposure to herbicides will be extremely difficult to win," said DAV special projects officer Bob Lenham, the only Vietnam veteran on the VA's advisory committee on the health-related effects of herbicides. Establishment of service-connection would entitle these veterans to health care and disability benefits from the VA.

The most common symptoms attributed to dioxin poisoning include:

—Numbness in fingers, toes, arms and legs in varying degrees;

—Nervous disorders, especially loss or decrease in the sensitivity of the senses;

—Altered sex drive, including dimished sex drive or impotence among men and increased sexual activity among women;

—Psychological effects, including loss of memory, confusion, aggression or irritability;

—Skin rashes, specifically chloracne, which resembles a severe case of acne and is usually found on the face, arms, chest, back or legs;

—Cancer, particularly cancer of the liver; and —Birth defects in children born to affected parents — primarily defects of the hands, fingers, feet and toes.

"The DAV is disappointed in the government's response to the agent orange question," said Lenham. "The VA and other government agencies still haven't come up with a test to detect dioxin in the body systems of veterans.

"We believe they should be looking into a number of tests that show some promise. The DAV realizes this is a difficult issue for the VA, but the government could be moving more quickly toward resolving the anxieties that the dioxin question is causing for thousands of Vietnam veterans."

Hundreds of thousands of American military personnel were exposed to toxic defoliants while fighting in Southeast Asia. Symptoms attributed to dioxin, an ingredient in some of these herbicides, are now showing up several years after exposure.

Vietnam veterans who have symptoms they feel are related to exposure to toxic defoliants in Southeast Asia should contact: National Service Headquarters, Disabled American Veterans, 807 Maine Ave., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

Four Exchange Pacts Signed By U of M, China

Four agreements to exchange students, faculty and scientific information have been signed by the University of Minnesota and colleges and universities in the People's Republic of China.

Agreements were described by Wenda Moore, chairman of the University of Minnesota board of regents, at a news conference September 27.

"Our accomplishments far and away exceeded anything we thought possible for a first trip to cqina," Moore said. She led a delegation of 12 university faculty members and administrators on a 21-day tour of Chinese educational, medical and research institutions earlier this month.

Generally, the signed agreements call for exchange of faculty members, scholars and graduate students, collaboration in research projects and exchange of teaching and scientific research material.

Agreements are with Jilin University of Technology in Changchun, a technical and agricultural engineering university; Nankai University in Tianjin, a liberal arts and technical university; the national academy of agricultural sciences and the national academy of agricultural engineering in Peking; and the Peking agricultural university.

In addition to the signed agreements, several verbal agreements were made with hospitals and medical schools in Peking, Moore said.

"It is a real advantage that we are a comprehensive university," said LaVern Freeh, assistant dean of the institute of agriculture, forestry and home economics, and a member of the China delegation. "Many of the Chinese universities are not, but are quite specialized. Consequently, we had to make agreements with many institutions."

Freeh said it is likely the Chinese will benefit more from the exchange agreements in technology and agriculture than will the university. "But in terms of art and Chinese language and history, and archeology, I think we will gain a lot, so we'll strike a good balance."

Within the next few months, names of University of Minnesota graduate students will be submitted to some of the Chinese institutions for consideration, Moore said. University East Asian languages professor C. J. Lau is already in China and will remain there for two years to smooth the way for those participating in the exchanges, Moore said.

There are now nine Chinese scholars studying at the university, and the number should grow to 16 by the end of the year, Freeh said. "The doors are open, and the numbers (we exchange) will be dependent on the interest," he said.

Most of the University of Minnesota students who go to China will be graduate students in East Asian studies and in agricultural and technical areas. Undergraduate students are not likely to be included in the exchanges for some time since housing space in China is critically short, Freeh said.

Agreement with Jilin University includes provision for a summer institute in English next year in China. Chinese people have found that the most productive way to take advantage of the educational opportunities in the United States is to pursue English first, particularly technical and scientific English," Moore said.

Prof. Betty Robinett, who has done pioneering research on the teaching of scientific and technical English and is chairman of the University's English as a second language program, was particularly sought after as a lecturer by the Chinese during the delegation's visit, Moore said.

University of Minnesota is one of only a handful of American universities that have signed agreements with Chinese institutions, Moore said, and its delegation was only the second educational group to be received by Vice Premier Fang Yi, the third-ranking Chinese government official.

Members of the delegation were uniformly pleased by the reception they received during their stay. On their arrival at Jilin university, for instance, the group was greeted by the faculty and students, who lined the road and clapped, Freeh said.

"It wasn't easy. Negotiating is difficult and there was a language problem, but when we sat down later and tried to think of anything we would have changed, we could come up with nothing," Freeh said.

Two From TRF Attend Church

Thirty persons examined issues in "The Church in Transition — Planning for Change in the '80s" through a recent workshop at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. Among the 30 were Donald Knutson and Keith Prekker, both of Thief River Falls.

Program was presented by UND's division of continuing education for clergy, church and congregational leaders and laity involved in church work. Principal sessions in this two-day program examined factors and trends in church growth and the challenges of today and tomorrow.

Studied were such factors as economic pressures, breakups in family life, expectations of the pastor, resistance to change, competition for people's time and the growing emphasis on visual communication. A miniworkshop explored issues in the lives of clergy.

Leading the program was Lyle Schaller, a nationally recognized expert in the dynamics of change, administration and church planning.

Mortality Of Infants Said Area Problem

mortality rate?

Agassiz HSA has brought together task forces in North Dakota and Minnesota, concentrating in the areas of Rolette-Benson and Beltrami-Mahnomen counties. Represented on these task forces are most of the agencies and organizations which might expect to deal with infants and their mothers, as well as with potential mothers—physicians; nurses, both hospital-based and public health; hospital administrators; social workers; community action agency outreach workers; family planning counsellors; nutritionists; public school officials; and Native American health workers.

Early discussions of both the North Dakota and Minnesota-based task forces are focusing on a two-prong approach of education and coordination. Suggestions for education may range from continuing in-service programs for health care professionals to basic health education for consumers. The need for coordination of existing programs and referral mechanisms has also been identified as a priority by both groups.

These task forces plan to meet as continuing groups to set goals and work for changes in their areas. Agassiz's role will be primarily that of technical assistance. Agassiz will provide the necessary data and help in scheduling meetings but decisions will be made by local people. In the future, Agassiz sees the possibility of increased regional coordination of maternal and child services, while providers and consumers also continue to work on the local level to ensure that services are provided.

There are also various workshops planned for topics such as resume and interviewing techniques, study skills, career development and special events.

There are currently nine initial committee members in ACE, including Mrs. Forsberg, adults continuing education coordinator; Ron Bengtson, evening student representative; Gertrude Hanson, senior citizen representative (who is currently taking creative writing classes at NCC and is in the process of sending in a poem for publication); Mary Gibson and Sharon Hunt, calling committee; Jodie Williamson and Marianne Prekker, special projects; Cheryl Lee, child care; and Frank Gibbs, communications.

"It is important to identify with people who are going back to school," Arlyne said.

Voters will hear more U.S. politicians talking about productivity in the coming months, predicts the American Institute of Industrial Engineers. Already taking a lead in city improved productivity as an inflation fighter are Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Alfred Kahn, the President' adviser on inflation.

Former RLF Man Is State Award Winner

Twenty-six-year education veteran, Winton Gackstetter, was named "Professional Person of the Year" by the Minnesota state council for the handicapped this week, according to Michele Gran, information officer for the council.

Currently director of the Crookston regional inter-district council (RIC) for special education, Gackstetter was cited for his personal achievements and many professional contributions to Minnesota's disabled.

In Red Lake Falls he taught industrial arts at Lafayette high school and after 19 years of service, two in vocational carpentry, he moved on to the then newly-formed RIC cooperative at Crookston.

"He has produced solutions to problems, often in the face of resistance, and has ultimately won support for them," states Lois McDermott of the state department of education.

As a result, he has become known statewide as advocate for disabled people. "It has been his philosophy that services should be provided locally so that handicapped students and parents need not be separated needlessly. This task is a considerable one in his area of the state, since numbers of miles between communities are high and the incidence of handicapped students is low," Gran said.

"All educators have the responsibility for the education of all students to the maximum of their learning potential, no matter where they call home," Gackstetter explains. "Only through team efforts and not in isolation can we attain maximum effectiveness of educational goals for all children."

Gackstetter's name and requested biographical material will be sent to the President's committee on employment of the handicapped, where he will be considered along with nominees from other states for national recognition.

Mabel Krats Services Set For Tuesday

Mrs. Mabel Krats, 87, of St. Hilaire died Friday morning at the Hillcrest Nursing home in Red Lake Falls.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mabel Krats will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m., at Redeemer Lutheran church in this city. Rev. Keith Prekker will officiate. Interment will be in the Clara cemetery, rural St. Hilaire.

The body is reposing at the Belmont Funeral home and will repose at the church for one hour prior to the time of services. A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

R. M. Douglass Once County Agent, Dies

Robert M. Douglass, 81, 1503-2nd Avenue South, Anoka, retired University of Minnesota extension coordinator, retired colonel in the Minnesota National Guard, and a former Pennington county agricultural agent, died unexpectedly on Sunday, October 28, of an apparent heart attack.

Memorial services for Robert Douglass were held Thursday at 1 p.m., at the First Congregational church in Anoka with the Thurston-Lindberg funeral home of Anoka in charge of arrangements.

Robert M. Douglass was born in Worthington. He was graduated from Anoka high school and from the University of Minnesota in 1923. From 1927-37, he served as Pennington county agricultural agent. After leaving Thief River Falls he was University of Minnesota Agricultural extension coordinator until his retirement in 1962. In 1976, he was awarded the Minnesota Distinguished service Medal.

A member of the Minnesota National Guard, he was called into active service four times, the first time in 1916, along the Mexican border. He retired from the national Guard in 1957.

He was married to Dorothy Chappell of Anoka. She died in 1978.

He is survived by one son, Robert M. Douglass, Jr., of Groton Long Point, Conn., two daughters: Patricia Johnson, Anoka, and Mrs. Edward (Margy) Faherty, Eau Claire, Wis.; eight grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, one brother, Frank A. Douglass, Lakefield; and three sisters: Mrs. Kenneth (Margaret) Boss and Miss Della Douglass both of St. Paul and Mrs. Fred (Gracetta) Hill, Durham, N.C.

Harry Sampson Services Held At Silver Creek

Harry Sampson, 69, of rural Thief River Falls died Wednesday at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services for Harry Sampson were held today (Monday) at 10 a.m., at the Silver Creek Lutheran church with Rev. Nancy Lund officiating. Mrs. Carmen Gustafson was the organist and together with Mrs. Grace Jorde provided two vocal selections. Interment was in the church cemetery. The Green Funeral home was in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Don Howe, Curt Howe, Arden DuChamp, David Mueller, Harry Philipp and Roger Philipp.

Harry Sylvestor Sampson was born Jan. 24, 1910 in Grand Forks, N.D., to Martin and Emma Brokke Sampson, now deceased. He lived in Excel township, Marshall county, where he grew to manhood. He was baptized and confirmed in the Satesdal Lutheran church and received his elementary school at the Busy Bee school.

On Sept. 19, 1932, he was united in marriage to Tillie Marimonte in Thief River Falls. The couple farmed in Agder township, Marshall county. In addition to farming, Sampson was also a heavy equipment operator.

Surviving are five daughters: Mrs. Harry (Harriet) Philipp, Mrs. Arden (Darlene) DuChamp, Mrs. Don (Gerri) Howe and Mrs. Curtis (Holly) Howe, all of Thief River Falls; and Mrs. David (Arlene) Mueller of Excelsior; 16 grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and two sisters: Mrs. Mary Baker, Thief River Falls and Mrs. Oscar (Gladys) Gutterud of Holt.

He was preceded in death by his wife, who died May 11, 1979; a daughter, Darlene Ann; his parents, a brother, Ted; one sister, Mrs. Pearl Amiot, and a brother, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Peterson, Mother of TRF Resident, Dies

Mrs. Arvid (Clara) Peterson, 88, of Badger, mother of Roy Peterson of Thief River Falls, died unexpectedly on Monday, October 29, at her home in Badger.

Funeral services for Mrs. Clara Peterson were held Thursday at 2 p.m., at the Badger Creek Free Lutheran church with Rev. Gustav Nordvall officiating. Interment was in the Badger City cemetery. The Helgeson Funeral chapel, Roseau, was in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Gary Peterson, Bob Griffin, Roy Hervey, David Hervey, Tim Hervey and Larry Pederson.

Mrs. Peterson, the former Clara Geneva Pederson, was born Oct. 6, 1891 at Superior, Wis., to Mr. and Mrs. Hans Pederson. She moved from Wisconsin to Warroad. On March 10, 1914, she was married to Arvid Peterson at Roseau with Mike Holm officiating. After their marriage, the couple lived for a time at Badger, before moving to Shelly and Deep, N.D. In 1934, they returned to Badger and lived there for a time before moving to Gatzke and then to Euclid. In 1957, they again returned to Badger, where they have since resided.

She was a member of the Badger Creek Ladies aid.

Survivors include her husband, seven sons: Roy Peterson, Thief River Falls; Eugene, Gatzke; Vernon, Badger; Forrest, Dawn and Larry of Los Angeles, Calif., and Dale of Roseau; four daughters: Mrs. Donald (Genevieve) Hervey and Mrs. Gordon (Fern) Drown, both of Bagley; Mrs. Bernard (Patience) Hervey, East Grand Forks; and Mrs. Clarence (Lorraine) VanderWeg of Crookston; 30 grandchildren, 33 great-grandchildren, and one brother, Walter Pederson of Wampum, Manitoba, Canada.

She was preceded in death by her parents, three sisters and five brothers.

Rites Held At Gentilly For Mose Brault

Mass of the Resurrection for Mose J. Brault, 88, of Red Lake Falls, was offered Friday at 10:30 a.m., at St. Peter's Catholic church in Gentilly. Brault, a longtime resident of the Gentilly community, died Tuesday at St. Mary's hospital in Detroit Lakes where he had been a patient for one week.

Msgr. Victor Cardin was the celebrant. Music was provided by Mrs. Raymond Benoit and the church choir. Interment was in St. Joseph's Catholic cemetery at Red Lake Falls with the Petterson Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Ray Fuller, Keith Fuller, Lawrence Paske, Paul Normandin, Lawrence Dufault and Roy Scully.

Mose J. Brault was born July 4, 1891 in Wyandotte township, Pennington county, to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Brault. He attended school and grew to manhood there.

He was united in marriage at Red Lake Falls to Helen M. Porter on Nov. 23, 1923. Following their marriage, the couple built a home and established a business in Gentilly. With the exception of time spent in California working in a defense plant during World War II, Brault spent most of his adult life in Gentilly working as a blacksmith and a well-driller. He also owned and operated a confectionary store there. For the past three years, he had been a resident of the Hillcrest Nursing home at Red Lake Falls.

He was a veteran of World War I.

His only survivors are several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his wife, who died in 1971, his parents, three brothers: Albert, Omer and Henry, and two sisters: Courina and Alexina.

Services Today For Lorraine Knitter, 66

Mrs. Lorraine Knitter, 66, of Stephen died Wednesday at Laguna Beach, Calif.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lorraine Knitter are being held today (Monday) at 2 p.m., at the First Lutheran church in Stephen with Rev. Howard Wagner officiating. Mrs. Peter Roland will be the organist and Burt Walker, the soloist. Interment will be in the Stephen cemetery with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers will be Elmer Kroke, Harry Kroke, Clarence Kroke, Anton Anderson, Leo Halfmann, Harold Bustrack, Mervin Anderson, Glen Sustad, Roger Thompson and Ralph Hvidsten.

Serving as active pallbearers will be Don Russell, Robert Johnson, Earl Hvidsten, Harold Myhre, Peter Grant and Earl Benson.

Mrs. Knitter, the former Lorraine Green, was born Jan. 15, 1913 at Newfolden to Carl and Inga Green, now deceased. She was graduated from the Newfolden high school, attended nurses training at Bethesda hospital in Crookston and was graduated from St. Andrew's hospital school of Nursing in Minneapolis. Following graduation, she worked as a nurse at Tacoma, Wash., for a year before returning to the Newfolden community.

On Dec. 21, 1935, she was married at Warren to Harry Knitter. After their marriage, they lived at Warren for a time before moving to Newfolden where they owned and operated the Gamble store for a few years. They also lived in Duluth for three years.

In 1951, they moved to Stephen where her husband operated the Ford Auto and Implement business. After his death on May 29, 1972, Mrs. Knitter continued to live in Stephen. She spent the winter months in California.

She was a member of the First Lutheran church at Stephen.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. William (LaNel) Cross, San Pedro, Calif., and Mrs. Stephen (Herilyn) Rimel, Laguna Beach, Calif.; two grandchildren, a brother, Verne Green, Newfolden, and one nephew and two nieces.

She was preceded in death by one sister.

Services Held For Esther Poppenhagen

Mrs. Ether Poppenhagen, 77, 3994 Brunswick avenue, St. Louis Park, died Thursday at the Methodist hospital in that city.

Funeral services for Mrs. Esther Poppenhagen were held today (Monday) at 10 a.m., at the St. Louis Park Evengelical Free church. Interment was in the Grand View Memorial Park in Hopkins with the Enga Memorial chapel, 5600 Excelsior Boulevard, St. Louis Park, in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Poppenhagen, the former Esther Jorgenson, was formerly of this area. She received her nurses training in Thief River Falls and worked here until 1944, when she moved to St. Louis Park.

Survivors include three daughters: Mrs. Angeline Vikesland, Aberdeen, S.D.; Mrs. Lorna Borreson, Minneapolis; and Mrs. Ruth Noel, Yuma, Ariz.; two sons: Leland Poppenhagen, Bloomington, and Leonard, St. Louis Park; 11 grandchildren, and three brothers: Joseph Jorgenson, Fergus Falls; Reuben, Becker; and Joshua, San Diego, Calif.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Leonard; one son, Curtis; a brother and one sister.

Dear Friends,
The clergyman and the funeral director are partners in a service, basically religious, intended to alleviate the grief and suffering of the bereaved family. Between them, they have developed a religious, social, sentimental, yet realistic service that mankind appreciates and needs in its darkest hour.
Respectfully,

Children Exposed To Available Drugs

by Donald C. Hill
President
Minn. Education Ass'n.

Mike is a sixth grader — bright, energetic, active in music and sports and loves school.

His parents should feel good about his future. All things being equal, he ought to make it in the free enterprise system.

Unfortunately, there are some unexpected challenges this little kid has to face that we adults too often tend to ignore.

It is doubtful whether many parents fully comprehend the problems ahead. That's understandable, especially with our ever-changing environment.

But, Mike, and his classmates face a unique set of circumstances. What a shock to his parents to learn that a soccer teammate of Mike's has a source for purchasing marijuana. That means he is under pressure to deal with illegal activities that start in some foreign country and work their way into virtually every corner of the United States and, eventually, to Mike's classmates.

When kids learn the code of the underworld early — never be a stool pigeon, cops are the enemy — it's no wonder the police have problems tracking the sellers and users of drugs.

If Mike receives little or no positive reinforcement to stay clean and has enticing experiences through radio and TV — and add a little peer pressure — he could be one of the 61 per cent who try marijuana by their senior year in high school.

It is hard to believe, but the statistics show that whether in a small, rural community or a metropolitan city, the percentages of kids involved with drugs are virtually identical.

The irony of it all is that we as citizens — and our government — seem resigned to the situation.

Imagine a teacher trying to motivate a child who is under the influence of alcohol or drugs — or teaching about drug abuse to students 50 per cent of whom have tried or are using drugs.

We do not have to tolerate the problems created by drug abuse. We don't have to suffer the waste of human lives and billions of dollars in money and energy. We don't have to accept as inevitable teenage alcoholics or stoned students.

The least we can do is to help inform and guide our children before they get caught up in ridiculous decisions. The same advertising experts who sell our kids junk food ought to be able to at least alert them to the problems of drug abuse.

Along with all the sophisticated methods used to rehabilitate the ones who've slipped, we ought to tell the rest not to try.

We have constant reminders about products causing cancer. Why not a massive effort to tell kids that using drugs is a dumb move? If the school and a few parents are the only ones to carry the message and the rest of the child's life is filled with competition suggesting alcohol is O.K., it's not fair to the kids.

We have a crisis. It must be met by a massive effort to address all phases of drug abuse, preventive as well as rehabilitative, children and adults, education and protection.

It's everyone's problem, but leadership is needed to coordinate the campaign and massive funding is needed to bring it off.

The problem is statewide. The state must provide the leadership and the funding. Then all of us must help one another.

Paskewitz Earns Badge In Airborne

Pvt. Neil A. Paskewitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Paskewitz, Thief River Falls, recently received a course at the U.S. army infantry school, Fort Benning, Ga.

During the first week of training, students undergo a rigorous physical training program and receive instruction in the theory of parachuting. The second week they receive practical training by jumping from 34-foot and 250-foot towers. The final week includes five static-line parachute jumps.

Farm Price Index Drops 4 Per Cent

Index of prices received by Minnesota farmers decreased four per cent during the month ended October 15, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. Declines occurred in prices for meat animals, poultry, eggs and most crops. Dairy products showed a slight increase.

Price declines during the month for eggs, sheep, hogs, soybeans, and flaxseed offset slight gains in prices for barley, oats and wheat. Compared to a year ago, prices were up for all commodities surveyed except soybeans, hogs, sheep, lambs, turkeys and wool. Largest increases occurred for milk cows, calves, barley, dry beans and wheat. Barley prices reached their highest level since November of 1976 while soybean prices fell to their lowest level since February of 1978. Hog prices were at their lowest level since November of 1976.

The crops index declined five per cent to 208 during the month, still 11 per cent above the index a year earlier. This was the third straight decline in the crops index. The mid-October prices and the changes from last month are: All wheat, $3.87 per bushel, up 16 cents from the revised September estimate; corn, $2.16, down eight cents; oats, $1.24, up five cents; barley, $2.38, up six cents; soybeans, $5.85, down 62 cents; flaxseed, $5.73, down 69 cents; potatoes, averaged $2.86 per hundredweight for all grades, down seven cents. All hay was $40.50 per ton, up $1.

Mid-October price for all sunflowers was $9.37 per hundredweight. From now on a monthly all sunflower price will be included in the price reports.

The meat animal index at 228 was six per cent below last month and five per cent below a year ago. All hogs at $33.80 per hundredweight were down $3.30 from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $56.70, down $2.50. Calves were down 80 cents to $85. Sheep brought $21.30, down $2.40. Lambs were down $1.70 to $64.

The dairy index increased one per cent during the month to 251 or nine per cent above the index last year. The preliminary milk price at $11.80 per hundredweight was up 17 cents from the revised September price.

The Poultry and egg index at 187 was six per cent below last month and three per cent below a year ago. Turkeys were 38 cents per pound; liveweight, up one cent from a month earlier. Eggs brought 43 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-October, down 4½ cents from mid-September but one cent above a year earlier.

USDA Accepts Students For Soil Services

USDA soil conservation service will be taking applications for student trainees in soil conservation, soil sceince and range conservation.

Applications are open from now until December 15. College students pursuing a course of study in agriculture or related fields must establish their eligibility during this limited period or they will not receive consideration as student trainees during the summer of 1980.

Anyone interested should contact the local soil conservation service office for more information and pick up the necessary forms.

DRIVERS WERE FACED with slippery roads Thursday as a result of Thief River Falls' first snowfall and low temperatures. This accident occurred at 1:15 p.m. at 230 N. Kendall Thursday when a car owned by Edwin Boroos, Roseau, and driven by Valerie Grafstrom, Route 2, Solol, went out of control and struck the tree. Grafstrom complained of injuries to both knees, while Pam Engelstad, Thief River Falls, a passenger in the car, received injuries to her right hip. Both girls were checked at Northwestern hospital and released. Estimated damages to the car were $250.

Senator To Offer Bill On Tax Indexing

Senator Dave Durenberger recently took to the floor of the Senate to urge his colleagues to place a "windfall profits tax on government." He said American wage earners need immediate relief from the effects of inflation and called for quick passage of a bill he will introduce this week to index inflation out of the federal tax system.

Durenberger used the 50th anniversary of the stock market crash to announce his bill. Speaking on the floor of the Senate, he said indexing is the most important action to "blunt inflation's impact on American employers and wage earners."

Durenberger's bill would tie the federal tax brackets to the consumer price index so that when inflation drives up salaries, wage earners would not be bumped into higher tax brackets.

"Indexing is nothing more than a windfall profits tax on government," said Durenberger. "It proceeds from the philosophy that any windfall created by inflation should remain with the taxpayer as a buffer against rising prices, rather than passing it on to the federal government."

Under the present tax system, he said, workers who receive cost-of-living wage increases "are simply thrust into higher brackets, and often suffer actual losses in real dollar purchasing power. This fuels the desire for even higher increases in the next round of salary bargaining, but the result remains the same. Without indexing, the present tax system guarantees progressive erosion of real income as it spurs inflationary psychology."

Without indexing, the government is the real winner during periods of high inflation, Durenberger said. "For each one per cent rise in the consumer price index, federal tax receipts rise by approximately 1.4 per cent. This process cuts deeply into savings and investment and permits government to profit from annual tax increases without the necessity of congressional action—a paradox in this era of increasing demand for government accountability."

Two-Part Class On Managing Money Planned

"Stresses of Parenting — Management of Money" is the topic of a two-part parenting class being offered through the AVTI in Thief River Falls this Tuesday and November 13 from 7 to 9 p.m. Deborah Matero, Pennington county extension agent, will conduct the two classes in room 111 at the AVTI.

Areas of money management to be covered on Tuesday include developing a family spending plan which will help control household money, and family food budgeting.

November 13 class will focus on the use of consumer credit, laws that govern its use, and how to seek compensation if problems arise. Emphasis will be on women and credit, and the equal credit opportunity act.

Cost of the class is $1.00 per session.

USAF Offers Internship To Nursing Grads

Surgeon general of the air force has announced that recent nursing graduates can receive direct commissions and nursing internships in the air force. This program means that degreed nurses need not attend the normal 90 day officer training program.

According to recruiter, Pete Honaker, the internships will concentrate on clinical experiences usually occupied by more senior persons. This is possible because of air force needs in the health professions.

Nurses who have recently passed their state boards may be eligible for the internship. If selected, the nurses would be exempt from the training normally associated with an officer candidate. Directly commissioned nurses would receive a two-week orientation course before being assigned to one of several medical centers in the U.S.

Those persons interested in information about the program should contact TSgt. Honaker at (701) 0621 in Fargo, N.D.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Tuesday, November 6 is election day once again in Thief River Falls. But why bother voting, we're all only worth one vote a piece, what difference could that make? Maybe none, then again it just might.

In the last general election as a nation 59.2 per cent of the voting age public cast their ballots. Pennington county was comparable to the national average. Local elections on the average don't usually fare so well. Why? There are a number of reasons:

—Lack of exposure of elections themselves;

—No major publicity of candidates;

—Sometimes, but not always, no burning issues;

—Considered unimportant;

—General satisfaction with present office holders.

The 1977 city elections had a rather high voter turnout (2,211) which can be related right back to the reasons for not voting. There were two "burning issues", the fire hall bond and Sunday liquor. There was also one contested race as in this year's election. Those issues are important, legitimate reasons to vote, but vote every election whether there's an issue or not.

Those reasons listed above for not voting, of course, are not the only ones. There's probably about as many excuses as non-voters. If these reasons don't seem valid or you're not satisfied with the present situation—Vote!!

They don't use our ballots for shredded packing material—they're actually counted.

Combine inflation and the prime interest rate running rampant and the high cost of living with all of our own personal problems and things can get pretty frustrating, to say the least. Voting is a positive step we can all take to better America. After we step out of the booth we can say to ourselves we've done something constructive.

We've all heard the slogan "America—Love It or Leave It." Well, don't leave it, change it—for the better. It only takes a matter of minutes to vote on the way to or from work, the grocery store or what have you. For something that's so quick and painless, it's amazing more people don't. So why don't you do just that—vote Tuesday between the hours of 7 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Dorn, Martin Are Cited As Outstanding

Board of advisors for the outstanding young women of America awards program announced recently that Lynn L. Dorn, 1618 E. Gateway Circle, Fargo, N.D., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Dorn of Thief River Falls, and Jodi Anne Martin, 12510 Oak Knoll Road, 5H, Poway, CA, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Martin, also of Thief River Falls, have been selected for inclusion in the 1979 edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America."

Outstanding young women of America program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young women between 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, their professions and their communities.

These two women, along with approximately 15,000 others from across the United States, will be presented in the annual awards volume. In addition, they are now being considered for one of the 51 state awards to be presented to those women who have made the most noteworthy contributions in their individual states. From these 51 state winners, the ten outstanding young women of America will be chosen to be honored at the annual awards luncheon in Washington, D.C.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

by Will Bernard

"Single Families Only"

Real estate developers, opening a new neighborhood, often include deed restrictions limiting it to "single families only"—or words to that effect. The idea, of course, is to preserve property values.

If you move into such a neighborhood, you would ordinarily have a right to take legal action against violators. But for how long? For how many years are you protected?

As rule, unless there is a statutory time limit, the law takes a commonsense attitude. The restriction will be enforced as long as it is reasonable to do so—but no longer. Thus:

A homeowner in a restricted neighborhood heard that the people next door were planning to take in roomers. When he haled them into court, the neighbors said the restriction had become null and void because three home owners in the next block were already taking in roomers.

But the court decided the restriction was still binding. The court said if only three residents were in violation, then the vast majority of the neighborhood was still "single families only."

In another case the changes in the neighborhood were more drastic. The original block had acquired a gas station, a women's club, three stores, and an eight-story apartment building.

This time the court said the restrictions had been "so universally disregarded as to indicate an intention on the part of the immediate community no longer to regard it as an exclusive residential section."

Of course, the exact wording of the restriction may make all the difference. For instance, if it merely limits the area to "residential" use, that would not ordinarily exclude apartment houses. Most courts say an apartment house is just as "residential" as a single family dwelling.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

The Wisdom of Big Brother

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) seems to have forgotten about the Golden Rule. Last year one of its employees attended the Computer Security Institute's Fifth Annual Security Conference in New York City. Two letters, three invoices, eight calls and nine months later, the IRS still had not paid its registration fee.

Feeling frustrated, John C. O'Mara, Executive Director of the Institute, proposed an alternative. He suggested to the IRS that his firm at least be given an equivalent reduction in its federal income tax — to the tune of $491.67. This would cover the unpaid $430.00 fee, plus interest at 1.5 per cent a month. The IRS told Mr. O'Mara to forget it.

But Mr. O'Mara would not forget it. He went public, blasted the agency, and observed that out of more than 600 conferees, the IRS was the only organization that had failed to pay its fee. Three days later a check from the IRS arrived in the mail.

Some People Never Learn

The federal Office of Education program which channels aid to the nation's developing colleges boasts a remarkable 14-year record. After spending nearly a billion dollars, not one of the 800 schools receiving the federal aid has managed to graduate from the program.

The General Accounting Office, the independent congressional oversight agency, has concluded the program is so "beset with problems. . . (and so) largely unworkable" that Congress should consider abolishing it. Anybody remember the last time Congress abolished one of its programs?

Building For a Better Tomorrow

A Michigan community center, that cost U.S. taxpayers $279,000 to build, collapsed barely three years after it was completed. Conservative Digest reports it had never been painted, furnished or used. A woodsman discovered the collapsed pile of timbers in a rural part of the state where the building had apparently been crushed by heavy snows.

An Economic Development Administration spokesman, while expressing "regret" at the incident, was quick to see a silver lining. With smug satisfaction, he observed that the major goal of the project — providing more jobs — had been met. He did not say whether the government would provide still more jobs by assigning a new crew to clean up what remained of the first crew's work.

Federal Fatties Have More Fun

Puffy federal employees are flying first class at taxpayers' expense despite a White House-ordered crackdown.

These cushy trips are allowed whenever bureaucrats present notes from their doctors stating their derrieres are too big for the standard seats in commercial aircraft. These seats are 17-18 inches wide, while first class seats are 20-21 inches wide.

The next time politicians promise us they will cut the fat from the federal budget, let's be sure to remind them to start cutting from the bottoms up.

What's Wront With A Little Poison?

Washington has been plagued with a near-epidemic of hot air for years. Just recently this problem has dramatically worsened. It seems that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which supervises almost everything Americans eat, drink, breathe, or wear, has been spewing cancer-causing chemicals into the air from its own Washington laboratories.

FDA admits to discharging daily more than 30 pounds of toxic and carcinogenic chemicals into the air we breathe, but claims such amounts pose no threat to public health and safety. Congressman Elliott H. Levitas isn't so sure ans says: "I fine it singularly out of character for an agency such as the Food and Drug Administration to say there's nothing wrong with a little poison." For you information, FDA also maintains laboratories in Philadelphia, Chicago, Seattle and Denver.

Costly Cost Containment

Following editorial is from the Washington Report publication:

The outcome of a vote due in the House of Representatives, perhaps this week, could provide an important signal to the future policies the national leadership intends to use against inflation.

The basic question is whether the country will move in the direction of mandatory wage-price controls that will only intensify inflation and related economic problems, or whether private-sector mechanisms will be allowed to work as they were intended.

The House vote itself will come on what is known as hospital cost-containment legislation, which would establish a system of price controls on private hospitals failing to adhere to government-mandated charges for services.

As the nation's largest private buyer of health services, business is deeply and understandably concerned about the increase in health-care costs. Employers paid nearly $42 billion in group health-insurance premiums last year, and they want to be sure that the costs that determine the size of those premiums are not excessive.

Business most certainly is in favor of containing health-care costs, and so is the medical-service industry.

At the same time, business has little if any faith in the ability of government to contain the cost of anything.

Containment of health-care costs is a job for the business community itself, including the medical sector. The health industry's Voluntary Effort program is already having significant results.

The nation's leading business organization, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, has developed a health-action program that has become a major resource in corporate and other efforts to hold down costs of health care.

Such programs represent the only effective, long-term solutions.

Business analysts warn that enactment of the cost-containment legislation could be a forerunner of mandatory wage-price controls throughout the entire economy, that health costs are only the initial target because they are among the leading national concerns.

In addition, many observers believe that the legislation is simply an initial step toward the eventual establishment of a national health insurance program that will require billions in added taxes.

As the House prepares to vote, Americans should realize that the price of this cost-containment bill could be extremely high.

Pipeline Top Priority

Following editorial is from the Duluth News-Tribune:

Like other states, Minnesota has a smorgasbord of public concerns — from taxes to school aids to social services and highways.

But Minnesota is unlike other states in a critical area: We have extremely cold winters, which seem to be getting colder, and we are greatly dependent upon Canadian crude oil, which is now coming to us in an ever-diminishing volume.

Thus, Minnesota should have little trouble in determining its first order of business: finding new sources of crude oil. All other concerns are greatly dependent upon this one. Without adequate oil, we cannot heat schools, or provide buses to transport children to school. We need oil to heat hospitals, and to make gasoline to drive snowplows which keep our highways open. Virtually all public services are dependent upon oil.

Without lines at gasoline stations, we can fool ourselves into believing we have, and will have, all the oil we need. Not so. A warning was sounded Sunday by Brian Ettesvold, executive director of the Minnesota Service Stations Association.

Noting that Minnesota's supply of Canadian crude was cut back 23,000 barrels a day starting in October, Ettesvold said. "We do not at present have any way of counteracting that loss." He said that by spring, the net cutback to the state may be as large as 87,000 barrels a day.

"If this is not counteracted by new sources or a new pipeline, Minnesota is going to be in serious trouble," he continued. "We may be the hardest hit in the nation."

All of which indicates that the fate of Minnesota seems to hang greatly on the fate of the Northern Tier pipeline. Last week, two federal officials had encouraging things to say about that 1,491-mile pipeline which would run from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn., providing Alaskan crude oil to the northern tier states.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus endorsed Northern Tier over three other pipeline proposals, primarily on the basis that it would be contained totally within the United States. Vice President Walter Mondale, speaking in International Falls on Friday, said he expected President Carter to issue a decision on the Northern Tier pipeline within 60 days.

If approved, the Northern Tier pipeline would be under construction for two years, and would have a capacity of carrying 709,000 barrels a day.

Whatever other issues Minnesota has, they cannot be well served unless the state is given new access to crude oil, to replace the oil no longer coming from Canada. In Minnesota today, approval of this pipeline is an absolutely critical issue, and it should be the highest priority of state officials and our members of Congress.

Publication A Deterrent

Following editorial is from the Swift County Monitor:

It has been the policy of this paper in the past years to print the county court proceedings of both traffic court and criminal court - some people disagree with that policy.

But it will continue. In addition the Monitor-News will be running every felony charge brought by County Attorney John Riches in Swift County.

Punishment by fines and jail terms is considered a deterrent to crime. But unless punishments are published how will the public know how rigorous enforcement of penalties is? And how will the potential lawbreaker know that he is likely to get a stiff sentence if caught?

Knowing that their name will appear in the paper with the offense they have committed will be a deterent to some. If just a few people think twice about an action because of possible publication of their name our policy has been worthwhile.

In closing, once a name is registered with the court that name will appear in the paper. Exceptions can not be made and should not be.

New Commandments

Following is from the Wadena Pioneer-Journal:

Everyone knows The Ten Commandments were written on stone tablets and given to Moses. (Or Charlton Heston, depending upon whether you read the book or saw the movie.)

I'm strongly in favor of the Biblical version and urge you to adhere to them, but here are a few more suggestions (via a California publisher) to help you with your problems of everyday living:

(1) Thou shalt not grocery shop on an empty stomach, lest ye spend too much in your lust for food.

(2) Thou shalt not say to thy offspring: "Next time you do that you'll get punished" — clobber the kid on the spot. Chances are he deserves it and thou wilt feel better for it.

(3) Thou shalt not park in a handicapped space, for thou wilt feel like two cents when a handicapped person drives up and thou wilt also be minus several bucks if the cops spot thee.

(4) Thou shalt not joke about thy spouse's faults in front of them, lest thou end up a bloody pulp.

(5) Thou shalt not watch commercial television to excess, lest thou lose thy grip on reality and wind up with a romper room mentality.

(6) Thou shalt not cheat on thy income tax, lest thou be audited.

(7) Thou shalt not lie about thy age, for thy relatives can pop up at any time to tell the world the truth about thee.

(8) Thou shalt ignore and take pity on social climbers, as these wayward children have farther to fall than most.

(9) Thou shalt not begin any sentence with the words: "I promised I wouldn't tell this to anyone, but I know I can trust you," lest that person get wise to thee.

(10) Thou shalt not help thy child with his homework, lest thy ignorance be conspicuous.

Borrowed Nonsense:

While walking through a cemetery, the couple came upon a tombstone engraved: "Here lies an honest man and a walleye fisherman." "I wonder," the wife mused, "why they buried two men in one grave."

Voice on Phone: "Tommy Hogan will not be in school today; he's sick."

Teacher: "Who is speaking please?"

Voice: "This is my father speakin'."

SUNFLOWER HARVEST is far from completed throughout the Times area and the appearance of plants in this field south of the city after Wednesday night's snowfall made it appear that harvest will be a long time coming. Snow heavily covered the heads throughout the field.

Discuss Death With Children, Doctor Says

by Jeanne Hanson
U of M News Service

He was 21 and always in trouble. Time after time, he'd go to a bar, pick a fight with the biggest guy there, an lose. He claimed he didn't remember the deaths of both of his parents when he was nine. Finally, in anger, he told a psychiatrist that his father had shot his mother and then committed suicide while he watched, helpless. Because of his childhood guilt, the young man was punishing himself, over and over again, by losing bar fights.

Failure to discuss death rarely leaves such overwhelming aftereffects, but all children need to talk about death, according to George Williams, University of Minnesota psychiatrist and assistant dean of student affairs at the medical school. Williams has counseled many families during and after deaths, and wrote a segment on children and death for a national course by newspaper.

Most parents don't discuss death with their children, and this can cause the child unnecessary pain and even emotional damage from guilt fantasies, angers and fears, Williams said. Some people with long-term problems don't realize that these problems may be the result of unresolved grief, he said.

A child often feels responsible for a death in the family, perhaps after wishing someone would die, in a moment of normal anger. If the person does die, even long after the angry wish, the child's "magical thinking" can make him feel responsible. Children need to be told that everyone has ambivalent feelings, even toward the people they love deeply, Williams said.

Avoiding discussion of death can leave buried anger too, Williams added. Children feel that adults have control over their own deaths, the way they have control over bedtime and everything else. As a result, a child can feel intense anger at being deserted. As one little boys said, "My father never did this before."

Fears are also common, even in children without much direct experience with death. They see people retreating from a dying person, acting as though the person were already dead, even avoiding eye contact, Williams said.

Specific fears can be caused, unwittingly, by adults. One father explained a death to his son by saying, "He forgot to breathe." The family wondered later why the little boy was hyperventilating on the playground, Williams said. A more common association to avoid is between death and sleep, which can lead to sleep fears, he said.

Children need to be taught how to grieve, Williams added. One seven-year-old had promised God he would be the best little boy in the world and never cry about his grandfather's death. Then, he said, God would bring his grandfather back. He needed to be told that "God wants us to cry," Williams said.

Grief can lead to an amazing variety of physical symptoms, Williams said. Throat and chest pains are quite common, in both children and adults. "Dying of a broken heart" is not unheard of either. Williams has a childhood memory of a kind elderly neighbor couple who died, "appropriately," one day apart.

"THAT'S REALLY TEACHER... isn't it?? Many children in the kindergarten class at Mark Twain elementary school debated over this question when the good witch of the west appeared Wednesday morning. Disguised as the witch was Diane Marshall, kindergarten teacher, who revealed her true self after distributing witches brew to each child.

THIS CLOWN attracted attention Wednesday afternoon at the K-Mart store in Thief River Falls as it roamed throughout the aisles giving out candy and visiting with shoppers. Dressed in the costume was Dorothy Nelson, employee at the store.

Discussing death with children should begin with simple deaths: leaves, flowers, and worms on the sidewalk can be good examples. The death of a pet can be used to discuss death, or dignified treatment of a dead bird, he said. Funerals for pets help children learn about death, even if a child digs up the animal later to see what happened.

Children being to ask about death very early but often are made to feel that "nice children don't ask." Parents should answer questions honestly and directly but not overwhelm the child with information. What children often fear is not death itself but separation, Williams said. He recommends reassuring your children that most people who die are quite old and that you don't want to die because you don't want to leave the people you love.

"After all," Williams said, "children are not really different from adults. We just pretend to understand death."

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I have felt that I have always helped make up the silent majority within our society, especially within the Independent - Republican party.

Three things have moved me to slip out of my silent status, at least for a short time. I guess that I have always just enjoyed to read and listen to what national writers and commentators have had to say. I feel now, however, that segments of our society are screaming for the "silent majority" to speak.

Nationally speaking, educational institutions remind me of a ship that is sinking, and the instructors are like rats upon the slipping vessel.

The smart rats make their way up through the maze of steps, corridors, etc., to jump ship before it goes under. The stupid rats cannot handle the maze and live in a type of Davey Jones locker.

Some smart rats choose to be loyal and dedicated, or maybe they are a little bit weird; whatever, they stay and hope that maybe some nice big cat will save them and the institution.

What is the first thing that makes me write publicly? Three weeks ago a national editorial writer was reminding his readers that after President Carter signs into law the new department of education, shortly hereafter will come loss of local control by patrons of local school districts. I felt when I read his article — boys, would I enjoy bringing him to Minnesota and showing him how our school boards around the state have abjured (regret) their opportunity for continued local control.

I have many times felt over the past few years that boards of education and the Minnesota School Boards association have been pushing for this loss, either knowingly or unknowingly. Third party participation in contract negotiations are now commonplace. This is not local control.

My second reason is because of another writer, Ellen Goodman. She was reporting on the "brain-drain" among female education majors. A significant drop in the intelligence of women going into teaching his been discovered. The smart rats are not even getting on the ship anymore. Finally, they are finding better areas that will allow them to live under better conditions.

The third reason hits me closer to home. A friend of mine — and in my estimation, an outstanding instructor — is fast finding his way through and up the maize; in other words, another smart rat is poised on the ship's edge.

Certainly, money is one factor that I am concerned about. Several years ago I had breakfast with a former science student of mine. He had been out of high school for two years and had a R.R. job. He was laughing at the fact that he was making more money than I was. He was amazed that with nearly five years of university training (which does not necessarily make a good teacher, doctor, lawyer or farmer) and with about 13 years of experience I was making the money that I was. Making money and awarding contracts, however, is a relative thing. It would take a rare school board member who can totally detach his own money situation from the awarding of money contracts to others.

Friends of mine, whom I have coffee with, point out to me that I work for maybe only nine months or so. This is totally true and at the same time not totally true. My nights and weekends on school-related activities would significantly lengthen this time. But let's forget about the time element. Why? When you work closely and painfully with your students, as I feel I do, one's body and soul are crying for a rest after nine months. I sense that my students feel the same way after nine months.

Also, while teaching in four different school systems, I could relate to anyone about teachers who did not protect their minds from breakdown. Bankers demand payments all twelve months, not just nine months.

The laughter of my former science student did not bother me years ago; however, now I fear that my colleagues in Roseau, Oklee, Crookston (I dare not even mention or look at the city-metro schools or Grand Rapids or a host of others) will be laughing at this rat.

Two years ago my new contract gave me a yearly increase of about $280-$320. I almost cried, but instead I went home and talked to my son's dog and my horses.

Last week my son came home on leave from the air force. He has always enjoyed raisin bran cereal for breakfast. Naturally, I picked some up before he came home — $1.65 a box. I instantly felt sorry (my students will forgive me) for families with young children.

Please, school board members of District 564, allow me to keep some prestige. I don't ask for an increase as great as cost of living, but try to keep me within a range of my peer in other districts. Also, please don't use number games with percentages that are meaningless.

Lastly, as a taxpayer, I ask you to help do your part to keep local control in the hands of local people.

To The Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to your editorial comments on the Brainerd fluoridation issue.

I was privileged to be a member of the legislative committee of the Minnesota Dental association when we introduced and lobbied for the mandatory fluoridation bill which was ultimately passed by the 1967 legislature. It took a great deal of effort to get this measure passed, and we were proud that Minnesota was the first state in the nation to enact such a law. Since then many states have followed our example. Incidentally, I believe it is a tribute to the dedication of the dental profession that we have consistently promoted such preventive measures, even though they obviously run counter to our own economic self-interests.

The fluoridation of public water supplies is one of the safest, most effective, most thoroughly researched, best documented and most universally endorsed public health measures in history. The simple facts are that it's cheap, it's safe and it's extremely effective in reducing dental decay. I consider it a disgrace that a handful of misguided zealots in the city of Brainerd have been able to deny these benefits to the children of that community.

Quite apart from the medical-dental aspects of fluoridation are the legal implications of the case. The city fathers of Brainerd have been subverting the laws of our state for the past ten years, and I think that your applause for their efforts is, at best, misplaced. Do you advocate a society in which each citizen obeys only those laws which he or she happens to find appealing? If so, you are endorsing anarchy.

I think the only thing wrong with the fines that were imposed against the Brainerd officials last week is that they should have come about nine years earlier.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ed Nelson

Winterization A Part Of Energy Emergency Plan

Weatherization of homes, one facet of Governor Al Quie's energy emergency program, proceeded at a record pace in the three-month period ending Sept. 30, 1979.

Rolf Middleton, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, said 1,566 homes of low income persons were winterized during that period, bringing to 7,346 the number completed since the program began in January, 1978. During the same three months last year, 1,217 homes were completed.

Middleton said winterizing a house properly should result in a 17 per cent yearly reduction in the use of fuel.

"This saving makes weatherization a good bargain when you consider that only $2,500,000 has been allocated to the program so far," Middleton said.

More than 11 million dollars currently is available for the program and another federal allocation of $9,500,000 is expected before the first of the year. When all the funds are used, another 16,500 homes will have been weatherized under an expanded and accelerated program, Middleton said.

Since the federal funds, provided by the Department of Energy, can be spent only for supervision and weatherization materials, the state has allocated $3 million which can be used to help supply labor. Other labor is required through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) prime sponsors. The federal program was designed to utilize CETA labor.

Program is carried out on the local level by the state's 26 Community Action Agencies (CAP) and 11 American Indian reservations. The CAP agency selects the homes to be weatherized and arranges with the CETA prime sponsors for the installation crews. Minnesota Department of Economic Security monitors and evaluates the program statewide and administers the state and federal funding.

Fergus Falls Hospital Group Seeks Support

Through the generosity of many area organizations and individuals, the Christmas season was brightened last year for 591 residents of the Fergus Falls state hospital.

The hospital volunteer council is again in need of support for its annual Christmas gift appeal, "Operation Merry Christmas — 1979". Many donors prefer to send a monetary contribution, allowing the volunteer council to buy gifts which would be most appropriate for each hospital resident. Monetary donations and gifts should be mailed by December 10 to the Fergus Falls State Hospital Volunteer Council; Box 157, Fergus Falls, MN 56537.

During 1978 the state hospital provided residential care, treatment and educational services for 2,062 handicapped persons from west central and northwestern Minnesota. The hospital's drug dependency rehabilitation center provided services for 1,204 persons and the psychiatric center served 539 persons. The state regional residential center's programs for the mentally retarded served 319 persons.

Home Start Workshop For Parents Slated

An Inter-County home start workshop has been planned with Dr. Kate and Dr. Eugene Bradfield as the featured speakers Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Oklee municipal auditorium in Oklee. Public is welcome to attend.

The Bradfields will discuss with parents how death, divorce and other stressful family situations may affect children. Information on how children perceive such a family crisis as well as practical suggestions as to how parents may help children through such situations will be provided.

The Truth About Decontrol

One of the most important issues we are facing today is energy, primarily fuel oil and gasoline, and their availability. Our previous policies of placing price controls on these fuels, which began in 1971, have reduced domestic exploration and production, and caused domestic oil companies to develop oil in foreign countries where it was cheaper. As domestic demands for petroleum increased, imports have also increased to the extent that we are now importing 50 per cent of the nation's fuel requirements. Increased domestic demands and foreign imports led to the creation of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel because it was evident to Middle Eastern oil producing countries that they could raise exporting prices and force the U.S. to pay inflated prices. U.S. policies have rewarded companies that continued to buy oil at prices in excess of domestic prices rather than penalize them.

In 1972, the U.S. paid some $3 billion for imported oil, while in 1979 the price tag will total at least $60 billion. The cost of imported oil has weakened the dollar and skyrocketed inflation to more than 13 per cent. While there are those who talk rhetorically about retaining price controls on petroleum, we only have to look back to 1971 when the price of a gallon of gasoline was 36.4 cents per gallon, to determine that controls are not the answer. Today, under price controls gasoline is selling for almost $1 per gallon, and overall prices have risen more than 50 per cent in the last nine months. I would like to stress that all of these increases took place under price controls.

Since 1973, domestic energy production has decreased from 9 million barrels per day to 7.2 million barrels, a drop of 20 per cent. Price controls have placed an artificial price on fuel oil and gas which has encouraged excessive and wasteful consumption.

During the summer we experienced gas lines in many portions of the country because of our allocation system, and it is rumored we could experience more shortages in Minnesota within a few months. It is the opinion of filling station operators, bulk oil dealers, and other people related to the fuel industry that government allocation programs are ineffective and should be changed. I recently joined a majority of the House and voted to end price controls on gasoline and eliminate the tovernment from the allocation process.

Some people in the Seventh District have inferred that, because political action committees sponsored by oil company workers contributed $3,000 to my campaign, I was selling out to the whims of the oil companies and not representing my constituents. This is untrue and can be refuted by my support of limiting excess profits received by large oil companies. In the House, we passed a strong windfall profits tax, which I voted for, that will yield $273.4 billion over a 10 year period from oil companies. We have heard a great deal recently about excessive profits, but it is interesting to note the bulk of these profits have occurred on foreign investments rather than domestic.

I do not favor higher fuel oil and gasoline prices, but we must reduce our dependence on foreign oil supplies. The OPEC countries, with their pricing policies, are holding us hostage to their desires to increase oil prices. They are setting our economic policies through higher inflation rates caused by price increases and they could very well set our foreign policy, if they so choose.

Interestingly enough, my belief in decontrolling oil and gasoline prices, as a necessity in developing a responsible energy policy, is supported by the Minneapolis Tribune, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, Newsweek Magazine, the League of Women Voters and many others.

Grain Market Net Earnings Triple In '79

Grain terminal association (GTA) announced recently that net earnings for the upper midwest grain marketing and processing cooperative tripled those of the previous year.

B.J. Malusky, GTA president and general manager, reported to 3,500 delegates and patron-owners attending the co-op's 42nd annual meeting at the Minneapolis auditorium, that after-tax earnings for the fiscal year ended May 31 were $21.5 million, the third highest in GTA history. Earnings total compares with $7.4 million for fiscal 1978 and the all-time high of $42.5 million reached in the grain marketing boom year, 1974.

Increased earnings resulted from the larger volume of grain handled by GTA this year, according to Malusky. At the close of fiscal year 1978-79 GTA had handled a record 364 million bushels of grain and oilseeds. Malusky told the crowd this immense volume was handled despite difficult transportation problems. GTA and its local members also faced rising costs, lower margins per bushel, higher administrative expenses and higher interest costs on large inventories.

GTA marketed grain for 733 local co-op elevators, a nine per cent increase over the previous year. Patrons marketing with these co-ops will receive $5.5 million in cash and the balance of their patronage earnings in GTA capital certificates. Other cash playments and capital retirements for the year brought total cash payments to $7.9 million.

GTA acts as a commission firm selling grain to other buyers or to its own processing plants. It operates plants for malting barley, million durum wheat, and oilseed processing.

Malusky also said through the recent addition of a food division, GTA farmer-owners gained increased voice in the marketing of their products. In reporting on other additions and improvements, Malusky pointed out GTA is improving its information services to member elevators and farmers and making every effort to help solve farmers' transportation problems. At the close of the year, GTA members had total equity of more than $155 million and assets of almost $485 million.

March of Dimes Mothers March Gets Underway

March of Dimes mothers march pass-the-envelope campaign, both city and rural, has not started in this area. Contributions go toward programs of research, medical service and education. The March of Dimes does not participate in United Way campaigns.

In this area the mothers march helps sponsor many medical and educational programs. Birth defects have impact on the lives of some 15 million Americans. During the drive the goal is to reach people with health education about prevention of birth defects.

This year community attention is directed to the acute national problem of adolescent pregnancy. The high incidence of teenage pregnancies has long-term repercussions for all of society. Babies born to mothers under 17 have a higher-than-average risk of mental retardation, physical malformations and early death. The very young mother places her own health in danger and young parents often face an uncertain educational and economic future.

This year's kits will contain survey froms requesting options on the severity of the problem locally. No one will be identified by name in the survey. This chapter of the March of Dimes is interested in planning new, community-based educational and health services to prevent newborn damage and death.

This year's kits will be returned to local chapter banks in the chapter area for deposit and processing. It is hoped that the kits will move swiftly through their assigned area. As usual, contributions may be mailed directly in to the bank in the enclosed envelope or may be left in the kit, which will go to the bank as it completes its route.

RR Retiree Earning Limits Liberalized

Railroad retirement annuitants subject to earnings restrictions are allowed higher earnings in 1980. The 1979-exempt earnings amount of $4,500 is raised, allowing annuitants age 65-72 to earn up to $5,000 in 1980 without any reduction in benefits because of work.

Annuitants under age 65 can earn up to $3,720 in 1980 before their annuities are subject to reduction. The reduction is $1 for every $2 earned over the exempt amount. However, if 1980 is the first year benefits are payable, reductions apply only to months in which earnings are more than $417 for 65-year-old beneficiaries and $310 for those under 65. The special earnings restrictions which apply to disability annuitants are not changed.

These earnings limitations apply to almost all survivor annuitants. They also apply to some retired employees and their spouses, generally recent retirees and those who are also qualified for social security benefits. However, for retired employees and spouses, only certain annuity portions are subject to reduction so the board notifies those affected, on an individual basis, as to how earnings will affect their annuities. These earnings limitations do not apply to any annuitants age 72 or older.

Regardless of earnings, no railroad retirement annuity is payable for any month in which an annuitant works for a railroad, nor are railroad retirement annuities payable to retired employees and their spouses for any month they work for their last preretirement nonrailroad employer.

STEVE OLSON, son of Betty Olson of Thief River Falls and Harlan Olson of Newfolden, enlisted in the U.S. army in July of 1979 for a four-year term and recently completed basic training and advanced individual training (AIT) for being a mechanic at Fort Dix, N.J. From there he will be stationed in Germany and be serving two years overseas. While in basic he earned three awards for high man in soldier stakes, with a score of 195 out of a possible 200 points. He earned a marksman's badge for firing the M16 rifle and an expert badge for throwing hand grenades.

Dr. Burrell Passes Exam As Diplomate

Dr. James E. Burrell of Sparta, Wis., and a native of Thief River Falls, has been named a diplomat of the American board of family practice (ABFP) as a result of passing a certification examination offered by the ABFP. He is now certified in the medical specialty of family practice.

To qualify for the examination a physician must have successfully completed three years of residency training in family practice. There are some 375 such training programs in teaching hospitals and university medical centers across the United States.

Name Rhoades Director Of MGRI Board

Charles Rhoades, president of the Minnesota Wheat Growers council, was named to the board of directors of Minnesota Good Roads, Inc. (MGRI) at the organization's annual meeting at Brooklyn Park.

More than 150 MGRI members attended the annual meeting, which began with a panel debate centering around the proposed alternatives for funding Minnesota's road system. Participating in the panel were: State Senators Otto Bang, Edina and Robert J. Schmitz, Jordan and Representatives Gerald C. Knickerbocker, Minnetonka and Harry Sieben, Hastings.

Featured speakers at the noon luncheon were Richard Braun, commissioner of transportation; Senator Clarence Purfeerst, chairman of the Senate transportation committee; and Representative Stan Fudro, chairman of the House transportation committee.

"With the recent deferral of 61 highway projects, it's likely that some kind of additional funding will emerge from the legislature," Rhoades said.

Being considered as additional sources of revenue for roads are an increase in the gasoline tax and the transfer of sales tax on cars and trucks into the Minnesota highway users fund.

Minnesota Good Roads is an association of 1,500 concerned citizens working together to insure adequate funding to maintain the quality of Minnesota's roads.

TRF Defends Sportsmanship Title

A Region 8AA winner in the first-ever Minnesota State High School League sportsmanship award contest during the 1978-79 winter sports season, Lincoln high school will once again be involved in the MSHSL competition in 1970-80, it was announced by Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith.

"Lincoln high school is proud to announce that this year they are again taking part in the statewide high school sportsmanship contest and that we are even more determined then ever to successfully defend last year's Region 8AA championship," said Smith. "We are asking all good fans of Prowler sports programs to again join our student body in extending to all visitors our traditional and sincere Thief River Falls welcome."

The honor won last year by Thief River Falls should not be taken lightly. As time passes and the sportsmanship award becomes an ingrained feature of the Minnesota high school sports scene, the honor and prestige of winning the prize will be overshadowed only by an actual state championship. And even then the sportsmanship award will run a close second, as evidenced by a Duluth Central spokesman following the Trojans' 1979 state basketball tournament: "Winning a state basketball championship in itself is one of the most rewarding and satisfying events that can happen to any school or community. But to have it followed by the awarding of the Class AA tournament sportsmanship trophy was unprecedented. We are equally as proud of this honor, knowing that it involved many other segments of our school and community."

And when Glencoe was given the trophy, a spokesman said, "Receiving the sportsmanship award at the state Class A boys basketball tournament was an honor and thrill for all the people of our community. A special kind of pride was evident among players, cheerleaders, band members, parents, teachers and fans due to the meaning of the award and also due to the fact that everyone, in some manner, contributed to the award. Those intangible qualities of respect, courtesy and fair play have long been associated with high school athletics in Minnesota. To be recognized for those qualities produces a warm sense of well-being."

Approximately 137 schools elected to participate in the first year of the sportsmanship award program. Admittedly it was a small percentage of the 523 MSHSL members, but it was a beginning. Look for the number of participants to increase significantly this winter.

Board of directors of the MSHSL provide sportsmanship awards on a Class A district and Class AA region level, and present special sportsmanship awards for the schools participating in the state volleyball, basketball and hockey tournaments.

Fundamentals of sportsmanship for players, coaches, faculty, cheerleaders, students and adult fans, as outlined in the MSHSL publication, include (1) showing respect for the opponent at all times; (2) showing respect for the officials; (3) knowing, understanding and appreciating the rules of the contest; (4) maintaining self control at all times; (5) and recognizing and appreciating skill in performance regardless of affiliation.

In 1978-79, Class AA sportsmanship award winners were Red Wing, 1AA; St. Peter, 2AA; Park-Cottage Grove, 3AA; Coon Rapids, 4AA; Brooklyn Center, 5AA; Hopkins Lindbergh, 6AA; Cambridge, 7AA; and Thief River Falls, 8AA.

Class A district winners last year included Spring Grove, 1A; Hayfield, 2A; Byron, 3A; Zumbrota, 4A; Blue Earth, 5A; Southwest Christian, 8A; Tracy, 9A; Springfield, 10A; Clarkfield, 11A; Bethlehem Academy and Montgomery (tie), 13A; St. Agnes, 15A; Mayer Lutheran, 16A; Fergus Falls Hillcrest Academy, 23A; New York Mills, 24A; Carlton, 26A; Ely, 27A; Floodwood, 28A; and Nevis, 29A. Districts 30, 31 and 32 in northern Minnesota were among 13 districts without a participant or a winner.

The 1979 state tournament sportsmanship award winners were Glencoe, Class A boys basketball; Duluth Central, Class AA boys basketball; New York Mills, Class A girls basketball; Coon Rapids, Class AA girls basketball; and Roseau, hockey.

Lakers Play Japanese Olympic Team Here

Thief River Falls' Tom Goddard, along with Tim McKinnon, were named assistant captains of the 1979-80 Warroad Lakers hockey team that started play Sunday at Morden, Man.

Stripped of 12 veterans from last year's team, the Lakers enter their 33rd season of senior amateur hockey with lots of new faces, including Scott Sabo of Thief River Falls, Mike Stone, Punky Motteberg, Roger Olimb, Dave Noah and Ron Storey — all former Section 8 high school performers.

The Lakers will be appearing in the Thief River Falls sports arena Fri., Feb. 8, against the Japanese Olympic team who will be in their final tune-up before leaving for Lake Placid, N.Y. and the Winter Olympics.

Northmen End 1979 Season By Upsetting Rival Trojans 27-7

In preparing for a 1979 season-ending MJCAA Northern division game at Crookston Saturday afternoon, Northland community college football coach Irv Smith said the key would be the ability of the Northmen to stop the Trojans' option offense. Smith, after making a few defensive adjustments, figured it could be done.

And it was. Northland surrendered less than 100 yards to the option and surprised Crookston 27-7 to accomplish a handfull of firsts for the Northmen who beat the Trojans for the first time in four meetings; scored their first points against the Trojans after being out-scored 98-0 in three previous meetings; and won three games for the first time in the school's four-year football history.

"I told you we had a defense to stop the option," boasted Smith who put a linebacker on the pitch back instead of the customary defensive back. "With a five-man line you have to defense the option out of the secondary with a cornerback or a safety. But we were defending it with our linebackers," he said.

Northland's success in stopping the option forced the Trojans, directed by former Thief River Falls high school coach Jim Sims, an option addict, into the I-formation.

Crookston still accumulated 303 yards on offense, but over 100 of the rushing yards came out of the I and the Trojans passed for 116 yards. And the yardage did little good since Crookston fumbled seven times, losing six, and threw two interceptions.

"They moved the ball between the 20's, but our defense really got tough when they got close," explained Smith. "Our defense played extremely well when the pressure was on."

First of those Crookston turnovers led to the game's first score when the Trojans fumbled away a punt snap at their own three-yard line. Mike Cowart scored from the one and Jeff Gobell added the extra point kick.

Crookston answered before the first quarter expired, driving 74 yards for a 10-yard Mike Sandt touchdown run. John Livingston's kick tied it at 7-7.

Northland led 13-7 at halftime by capping a 70-yard second quarter drive with a four-yard Tony Smith to Dan Levenhagen touchdown pass.

Another Crookston fumble was turned directly into Northland points in the third quarter when Duane Kjono picked up a loose ball and returned it 31 yards for a touchdown.

It was the fourth Northland touchdown, though, that really put the game away. A jarring tackle by linebacker Albert Padron forced a Crookston fumble at the Northland five-yard line, and three plays later Cowart broke loose on a 90-yard touchdown run.

"That was the game-breaker," Smith said of the Padron-Cowart combination. "It was only 20-7 with about 12 minutes left, and if they score we have a real battle on our hands. Instead, we forced the turnover, scored and put the game out of reach."

"We really out-played them," said Smith who would not admit that it was an upset of any proportion, even though Crookston sat in second place in the eight-team Northern Division standings with a 5-2 record going into the game. "It was a moderate upset," is as far as Smith would go. "I wouldn't consider it a big upset."

Northland racked up 414 yards against a highly respected Crookston defense, with Cowart rushing for 152 yards on 17 carries and Tony Smith adding 114 yards on just nine carries. "We really moved the ball well all day," noted Irv Smith.

Smith gave special credit to Northland's five sophomores who were playing their final game: Joe Ranum, Jon Sipe, Brian Thomas, Morice Hendricks and Chris Kneen. Ranum, a linebacker, and Thomas, a defensive back, "played their best games ever," according to Smith.

"We were happy to win, naturally," said Smith. "We finally put it together. We played really inspired football, led by our sophomores who all played well for us. We played with great intensity."

Northland ended the season with a 3-6 record, not great by any standard, but good enough to rank as the best record in school history. "We're pleased with the progress of our football program," mentioned Smith. "We are building for the future. When you go from 1-7 to 3-5 in the conference and have 40 freshmen, the future looks bright."

AT TOP FORM during Tuesday's Thief River Falls-Detroit Lakes girls high school swimming meet, the Prowlers' Brenda Lund was an easy winner in the diving competition with 238.40 points. Lund, the top diver in Section 3, led a 1-2-3 Thief River Falls sweep in the event as Lisa Desrocher took second with 188.15 points and Lori Swanson finished third with 174.25. Thief River Falls beat Detroit Lakes 105-65. The Prowlers close out their 1979 home season schedule Thursday with a 5 p.m. dual meet encounter with Brainerd in the Franklin middle school pool.

New Assistant Commissioner Named By DNR

Appointment of a new assistant commissioner for the Department of Natural Resources was announced by DNR commissioner Joseph Alexander.

Named to the post was Eugene Gere, 42, who has been employed by the department since 1963 in various engineering and administrative positions.

Effective Oct. 26, he will replace current assistant commissioner Archie Chelseth, who is resigning from the department to accept a position as public affairs manager with Potlatch Corporation of Cloquet.

In his new role, Gere will supervise the activities of several DNR bureaus including engineering, personnel, fiscal services, land, field services, licensing, management systems and office services. He is also responsible for supervision of the DNR's six regional administrators.

Presently the administrator of the DNR's bureau of engineering, Gere has also served as director of the division of waters, soils and minerals.

Alexander said Gere was responsible for developing several important environmental programs for Minnesota including flood plain management, mineland reclamation and shoreland management.

Gere is a registered professional engineer and has a civil engineering degree from Iowa state university with additional studies in public administration and personnel management.

He is married, has three children.

North Half Region 8AA

Prowlers Win In Volleyball

There were no surprises Saturday as the first round of the 1979 North Half Region 8AA volleyball tournament was completed at Moorhead high school.

The expected winners advanced as Thief River Falls ousted Bemidji 2-1, East Grand Forks eliminated Fergus Falls 2-0, Crookston sidelined Park Rapids 2-1 and Moorhead knocked out Detroit Lakes 2-0.

Semifinals and finals will be held Thursday at Moorhead. In the semifinals, Thief River Falls will meet East Grand Forks at 5 p.m. and Crookston challenges pre-tournament favorite Moorhead at 6:30. The winners meet in the 8 p.m. Championship match.

If things go according to form, it'll be the Prowlers and Spuds playing for the title and the right to host South Half champion St. Cloud Tech in the Region 8AA championship match Saturday afternoon at 2.

But Thief River Falls got off to a shaky start Saturday against first-year volleyball school Bemidji when the Lumberjills surprised the Prowlers with an 18-6 first game win. Thief River Falls regrouped and won the next two games 18-8, 18-5.

"That first game was terrible," admitted Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss. "We just weren't ready. We didn't play the way I would have liked to."

Serving was a first game Thief River Falls problem as the Prowlers recorded a subpar serving percentage of 58 per cent, a figure that improved to 89 per cent in the second game and finally 95 per cent the third time around.

Stauss if confident Thief River Falls will reach the finals. "East Grand Forks just doesn't have the talent we have," she said matter-of-factly, "but the thing we have to watch out for is their enthusiasm."

The Thief River Falls coach isn't as confident when talking about a championship match encounter against the Spuds, considered by many a state championship contender.

"The kids are realistic. We know the chances are pretty slim that we can beat Moorhead," admitted Stauss. "But we have never played an offensive game against Moorhead. We want to show them that we can play good volleyball."

Stauss and the Prowlers watched the Spuds beat the Lakers Saturday. They were impressive, but not awed by the Moorhead strength. "They're a well-oiled machine on offense. They don't make many mistakes," pointed out Stauss. "But our kids learned a lot about them by watching them play. I don't think we'll face a psychological problem if we play them this time. It's just a matter of being ready and not being afraid."

The victory over Bemidji improved Thief River Falls' overall record to 10-7.

Fish, Wildlife Aid To States Is $89 Million

Over $89 million in federal aid funds for sport fish and wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs has been apportioned to all of the 50 states and the governments of Puerto Rico, Guam, Virgin Islands and American Somoa for use after October 1, Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus announced.

"The $89.7 million is the first of two installments that will be distributed to the states this year from excise taxes collected in fiscal year 1979. These funds, up nearly $20 million from last year, will be used by the states to finance their fish and wildlife programs during the first half of fiscal year 1980," Andrus said.

Second installment will be distributed in December after the tally of FY 1979 tax receipts is completed by the Treasury Department. Last fiscal year a total of $109.3 million in federal aid funds was distributed in two installments to state governments.

Of the distribution announced recently, $60 million was distributed according to a formula based on hunting license holders and the area of each state for wildlife projects. Another $8.2 million was distributed, on the basis of state population, for hunter safety programs. Under the federal aid to fish restoration program, $20.6 million was distributed on a formula based on the number of sport fishing license holders and the area of each state.

Funds for fish restoration programs come from a 10 per cent excise tax on fishing rods, reels, creels, and artificial baits, lures and flies. Funds for wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs come from an 11 per cent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition, a 10 per cent excise tax on pistols and revolvers and an 11 per cent tax on certain archery equipment.

Preliminary apportionment for federal aid in fish restoration for fiscal year 1980:

Alabama $370,066; Alaska $1,030,000; Arizona $454,379; Arkansas $390,873; California $1,030,000; Colorado $507,231; Connecticut $206,000; Delaware $206,000; Florida $471,718; Georgia $404,116; Hawaii $206,000; Idaho $354,143; Illinois $441,145; Indiana $367,548; Iowa $328,173;

Grid Playoffs Feature Three Local Teams

Area football teams Crookston, Mahnomen and McIntosh-Winger all advanced into the semifinals with weekend wins in the 1979 Minnesota state high school football playoffs.

Northwest Athletic Conference champion Crookston was a 24-12 opening round Class A playoff winner over Park Rapids Saturday afternoon on the Panthers' field. The Pirates will move into semifinal play Friday against Rochester Lourdes, a 7:30 p.m. game at Rochester.

Pine-to-Prairie Conference champion Mahnomen was an impressive 35-0 Class B quarterfinal round playoff winner over Blackduck Saturday night at Mahnomen. The Indians' semifinal opponent will be Holdingford Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Little Falls.

North Tri County Conference champion McIntosh-Winger was a 16-12 winner over Lake Park Friday night in the nine-man quarterfinals at Lake Park. The Scots will face Toivola-Meadowlands in Friday's 7:30 p.m. semifinals at Walker.

Pirates 24-12 Playoff Winners Over Panthers

by Sam Moscatelli,
NWAC Publicist

Northwest Athletic Conference football champions Crookston advanced to the semifinal round of the Minnesota state Class A playoffs with a 24-12 win over Mid-State representative Park Rapids at Park Rapids Saturday.

The Pirates, now 7-3, met the Panthers for the second time this season. In the first game Crookston emerged a 14-7 winner. Park Rapids finished the season at 6-5 after beating Seaway champ Two Harbors 23-22 in a mid-week Class A qualifying game.

Veteran coach Les Drechsel of Crookston picked up his 143rd career win and 55th at Crookston in his 23rd year as a head coach. Andy McCarty of Park Rapids, in his 20th year as a mentor saw his career record even out at 97-79-1 and 52-40-1 at Park Rapids.

In advancing to the semifinals, Crookston faces another long road trip in 1979 which has seen the Pirates touring the state as far south as St. Peter in a 20-15 loss and as far east as Cloquet where the Pirates lost 15-0. The only other Pirate loss was an early season 8-7 loss to Grand Forks Central. The Pirates swept through their conference opponents for a perfect 4-0 season.

Rochester Lourdes (9-2) provides the opponent for Crookston at Rochester on Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Eagles, representing the Don Bosco Conference, defeated Princeton in the qualifying round 12-8 and then Saturday evening thumped Brooklyn Center 40-15 to move into the semis. In earlier games played this week, Top AP ranked Hutchinson fell to Montevideo 4-3 and second ranked St. Peter was shut out by Apple Valley 17-0. Paynesville (10-0) upended Montevideo to gain the other semi-final berth against Apple Valley (9-1) Friday. The finals will be played Nov. 16 or 17 at a site still to be determined by the semi outcomes.

The Saturday afternoon game at Park Rapids was played on a field devoid of snow in comparison to the near five inches on the ground at Crookston. Park Rapids' multiple-offense, based on a strong insided counter and reverse strategy which gave Crookston problems in their first encounter, again provided difficulties in the early going for the Pirates.

On the opening kick-off, Jeff Quinn, a 5-9, 16-sophomore, took the ball on the Park Rapids 14 and raced 42 yards up field to the Pirate 44 yard line. The Panthers methodically shredded Crookston's defense with their inside attack and wide pitches to draw first blood. Senior runningback Dave Schmitz rushed five straight times for two first downs and 38 yards rushing before junior fullback Jay Pike broke up the middle from six yards out to put Park Rapids ahead 6-0. Schmitz, workhorse runningback for the Panthers, eventually ended up with 112 yards in 22 carries for the afternoon to lead all rushers in the game. The all important PAT kick failed giving Park Rapids their only lead at 6-0 just minutes into the game.

After the kickoff, Crookston's offense failed to get going. A clipping penalty negated the 13-yard runback by John Paul to give Crookston poor field position at their own 14 yard line. Senior quarterback Tim Knotek picked up a first down for Crookston but the Pirates were forced to punt the ball away from their own 36. Junior Brian Bachmeier boomed the punt 38 yards downfield but Quinn returned to the Park Rapids 42 yard line with 5:00 to go in the first quarter.

At this point in the game, the big question was if the Pirates could adjust their defense to contain the Park Rapids attack. Usually relying on a 4-4 stacked line defense, Drechsel and company switched into a 5-3 alignment to accommodate the Panther attack. The change proved to be great for the Pirates but a disaster for Park Rapids.

As the second period opened it was now time for Crookston to unlimber its offense. The Junior backfield of Steve Johnson, Brent Weiss and Mark Berg complemented senior Tim Knotok to drive downfield 76 yards in nine plays capped by Steve Johnson's six-yard run to knot the game at 6-6. Weiss and Johnson, who would finish the game with 92 and 91 yards rushing on 16 and 11 rushes respectively, for a total of 183 yards between them, worked well with Berg's short bursts and Knotek's wide option runs. The TD for Johnson, who tied Bemidji's Dale Leonard with 30 points in conference play, was his seventh of the year. Bob Clauson kicked his 12th extra point of 1979 to put Crookston ahead 7-6.

After an excellent half-time show provided by the Park Rapids high school band, Park Rapids kicked off. Crookston moved to a first down but Park Rapids showed they could also play tough defense forcing a Pirate short punt. Crookston got the ball back on a punt four plays later as Weiss returned 18 yards to the Pirate 46. Five plays later, Johnson rolled to his right on the Panther 31 yard line and swept to the five before being stopped. Brent Weiss then went up the gut for his third touchdown of the year. Park Rapids kept the game in reach at 13-6 by blocking the kick.

Crookston's defense again rose to the occasion, stopping the Panther attack cold in three plays. With a fourth and seven at their own 42, Panther punter Scott Johnson had his punt blocked by Tom Johannson. The ball caromed to the Park Rapids 20 yard line where the Pirates took over. Knotek scored five plays later from the one to put Crookston ahead 19-6 early in the fourth quarter. Weiss added a two-point conversion after Park Rapids was guilty of encroachment to widen the lead to 21-6.

Another short Crookston kickoff gave Park Rapids the ball at the 47. The Panthers offense came to life on the running of Schmitz and Quinn to score in 10 plays. Schmitz bulled over from the eight on a power play to narrow the lead to 21-12.

Crookston, sensing the possibility of a Panther comeback but now working with the ball and the clock on their side, picked up three straight first downs in six plays to move from their own 31 to the Park Rapids 25 on Johnson's and Weiss power running. Park Rapids stiffened and held forcing a fourth and four from the Park Rapids 19 for Crookston.

Instead of electing to go for the first down, the booming leg of Clauson was then called upon to attempt a field goal. The 5-11, 216-pound senior calmly booted a 36-yard field goal, his first of the year to complete the scoring at 24-12.

79-80 Sno Pro Season Opens In Grand Forks

Early winter weekend of December 1 and 2 has been picked for the opening race on the international Sno Pro snowmobile racing schedule. It will again be held at the Grand Forks speedway.

A new race on the schedule last winter, the first Super Seer Cup weekend proved to be an exciting addition to snowmobile racing for the Master's Circuit, the professional driver (Sno Pro), and certainly the race fans. The weekend's action was climaxed by Steve Thorson of the Scorpion Squadron winning the Super Seer Cup in a close 15 lap final.

This year, stock and super modified racing will be on tap for Saturday, with Sno Pro providing the action on Sunday for an expected capacity crowd. The Grand Forks speedway is an ideal setting for the season's opening race. The tight one quarter mile banked oval provides super viewing of an exciting race arena. Excellent accomodations and transportation advantages have made the Super Seer Cup event in Grand Forks a big favorite after just one year.

The race is the first of a three race series which have an overall sponsorship by LeMans, manufacturers and distributers of petroleum based lubricants and synthetics. Independent Sno Pro drivers from the "Formula" class will be earning points towards the series Grand Prize — a $13,500 Chevy Blazer and Meyer plow, and qualifying for the Kawasaki Tournament of Champions.

Other two races of the series are the Dayco Holiday Spectacular in Alexandria and the Kawasaki Tournament of Champions on Owatonna. The total in cash, prizes and contingencies at these three races will be close to $100,000. This impressive total will be awarded in snowmobile competition at the Super Seer Sno Pro opener at Grand Forks, Dayco Holiday Spectacular in Alexandria and Kawasaki Tournament of Champions in Owatonna — all during the month of December. The $100,000 will appear in cash, contingencies, and a couple of the biggest merchandise prizes ever awarded in snowmobile racing.

Sno Pro drivers are expected to divide about $30,000 in cash purses alone. Master's circuit drivers will be splitting up about another $25,000 — again in cash. The Hetteen Cup prize — a Larson boat, motor and trailer — plus the LeMans's series grand prize of a Chevy Blazer with a Meyer plow — carry a combined retail price of about $27,000.

Purse for the Kawasaki Tournament of Champions boosts the total well over $90,000. With the adding of contingency programs, it is expected the three race series promoted by Racetime will deliver close to a $100,000 value to the competing race drivers.

Last year the Lemans' Sno Pro series and the Kawasaki Tournament of Champions were recognized as the biggest encouragement of the winter for independent Sno Pro drivers. Again this year the grand prize of the three race series is aimed at encouraging Sno Pro participation by independent drivers. The Blazer and plow will be awarded to the independent Sno Pro driver with the highest point total from the 340X, or "Formula" class.

Kawasaki Tournament of Champions will again be made up of independent Sno Pro drivers.

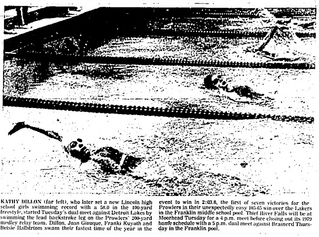
But this doesn't mean there aren't excellent prizes available to factory drivers in the LeMans's series. The Super Seer Cup and the Hetteen Cup are wide open for every Sno Pro driver.

Sno Pro is an international circuit with only one race scheduled world wide on any given weekend. Race sites on the Sno Pro schedule include locations in the U.S. and Canada, with races also being held in Sweden and Finland the past two years.

Super Seer Sno Pro opener is sanctioned by the world snowmobile racing federation (WSRF) of Hartland, Wisc. and is promoted by Racetime, Inc. of Alexandria.

Top factory, independent and amateur drivers from all over the U.S., Canada and perhaps even some from Sweden are expected to be on hand to compete for an estimated $15,000 in driver's purses, with $6,000 alone ticketed for the "Formula" class of Sno Pro with a feature event of 15 laps. The winner takes home the Super Seer Cup, the winner's check, and if he is an independent driver, a head start on winning the grand prize Blazer and plow.

Of the 250 different varieties of North American snakes, only the coral snake, copperhead, cottonmouth water moccasin, and rattlesnake are capable of delivering fatal bites to humans, says the National Wildlife Federation.



KATHY DILLON (far left), who later set a new Lincoln high school girls swimming record with a 58.0 in the 100-yard freestyle, started Tuesday's dual meet against Detroit Lakes by swimming the lead backstroke leg on the Prowlers' 200-yard medley relay team. Dillon, Joan Giauque, Franki Kuyath and Betsie Hallstrom swam their fastest time of the year in the event to win in 2:03.8, the first of seven victories for the Prowlers in their unexpectedly easy 105-65 win over the Lakers in the Franklin middle school pool. Thief River Falls will be at Moorhead Tuesday for a 4 p.m. meet before closing out its 1979 home schedule with a 5 p.m. dual meet against Brainerd Thursday in the Franklin pool.

BSU Has Strong Hockey Tradition

by Al Nohner,
BSU SID

Much of Minnesota's hockey tradition and folklore can be traced to the state's northern towns and Iron Range cities. Interest in the sport had spilled over from Canada and the north country climate helped nurture the ice game.

It was from this rich bloodline that Bemidji State hockey took form. In 1946, International Falls' Ed Johnson (a student at BSTC) began lobbying for a hockey team. On Dec. 2, 1946, Bemidji State's "Jolly" Erickson announced to a Lions Club gathering that plans were in the works to establish hockey.

That first hint developed into one of the fullest tales in Minnesota hockey history. As the Beavers enter their 25th season, they have a combined record of 320 wins, 117 losses and a dozen ties. They have been crowned national champions six times and earned eight conference titles. They put together a 34-game win streak that still stands as a college hockey record and have enjoyed the services of 17 All-American skaters.

Much of the credit for starting this tradition can be traced back to Ed Johnson and his cohorts. They did field a team, a self-coached one, for the 1946-47 season and did not win a game, but the Beaver pucksters were on their way.

Jack Aldrich was named as the first coach the next year when the Bemidji Staters won their first game. In 1949 they logged their initial winning campaign (7-5) and have had just one losing season since.

January 1949 spelled doom for the hockey program at Bemidji State. It was on that date that the roof of the Bemidji city arena collapsed and forced the icemen outdoors to Lake Bemidji. Hockey stayed around one more season even though the snow plow used to clear the ice had to be peridically fished from the drink.

It is interesting to note that only Johnson and John Whiting, a Hibbing student who captained the 1950 team, participated in all four of the early campaigns.

"Modern" Beaver hockey era began in 1959 with Dr. Vic Weber as the head coach. The team still played outdoors, but college and civic leaders were already laying the groundwork for an indoor facility.

The 1959-60 edition started modestly at 2-2. It did not take long for the Beavers to begin building a powerhouse and lost only one game in 1965 (10-1-1 record) and 1966 (12-1).

R. H. "Bob" Peters, a transplanted north country goaltender who longed to return from the North Dakota prairies to jackpine country, was hired to take charge of the Beavers for the start of the 1966-67 season.

He now begins his 14th year with a record at BSU of 263 wins, 88 losses and 9 ties.

A short time later, the Beaver icemen moved from their outdoor rink behind P. E. Complex to what is now known as the John S. Glas Fieldhouse. The BSU powerhouse finally had a home.

While the on-ice exploits of Peters' crew has been well documented with championship banners and individual awards, the off-ice accomplishments of the Beaver players are equally noteworthy.

BSU hockey program has become a leader in producing coaches and players for the state, area and nation. More Bemidji State grads now coach in this area than grads of any other college. Numerous individuals have earned master's degrees and went on to coach on the collegiate level while even more have advanced to play for U.S. or professional teams.

A sampling of those honored alumni include head coaches Jeff Arf, Grafton, N.D.; Roy Ashworth, Moose Jaw, Sask.; John Birrenkott, Osseo; Terry Bergstrom, Bloomington Lincoln; Bob Bird, Kenai, Ark.; Rod Christianson, Grand Rapids; Denny Fermoyle, Mountain Iron; Mark Froehle, Eau Claire, Wis.; Bob Glaesman, Willmar; Bryan Grand, Bemidji; Wendel Grand, Thief River Falls; Steve Gresbach, Fairbanks, Alaska; Chuck Grillo, Rosemount; Gus Hendrickson, UMD; Gary Hokanson, Roseau; Rob Howells, Grand Forks; Marshall Johnston, Denver University; Tom King, Indus; Mark Kristo, Anoka; Mike McGraw, Fridley Grace; Nick Novack, Jamestown, N.D.; Jerry Pelkey, Warroad; Larry Ross, International Falls; Tom Saterdahlen, Bloomington Jefferson; Denny Schueller, St. Paul Sibley; Pete Sullivan, Red Lake Falls; and Joe Zywiec, Sibley.

Assistant coaches include Terry Burns, International Falls; Blaine Comstock, Warroad; Sheldon Hedlund, Grand Rapids; Bob Nyberg, Two Harbors; Richard Ratai, Aurora-Hoyt Lakes; Chuck Scanlon, Apple Valley; and Charlie Brown, Rosemount.

Others in athletics include Jim Finks Jr., public relations for the Portland Timbers; Jim McElmurry, 1970-71 Nationals, 1972 Olympics, Colorado Rockies and Minnesota North Stars; Gary Ross, 1976-80 Olympics; Gary Sargent, 1973 Nationals, LA Kings, Team USA and Minnesota North Stars; Dale Smedsmoe, Cincinnati Stingers; and Mike Tok, Minnesota hockey official.

That list and the numerous plaudits accorded the Beaver icemen are the foundation of the Bemidji State tradition. As the current BSU skaters compete this winter they are helping to cement the richness of the school's first quarter century of hockey.

Pheasant Opener

Roy Childers of Tim's Sporting Goods is happy with the pheasant opener in the Forest Lake area. Hunters were successful south and west of Forest Lake near Hugo and the Carlos Avery refuge. Roy also states that duck hunting has been fair since the opener when it was very good, the local ducks have left and the northern ducks are moving through, which allows good action if you are in the right spot.

Bass Contest

Joel Kalton of Prior Lake and Edward Smith of St. Paul are the winners in the 1979 Minnesota Outdoors bass fishing contest. Both fishermen caught a bass weighing eight-pounds, 10-ounces.

Joel caught his bass in Prior Lake June 29. It was 24½ inches long and 18 inches in girth. Ed caught his fish in Green Lake near Chisago City August 23. It was 22½ inches long and 18 inches in girth.

They'll both receive a rod and reel, a knife and a selection of fishing lures.

Last year a 14-year-old boy won the contest catching a bass weighing nine-pounds, four-ounces in Lake Washington near Madison Lake. Judges in the contest were Dan Berry of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, Jerry Fuller of Park Rapids, Don Wendt of Grand Rapids and Paul Fahlin of Paul's Landing on Lake Minnetonka.

Pelican Rapids

Lee Brenna and Walt Boe of Pelican Rapids are happy with improved walleye fishing in local lakes. The frog migration brings the walleyes into shallow water. The best fishing has been in the early evening. Bass and northern fishing has been fair to good. There should be good fishing from now until the ice arrives.

New Wildlife Publication Is For The Birds

Are you wise as an owl — or a bird brain? A legal eagle — or a lame duck?

Whatever your mentality, your occupation, or your condition, there is probably some expression involving birds to describe it, according to "The Gift of Birds," an anthology of bird lore and pictures just published by the National Wildlife Federation.

Here are some of our expressions involving birds, with the book's explanations of how they got into our daily language:

+The stool in "stool pigeon" originally meant the pole to which a bird was fastened in order to decoy other birds. In underworld slang, a stool pigeon became a spy the law planted among outlaws.

+The "cockpit" of an airplane got its name from the pit into which cocks were dropped when two were pitted against each other.

+To be "crestfallen" also derived from cockfights. At the moment of defeat, the crest of the beaten cock would droop limply.

There are dozens of other bird metaphors: wild goose chase, light as a feather, swan song, egghead, dead as a dodo, cook one's goose, night owl, free as a bird, lay an egg, feather in your cap, talk turkey and eat crow.

"The Gift of Birds," a 176-page book containing 220 full-color photographs and illustrations, is available for $10.95 each, plus 85 cents in handling charges, from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

University Studies Dental Gold And Cremated Remains

An investigation of what happend to gold dental work when a body is cremated has produced "no evidence of wrongdoing" on the part of Minnesota's crematory operators, according to the state health department.

Department investigators have concluded that much of the dental gold probably melts during cremation, and is probably present in a "blackened, unrecognizable form among the cremated remains." Questions about the state's crematory industry had arisen earlier this year, when the Minnespolis "Star" reported that several persons were unable to find any gold among the cremated remains of relatives who were know to have gold dental work.

"Crematory workers "rarely see" a body prior to cremation, according to department authorities, and the working conditions in a crematory would make it "very difficult" to recover any gold after the body has been cremated. They said the possibility that gold is regularly being removed at any crematory in Minnesota is "very remote."

All eight of the crematories that serve Minnesota participated in the department's investigation, along with several crematory builders, and a number of consumer organizations and religious groups. The University of Minnesota is conducting its own study of the problem, and a report is expected within a week.

Mental alloys used in gold dental work melt at anywhere from 1600 to 2300 degrees Fahrenheit, depending of the metals used in the alloy, according to department authoirties. Furnace units, or "retorts," used in Minnesota's crematories operate at anywhere from 1600 to 2500 degrees, depending on factors like the design of the retort, the air temperature inside and outside the unit when it starts up, and the practices of the crematory operator.

Because of these variations in the melting point of dental gold and the temperature of crematory retorts, the gold may or may not melt during cremation, according to the department's investigators. They said the gold is usually blackened and very difficult to find even if it doesn't melt. If it does melt, they said, it usually splits into very small pieces, making it almost impossible to spot among the remains.

"People shouldn't be surprised if they can't see any gold in the remains," said department investigator. "We knew exactly what we were looking for, and we still had trouble finding any gold." He said the lighting, equipment and working space available in Minnesota's crematories would make it very difficult to find even an occasional piece of gold. The department's investigation has found nothing to indicate that gold is being taken at any of the crematories, he added.

A builder of crematory retorts and the University of Minnesota crematory both reported that they had occasionally seen "BB sized" pellets of blackened gold. Another crematory operator, who sometimes operates his crematory at lower than average temperatures to save fuel, reported seeing blackened pieces of unmelted gold occasionally, but he said he is careful to leave the gold with the remains.

University of Minnesota study, which is being conducted by the biomaterials program at the school of dentistry, is expected to provide more detailed information about the dental gold problem. Among the topics to be discussed in the study report are the economic aspects of dental gold, the presence and condition of dental gold in cremated remains, and the number of people in Minnesota who have gold dental work. The state health department will release the results of the university's investigation as seen as they are available.

A motion was made by K. Murphy, seconded by W. Grovum, and carried to approve the following: RESOLVED, that the Board of Education support the following request concerning the TRA law and part-time employees:

WHEREAS, present law requires that Teacher Retirement (TRA) be deducted from all licensed teachers, and unlicensed personnel contribute to Public Employment Retirement (PERA),

AND WHEREAS, Adult Vocational Education utilizes a majority of part-time teachers who hold other full-time employment for their livelihood,

AND WHEREAS, it would be extremely impractical and improbably that these part-time teachers could ever qualify for retirement benefits under TRA, and or PERA,

AND WHEREAS, the present practice of refund TRA to part-time teachers only upon application and without interest is both time-consuming and costly to both the teachers and the State,

AND WHEREAS, these part-time Adult Vocational Instructors are licensed separately so that they may not teach in excess of 500 hours per year, a license unique to Adult Vocational Education which clearly delineates them from full-time instructors and those persons that do not require a license to teach,

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Board request the laws be amended to exempt part-time Adult Vocational Instructors from the requirements of TRA and PERA.

A roll call vote was taken and passed unanimously.

Facilities Board Meeting
Ind. School Dist. No. 564
October 18, 1979

A Board Meeting for discussion concerning building proposals for School District No. 564 was held on October 18, 1979 in the Board Room of the School District Service Center, at 10:00 P.M. (during the course of the regular Board meeting).

Board Members present were: Larry McDowell, Harry Sjulson, Ken Murphy, Bob Sorvig, Wally Grovum, and Ken Wiebolt. Absent was: Maynard Wedul. Also attending was Dr. William S. Corliss, Superintendent.

Ken Skold and Dan Moll gave an update presentation and presented some ideas of what could be done with the Lincoln High School Site.

Norm Cruse, Chamber of Commerce, was present and asked that a task force be set up to look into the use of the Lincoln site as a community-government center for Thief River Falls. The Board Chairman appointed Harry Sjulson to this committee along with Dr. Corliss. The Chamber is to spearhead the committee and will make a report back to the Board of Education as soon as possible.

The location behind the Greenwood Cemetery was mentioned as a possible site for a new high school. A report on this site will be given to the Board at the next regular Board meeting on October 29, 1979.

Discussion was held on keeping the School District Service Center site for the foreseeable future (15 years).

The meeting was adjourned at 11:00 P.M. so the Board could convene with regular Board business.

Many Minnesotans are looking for ways to increase the efficiency of their heating systems to help combat high fuel costs. As a result, woodburning stoves and new furnaces are being installed in many homes.

We are all trying to conserve energy. However, do not overlook or create safety hazards in your zeal to save energy.

And remember: If your furnace or stove is operating safely, it probably is operating efficiently — and cheaply — as well.

When fuel is burned, various gases and particles are given off. Some of the gases, such as carbon monoxide, can be lethal. As a house is "tightened up" with better insulation and weatherstripping, air infiltration is reduced. Less hot air escapes, and less cold air comes into the house. More combustion by-products remain in the house.

Proper installation of your new furnace can prevent danger which may be created by improper venting or incorrect fuel-air ratio settings. If you install your own furnace, be sure you obtain and follow directions for proper installation to insure safety.

If you are installing a woodburning stove for supplementary heat, be sure the stove is properly installed. It may need to be set away from the wall a certain distance or be placed in a fireproof area to avoid causing a fire. Be sure to follow directions carefully or have the stove installed by someone familiar with woodburning stoves and their installation.

Many citizens also are considering conversion of their furnaces from oil to natural gas or other fuels. Attention must be paid to proper procedures in conversions, too.

Do not forget that work on your heating system often requires a permit from your community.

If you have had your furnace for some time but it has not been checked recently, it is a good idea to make sure it is still operating efficiently and safely.

Various tests can be performed to measure carbon monoxide levels in a house. Check with building officials in your community for information on testing.

If you have any questions regarding your furnace or woodburning stove, or if you have any consumer problem, contact the Consumer Division, Attorney General's Office, 102 State Capitol, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102.

NEWS OF EYE CARE

FRAMES FOR A FOREVER, FIRST TIME FIT

There's good news for the world's more than 250 million eyeglass-wearing population.

A new technological concept provides the ultimate in frame comfort, safety, reliability and durability. Those taking advantage of this innovation would no longer suffer from "nose dive," where glasses slide down the nose; "headlock," a strain caused by rigidly-attached temples; or pinching.

The Safilo Elasta® hinge, perfected over five years by Swiss craftsmen, eliminates these problems. Developed with the precision of a fine watch, the hinge has eight coordinated components designed to flex and release 500,000 times without breakdown or signs of wear. It absorbs stress, applies gentle but firm pressure, opens wide, then returns to the original position.

Elasta frames are the first to combine such advanced technology with the elements of eyewear design. They click open...click shut...and always stay put. They are unusually practical for the active lifestyles of eyeglass wearers of all ages, including children. Safilo offers a 15 month guarantee with these frames.

Information about the Elasta product can be obtained from your local vision care professional.

Child Care Poses Problem To Women Who Are Employed

About six million women in today's labor force have children under the age of six years. Many more are students or volunteers with young children, and all share the concern of finding competent day care for their children while they're away from home.

"As a mother, your very first job is to find good care for your son or daughter; quite often, this is more difficult than it ought to be," says Ronald Pitzer, an extension family life specialist at the University of Minnesota.

"Certain options aren't really options at all. For instance, if you work full-time, co-op playgroups probably aren't for you. Most people can't afford a live-in housekeeper and it is a rare situation when loving relatives are willing to care for a baby for eight hours each day."

Generally speaking, the choices narrow down to a paid daily babysitter, a family day-care home or a day-care center.

If someone is to come into your home to care for your child five days a week, you must have confidence in their ability to look after your child more or less as you would yourself, Pitzer says. The babysitter must genuinely care for your child; discipline must be consistent; he or she must be able to feed and clothe the youngster properly and must be able to recognize when something is troubling your child, either physically or emotionally.

"Rely on your intuition or feelings when choosing a babysitter," Pitzer says. "If you don't like the person, your son or daughter probably won't either. Make certain to check references and experience. Interview the candidate at length and observe how he or she gets along with your child."

Day-care homes may be large or small. A small home cares for one to six children, from infants to children six years of age. A larger home can care for up to 12 children, but two adults are required to be present. Counties have varying licensing requirements for day-care homes of both sizes. It's best to check with your county welfare department to see what's done in your community.

"The fact that the day-care home is licensed is no guarantee that the social, emotional and educational climate will meet your own standards," Pitzer says. "Spend some time in the home, observing children and their interaction; chances are if your're comfortable, your child will be too."

In general, licensing regulations are aimed at safeguarding the child's health and safety. In order for a family home to be licensed, there must be evidence that the operator is in good physical and mental health and has not been convicted of a serious offense. The home must meet certain space, fire and safety requirements.

"A family day-care home is less expensive than having a babysitter in your house and provides your child with other children to play with," Pitzer says. "It'll probably be less expensive than a day-care center, but will likely offer less in the way of equipment and activities."

Centers are now primarily for pre-school children, although some also offer after-school programs. You'll want to choose a center whose hours meet your needs and one which is accessible to your home.

Day-care centers provide outdoor activities either on their own premises or in a nearby park. They often offer breakfast as well as lunch and snacks. Activity time and rest time are usually well-balanced; staff is usually well-trained.

At the present moment, there are very few day-care centers which accept infants. When available, these programs provide care to infants from birth or soon thereafter to the 24th or 30th month.

Pre-school centers provide full and partial day care for children usually between the ages of thirty months and five years. They may be publicly funded or privately funded and are licensed by the department of public welfare.

There is a great range of day-care centers and nursery shcools. Some are intended for low-income families; some are especially oriented to the care of minority group children. Some are operated by school districts; some are cooperatively run.

"You'll want to go through the same steps in choosing a day-care center as you would a day-care home," Pitzer says. "You might ask yourself: Is there enough space provided for the children? Does the space seem safe? Are the adults able to handle emergencies? What arrangements are made when a child becomes ill? Are meals nutritious and well-balanced? Is there a comfortable and quiet place for naps? Are the bathroom facilities clean and easy for a child to use?"

Beyond the actual environment of a day-care center, mothers will want to know what the emotional climate is like. Take time to observe the interaction among children and between children and staff. Are the children happy and relaxed and do they appear to trust the adults? Does the discipline reflect your philosophy? Are problems well handled? Do you feel comfortable being there?

"If you can answer yes to the majority of these and other questions you may have, there's a good possibility that the center will provide fun and learning for your child and peace of mind for you."

THESE SPOOKY little characters designed their own costumes Wednesday afternoon during their daily craft lesson. Glenda Dauer is presently the day care adviser for nine part-time children in her home. Mrs. Dauer, who possesses a day care license, has been active in her business for three years. Group of children pictured include Julie Dauer, LuAnne Maslowski, Jennifer Dauer, Suzanne and Lori Golighly, Sarah and Cory Anderson and Jeremy and Jason Engen.

HMMMMM. . . one cup blood drops, one cup owl eyes, one cup cat eyes, one cup chicken toenails, one cup colored flies, one cup butterfly wings, one cup ants, one cup baby snakes, one cup cob webs, one cup snake eyes, one cup lizard gizzards, and one cup worms. Apparently the ingredients for witches brew made in the Mark Twain kindergarten class Wednesday morning were not too appealing to this young observer.

Senior Citizen Info-Line Can Give Answers

Senior citizens with questions may get the answers by calling the Minnesota board on aging's new "Aging Info-Line."

New this month, the service doesn't have all the answers for Minnesota seniors, but it probably can give some information and help start the questioner in the right direction toward additional help.

Aging Info-Line is open weekdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. by dialing 1-800-652-9747 and asking for "Aging Info-Line." The call will be directly transferred to the Minnesota board on aging in St. Paul.

The board's new information specialist will take the call and do her best to help find answers to questions about senior benefits, day care, recreation, finances, nutrition or other problems. And if there is an information and referral program in the caller's area, she'll give its number for future calls.

Jan. 1 Deadline For Review Of Discharges

Department of defense has reemphasized that the deadline for discharge review application expires on Jan. 1, 1980 for those veterans separated before 1965 with an undesirable discharge (now called "discharge under other than honorable conditions").

This extended period for filing is an exception to the normal 15-year statute of limitations prescribed by Title 10, Section 1553, United States Code. In order to be considered for upgrading, the application for discharge review must be postmarked by Jan. 1, 1980.

Interested veterans can obtain applications for discharge review (DD Form 293) from any of the following agencies:

+ Veterans Administration, American Red Cross, and Veterans Organizations (e.g., American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans of the USA, Veterans of Foreign—Wars, etc.).

+ State Department of Offices of Veterans Affairs (listed in local telephone directories).

+ Military installations:

Review can be initiated by submission of a DD Form 293, "Application for Review of Discharge or Dismissal from the Amred Forces of the United States," which is available through any of the organizations listed above or by writing directly to the discharge review board of any of the services.

Exact numbers of eligible veterans are not available. Earlier estimates placed the number of elibigle persons between 750,000 to 1.5 million. To date, only 2,750 former servicemembers have applied for the upgrading. Of those who made the application, 1,508, or over 54 per cent have received an upgrading.

Inga Geving Attends State History Meet

Mrs. Inga Geving, president of the Pennington county historical society, recently returned from the 130th annual meeting and history conference of the Minnesota historical society in Minneapolis.

Program for the trip included a business meeting at the State Capitol in St. Paul, and various meetings and a banquet at the Holiday Inn in downtown Minneapolis. Guest speaker for an afternoon program was Anne Morrow Lindbergh, who recently sent a completed manuscript to her publisher about the prewar and war years. Much of the book is taken from her letters and diaries of 1939-1944.

Russell Fridley was also honored for his 25 years as director and president of the historical society. Fridley was presented a gift from the society. During the last day of the convention, the Lindbergh eagle sculpture was presented in memory of Charles A. Lindbergh.

Deductible For Medicare To Rise In 1980

In 1980, Medicare beneficiaries will pay higher deductible and co-insurance charges for hospital and skilled nursing services. A Medicare hospital patient will have to pay the first $180 of his or her hospital bill, $20 more than the 1979 charge of $160. The $180 deductible is roughly equal to the cost of one day's stay in a hospital. By law, the hospital insurance deductible must be adjusted annually to keep pace with hospital costs.

A Medicare patient's daily bill for hospital care for the 61st through the 90th day will be increased from $40 to $45 and the daily costs for post-hospital care in a skilled nursing facility for the 21st through the 100th day will rise from $20 to $22.50. If a beneficiary uses "lifetime reserve" days, the extra 60 days a beneficiary can use if more than 90 days of hospital care are needed in a benefit period, The cost will be $90 a day, $10 more a day than the 1979 charge.

County Board OKs '79 Revenue Budget

Revenue budget of $1,320,000 was approved by the Pennington county board of commissioners meeting Tuesday at the courthouse in Thief River Falls. The meeting was declared open as a hearing on revenue sharing and budget but no appearance was made by anyone to testify.

The revenue budget is up sharply from a year ago when the million dollar mark was passed for the first time at $1,010,400. Increases are noted in all five areas for which local revenue is raised through mill levy. Actual levies themselves are unknown at this time since county valuation figures have not been received.

General revenue fund is up from $430,000 a year ago to $476,106; road and bridge budget increased from $321,000 to $380,000, reflecting higher fuel costs as well as other increased costs; welfare levy locally climbed from $214,000 a year ago to $350,000; Oakland Park nursing home bonds will require $38,728 this year in comparison with no levy a year ago; and law enforcement center bond payment will total $74,423 this year, up from $45,400 a year ago as the county begins to pay principal as well as interest.

Lesser amounts are to be levied for the Northwest Regional commission, Red Lake river watershed and the Middle river-Snake river watershed.

The board reallocated interest on revenue sharing funds to a fund for placement of an elevator in the courthouse to comply with barrier free regulations for the handicapped.

Announcement was made that Ronald Tollefson, road patrol operator, will retire at the end of the year after 20 years of service to the county.

Discussion was held on the future of Oakland Hall dormitory in the former Oakland Park nusing home building. Dr. Alex Easton and Kenneth Murphy of the Oakland hall board appeared to discuss the problems in heating the building. Because of the heat loss due to lack of insulation and poorly fitting doors and windows, they said it may be necessary to close the facility at the end of this semester. The board took the information under advisement. The dormitory offers housing for approximately 50 students in post high school educational

Job Service Office Closed Nov. 11, 22, 23

Thief River Falls job service and unemployment insurance office of the department of economic security will be closed on several November dates, according to J.K. Stadum, area manager.

Office will be closed Monday, November 11 for Veterans day; Thursday, Thanksgiving day, November 22; and Friday, November 23.

Individuals desiring to transact business with the department should keep in mind the two-day closing during Thanksgiving week when contacting the office at 318 Knight av. N., Thief River Falls.

Persons who contact the office are again reminded to bring with them their social security card so processing delays may be avoided.

Applications Accepted By United Way

Applications are now being received for the Thief River Falls area United Way allocations from the 1979 campaign, according to Mrs. Barb Drees, executive secretary. Representatives of organizations which want to be included in the fund distribution may obtain application forms by writing to the Thief River Falls United Way at P.O. Box 276, Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Drees also reminded that there is no house-to-house solicitation of funds being planned this year. Persons who wish to contribute to the drive but will not be contacted in the business or professional area canvass may send their donations to the box number listed above.

Mayor Carlson

Alderman Womack

Elect Womack To City Council

Alderman Borsheim

Alderman Wysoski

Alderman Restad

J.J. Womack carried each of Thief River Falls' five wards Tuesday to be elected a new member of the city council in the only contest on the city election ballot. Womack's term as alderman-at-large will expire December 31, 1983. A total of 1,055 voters cast ballots in the election.

Reelected without opposition were Mayor Bob Carlson with 881 votes, first ward alderman Milan Borsheim with 159, third ward alderman Ambrose Wysoski with 111 and fifth ward alderman Clayton Restad with 294. While Restad was reelected to the council, he will now be representing the fifth ward rather than serving as alderman-at-large, with position he held previously. Leaving the council at the end of this year will be current fifth ward alderman Milton Reierson.

In the two-way race between Womack and Allan Nichols, Womack had comofrtable margins in all five wards to win 632 to 371. Womack carried 13 of the 15 precincts in the city, losing precinct 5B by a vote of 55-52 and being tied at 32 votes each in precinct 2B.

Vote totals for Womack were as follows with precincts A, B and C listed respectively in each ward: Ward I, 34-33-51—118; Ward II, 52-32-50—134; Ward III, 10-31-36—77; Ward IV, 27-35-56—118; and Ward V, 82-52-50—185.

Vote totals for Nichols compared as follows: Ward I, 17-21-17—55; Ward II, 24-32-16—72; Ward III, 9-9-23—41; Ward IV, 26-19-21—66; and Ward V, 45-55-37—137.

Vote totals for Mayor Carlson were as follows: Ward I, 47-48-67—162; Ward II, 68-55-58-181; Ward III, 16-41-46—103; Ward IV, 50-47-57—154; and Ward V, 105-101-75—281.

City clerk-treasurer Gerald Wigness said there were 21 absentee ballots cast in the election with 1,034 voters going to the polls on Tuesday.

Arctic Reports Sales Increase

Arctic Enterprises, Inc., of Thief River Falls has reported operating results for the second quarter of fiscal 1980, noting that net sales for the three-month period ending September 30 were $68,642,000, up 14 per cent from $60,113,000 for the same three-month period last year. Consolidated net income for the quarter was $1,587,000 or 51 cents a share, up 21 per cent from $1,316,000 or 42 cents a share.

Net sales for the six-month period ending September 30 were $105,479,000, up 26 per cent from $83,914,000 for the first half of last year. Consolidated net income for the six months was $1,122,000 or 36 cents a share, up 108 per cent from the $539,000 or 17 cents a share reported for the same period last year.

John C. Penn, president, said, "The increase in both volume and profits during the quarter is primarily attributable to good wholesale sales of both Arctic Cat and Scorpion snowmobiles. October wholesale sales continue strong and our dealers remain optimistic about this season."

Penn indicated that operating results for the remainder of the fiscal year will depend on snowmobile retail sales from now through January. Although both industry and company retail sales were down through the end of September, preliminary surveys indicate that Arctic's retail sales in October were substantially ahead of last season. Continuation of this favorable trend will depend upon rural economic conditions, gasoline availability and snowfall conditions, he said.

"Sales of marine products increased eight per cent over the same period in the previous year in spite of soft market conditions in the industry," Penn said.

School Closed November 9

There will be no school Friday, November 9, due to parent-teacher conferences in the elementary and middle school. High school will be having curriculum study for Title IX as well as parent-teacher conferences.

ACE Club At Northland To Host Visitors

In observance of American Education Week the Northland community college ACE (adults continuing education) club is inviting older than average students to an open house at Northland college on Thursday, November 15 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

The older than average students that the ACE club is interested in attracting to the campus are those who are returning to college, persons interested in changing careers, those interested in personal enrichment and those who have always had a desire to return to college and are now in a position to do so.

Campus visitors will have the opportunity to sit in on regular classes conducted by Northland instructors. This experience will provide an opportunity to gain first hand knowledge of how college classes are conducted as well as alleviate apprehension about enrolling in college classes.

Among the classes that are open to visitors are English, business, art, theatre, biology, sociology, computers, political science and psychology.

The open house is an opportunity for visitors to tour the facilities at Northland, meet faculty and administration and discuss continuing education with ACE members now enrolled at Northland.

ACE club members will serve as hosts and guides for the campus visitors.

Energy Agency Reps Discuss Area Planning

Mark Schoenbaum and Al Lessik, community energy coordinators for the Minnesota energy agency, met with local officials Monday regarding the agency's programs for the coming winter.

Meeting with the energy agency personnel were Sheriff Charles Richards, city planner Jack Quinlivan, county extension director Terry Courneya, superintendent of utilities John T. Anderson, Mayor James Gaven of St. Hilaire, Julie Chase of the Northwest regional library and a representative of Mayor David Brown of Goodridge.

Pamphlets were distributed for local use on emergency housing for people whose homes run out of heating fuel, where to call if fuel payment assistance is needed, a place to contact for information on insulation or weatherizing homes and where to find out how to do the work necessary.

The men said they expect fuel oil supplies to be tight throughout the winter with the price about doubled from a year ago and expectations that prices will be $1.05 per gallon for No. 2 fuel oil by the end of the winter.

They encouraged conservation of fuel in all manner possible and noted that information can be received by calling the county extension office at 681-2116 locally or toll free to the state energy agency at 1-800-652-9747.

Postpone Meets On Swine And Feeder Pigs

Plans for the feeder pig producers meeting scheduled for 8 p.m. on November 13 and the swine producers barn meeting scheduled for November 21 at 1:30 p.m. have been postponed.

In trying to avoid duplication of programs, the Pennington county extension office will be working in cooperation with the Northern Minnesota feeder pig producers association and will reschedule these meetings with sessions of the feeder pig association.

By doing so the county extension office hopes to make its meetings available to a larger group of people at more convenient times. Notice of the new meeting dates will be released in the near future, according to Howard Person, associate county extension agent.

Meet On Aging Is Postponed

Pennington county committee on aging meeting set for November 12 has been postponed to November 19 due to the veteran's day holiday.

Invite School Visitation During Education Week

NEWSPAPER EDITORS are prone to complain about long hours, too many deadlines, late copy, lack of appreciation and a host of other real or imagined difficulties. The profession is not without its compensations, however, as evidenced by Times editor Marvin Lundin in the photo above with the Texas Cowgirls (the editor is the one with the necktie) during their visit to Thief River Falls this week. The former Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders are adding to the football theme of the Hydra-Mac dealer convention and will also entertain at a new car showing by local auto dealers at the sports arena on Thursday. For the editor's interview and photos of the Cowgirls, read Monday's Times next week.

All public schools in the Thief River Falls school district will have open house visitation during American education week which is being observed nationally November 12-16. Theme of the week is "Teach All the Children" and it has been proclaimed by government officials as well as officers of sponsoring organizations.

At Lincoln high school there will be open visitation encouraged during regular school hours throughout the week. Tours of the school, conducted by members of the student senate, can be arranged by contacting the principal's office. For conferences with faculty members, call the teacher or make arrangements through the guidance office by calling 681-2700, extension 247.

Franklin middle school will have open visitation from 1 to 3 p.m. during the entire week. A special education meeting is planned for Thursday, November 15, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. and all parents of students in the special education program of the school who would like information on the program are encouraged to attend.

Northwest vocational center, which includes Thief River Falls students as well as those from several area schools studying vocational subjects, will be open to the public all week. Visitors are asked to please stop at the director's office in the center for information, safety glasses and student guides.

At Knox elementary school there will be open visitation from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and coffee will be served in the school cafeteria every day.

Mark Twain school will have open visitation from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, November 15, with coffee to be served in the school throughout the day.

Northrop elementary school will observe open house every day of American education week from 8:20 a.m. to 3 p.m. and parents of elementary students are encouraged to visit any of the classes.

Washington elementary school has an open house scheduled for Tuesday evening, November 13, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., at which time coffee and rolls will be served for all visitors.

Area vocational-technical institute is open to the public all week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. with visitation encouraged.

"Your schools are open to the public at any time during school hours," stated Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools, "but American education week allows us an opportunity to place a special emphasis on visitation. Our administration and faculty appreciate interest shown by parents and others in our school programs and all join in encouraging them to visit classes and observe what is taking place for children in our community."

In proclaiming American education week in Minnesota, Gov. Al Quie noted that the schools represent the best efforts of the community to improve the quality of life and that there is a "widespread need for better communication and more cooperative relationships between professional educators and the community".

Gov. Quie said he urged all citizens to reaffirm their commitment to improving education on all levels and to translate that commitment into action by visiting local schools.

American Legion commanders throughout the area have joined in proclaiming the week as one of the sponsors of the annual observance. The American Legion proclamation notes that schools represent a major investment by any community and that teachers are an important part of the community's leadership. It further states that an involved citizenry provides a most important facet in community schools.

Joining the American Legion in sponsorship of the observance in Minnesota are the Minnesota Education association, Minnesota congress of parents, teachers and students and the state department of education.

Anna Sandberg Is Visited By Swedes

As an extension of a two-week concert tour with the Vasterviks Folkdanslag of Sweden, two young ladies from that Scandinavian country are spending a month traveling in the United States and visiting relatives. Three of those relatives live in northwestern Minnesota and two in the Thief River Falls area.

Anna Karin Johansson of Stora Bjorka, Sweden, 24, was a dancer with the folk dance group which presented 15 concerts in Kansas and Colorado. Her mother is a cousin of Mrs Anna Sandberg of Thief River Falls, Erling Anderson of Plummer and Carl Anderson of Roseau, as well as Mrs. Thule Norman who lives in Washington state.

Anna Karin also has four other cousins of her mother who live in the United States and has or will be visiting some of them. Her traveling companion is Anna Karin Olsson, 25, a native of Ornskoldsvik who now lives in Uppsala while attending graduate classes at the university there. She was an interpreter and did some singing with the Folkdanslag.

It was the first trip to the United States for Mrs. Johansson whose family operates a farm in the northeast of Smaland province, raising wheat and sheep. The farm has about 25 hectares (about 65 acres) of open land plus some forested land. Anna Karin says they raise all the feed for their sheep, provide pasture in the summer and are still able to raise wheat for sale on the farm. Her father keeps about 100 ewes and sells about 150 market lambs each year.

Both Miss Johansson and Miss Olsson are home economics teachers who specialize in textiles. Miss Johansson is currently teaching classes in sewing, weaving and knitting to classes of students 18 years of age and older. Some of these are students of the textile industry while others are taking classes for their own enjoyment, for home use or because of an interest in continuing culture and tradition of the country.

Miss Olson had been teaching younger students in Sweden where home economics instruction in textiles is compulsory for both boys and girls from third through ninth grade. Since they knew they would be making the trip a year in advance, they were able to arrange for teaching, study and work schedules to allow the time for travel.

In addition to her university

Third Anna in the photo is Mrs. Anna Sandberg of Thief River Falls, a cousin of Anna Karin Johansson's mother. They are looking at pictures which were brought from Sweden. Both visitors speak English well, having studied it for the required eight years in school.

Kathy Sollom Weds Daryl Myers At Zion

Miss Kathy Sollom, daughter of Lt. Col. Almond H. Sollom, USMC (Ret.) and Mrs. Sollom of Thief River Falls, became the bride of Daryl Myers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Myers, at a recent ceremony at Zion Lutheran church in this city.

Rev. James Mattson officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by approximately 275 relatives and friends. Kristy Gerardy, a friend of the bride, was the organist. She played the traditional wedding march for the processional and "Music Box Dancer" for the recessional. During the ceremony, Steve Sorvig, a firend of the couple, sang "Evergreen," "If" and "Wedding Song."

Assorted greens decorated the candelabra that formed the chancel setting. Yellow ribbon bows marked the pews.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a sleeveless gown of white eyelet sewn by her mother. The fitted bodice was styled with a wide inset midriff and a scoop neckline accented with a natural falling ruffle. Her slightly flared, gathered skirt was complemented by a wide ruffle that extended into a train. She wore a pearl necklace, borrowed from her mother, and a gold bracelet, belonging to her grandmother. In her hair was a cluster of three yellow sweetheart roses surrounded by babies' breath. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, babies' breath and daisies, accented with spider plants and mixed greenery.

The bride's personal attendant was Mary Johnson, Thief River Falls, who also distributed the flowers.

Maid of honor was Carrie Sollom, twin sister of the bride. Other attendants were Tobey Myers, sister of the bride; Toni Peterson, Jenny Bulger, all of Thief River Falls, and Kathy Myrold and Deb Wassink of Moorhead, friends of the couple. They wore gowns of yellow eyelet, styled like the bride's, and carried bouquets of white daisies, babies' breath, spider plants and greenery. In their hair, they wore a cluster of babies breath. Their necklaces were gifts from the bride.

Wearing a similar gown and necklace, a gift from the couple, was the flower girl, Kimberly Myers of Anchorage, Alaska, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Myers.

Harold Myers, Anchorage, a brother of the groom, was best man. Gromsmen were Jerry and Eldon Myers, brothers of the groom; Don Sollom, Minneapolis, a brother of the bride, Barry Newton and Sheldon Peterson, Thief River Falls, friends of the couple. The guests were seated by Tim Prestebak, Goodridge, cousin of the bride; Joel Hagen, Fargo, N.D., cousin of the groom, and Brad Steiger, a friend of the couple. All wore tan western flair tuxedos styled with front and back yokes edged in satin, ivory ruffled shirts and yellow boutonnieres.

The rings were carried by Lee Nieland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nieland of Thief River Falls. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a tan western flair tuxedo. His ID bracelet was a gift from the couple. The pillow on which the rings were carried belonged to the bride's grandmother.

The mother of the bride was attired in a floral print accordian pleated skirt with a dusty rose blouse. Her corsage was a white orchid. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother who wore a pink floral gown with a ruffled neckline.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ole Prestebak, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. an Mrs. Henry Williams, grandparents of the groom. All are Thief River Falls residents.

A reception at the Country Club followed the ceremony. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sollom, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Craig Pladson, brother-in-law and sister of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carriere, friends of the couple, distributed the wedding programs as Candy Pladson, niece of the groom, registered the guests. Paula Newton arranged the gifts and Craig Pladson, Jr., served as gift bearer. Rice distributers were Hugh Sollom, nephew of the bride, Dena Prestebak, cousin of the bride, and Chad Carriere, friend of the couple. The punch was served by Penny Storbakken and Dan Pape of East Grand Forks, friends of the couple.

Served at the reception was Kransekake, the traditional Norwegian wedding cake, surrounded at the base by a wreath of Daisies. Arlene Prestebak, aunt of the bride, and Grace Jorde, godmother of the groom, served the cake while Vi Gordon, and Dorey Hagen, aunts of the bride and groom, poured the coffee.

Waitresses were Pat Johnston, Sherry Hanson, Melodee Rupprecht, Sue Spengler, and Joni and Kelly Wennberg.

Later that evening, a wedding dance was held at the Country club.

Following a wedding trip to Madden's lodge near Brainerd, the couple is now at home in rural Thief River Falls. Photo, R.L. Nieland Studio.

Orville Peters Honored On Their 40th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Peters of this city were honored on their 40th wedding anniversary on Sunday afternoon, October 14, at a reception at the Evangelical Covenant church.

The event was hosted by the couple's children and their families: Mr. and Mrs. Maynard (Shirley) Peters, Orvie, Malinda, Wanda and Keith of St. Hilaire; and Mr. and Mrs. Duane (Sharon) Chader, Ann and Ruth of Madison Lake.

Upon the couple's arrival, they were presented with a corresponding boutonniere and corsage of red roses and white carnations.

A brief program was given with Mrs. Peters' brother, Rodger Sackett as master of ceremonies. Rev. Don Peres, gave the devotional meditation. Music included piano solos by Ann Chader and Mrs. Duane Chader, a duet, "Children of the Heavenly Father," by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Erickson, and the solo, "The Old Rugged Cross," by Mrs. Nels Holmberg. Both songs are the Peters' favorite hymns. Included in the program were two poems written by Mrs. Peters' mother, Mrs. Myrtle Sackett, and read by Rodger Sackett and Orvie Peters, the oldest grandchild. Maynard Peters and Sharon Chader paid tribute to their parents and also told interesting events in the lives of the couple. The program concluded with the honored couple expressing their thanks to everyone.

Present at the anniversary celebration were three of the four attendants at the wedding 40 years ago: Mrs. Alvin (Bernyce) Grandstrand, Viking; Mrs. Nels (Edla) Holmberg, Thief River Falls, and LeRoy Sustad, Viking. They, together with their spouses, were seated at the head table with Mr. and Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Myrtle Sackett, Rev. Don Peres and the Rodger Sacketts. Unable to attend was Hans Drotts of Batavia, Ill., one of the original attendants. Centering the head table was a bouquet of red roses, Mrs. Peters' gift from her husband. A similar bouquet graced the guest book table.

The serving table was centered with a pillared, three-tiered anniversary cake decorated with red roses and white wedding bells. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Hugo Anderson, Peters' sister, and Mrs. Gerhard Kast, a friend of the couple. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Flourence Drotts, Mrs. Peters' aunt, and Mrs. Harlan Hallstrom, a niece.

Mrs. Rodger Sackett served the punch and Malinda and Wanda Peters presided at the guest book table and distributed the thank-you notes.

Adding interest at the reception was a picture gallery of the Peters' family and close relatives.

Our-of-town relatives and friends attending were from Madison Lake, Stephen, Viking, Newfolden, St. Hilaire, Warren, Goodridge, Red Lake Falls and Plummer.

For the occasion, Mrs. Peters chose a ruby red dress with matching lace insets in the long, fitted sleeves.

The evening prior to the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Peters hosted a dinner party at the Best Western. Their guests were their son and daughter and their families, together with Mrs. Myrtle Sackett and Mrs. Florence Drotts.

Sow And Hoe Garden Club Elects Officers

Present officer of the Sow and Hoe garden club will head the organization for another term according to an election held at a meeting of the club Tuesday evening, October 30, at the Arnold Gunderson home.

Reelected were Inga Geving, president; Charles Emanuel vice president; Gladys Heinze, secretary; and Quentin Jones, treasurer.

Roll call was answered by members giving program suggests for the coming year.

A moment of silent tribute was paid in memory of Myrtle Engelstad, an active member of the club until her health failed. Members voted to plant a tree at the Pioneer Village in her memory. It was also decided that a plaque be hung at the museum, listing the names of the deceased members of the Sow and Hoe club, the first garden club to plant and tend flower plots in this city. Members also voted that the December meeting will be a noon Sunday dinner at the Inga Geving home.

Quentin Jones was in charge of the program and garden quiz. During the social hour, a gift was presented to the Gundersons for their new home. A dessert lunch was served by Mr. and Mrs. Gunderson.

Sunsdahl and Nelson Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Sunsdahl of Soudan announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Julie, to Duane Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nelson of Park Rapids.

The bride-elect, a granddaughter of Mrs. Halvor Holen of Thief River Falls, is currently employed by the St. Louis county probation department as a community restitution coordinator. Her fiance is chief of police of Brietung, St. Louis township.

A December 29th wedding is planned.

Walfred Olsons To Note 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Walfred Olson will be honored on their 25th wedding anniversary on Saturday, November 10, at an open house at the Edwin Berggren home, 122 North Kendall.

Hours will be from 2 to 6 p.m.

All friends and relatives are welcome to attend.

Orris Paulsruds Of Nielsville Note Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Orris Paulsrud of Nielsville were honored on their 35th wedding anniversary on Sunday, October 14, at an open house at the St. Petri Lutheran church at Nielsville.

Hosting the open house were their children: Ginger Gordon, Ada; Mr. and Mrs. Larry (Lee Ann) Geiselhart and Lynette Paulsrud of Fargo, N.D., and Mr. and Mrs. Doug Paulsrud of Nielsville. They were assisted in the kitchen by Mrs. Paulsrud's sister, Mrs. Thelma Spokely.

Also present were the couple's grandchildren Kimberly and Tracy Gordon, and Heidi, Amy Jo and Timothy Geiselhart. Tracy registered the guests and Kimberly ladled the punch.

For the reception, the table was covered in white lace with a gold underlay. Centering the table was a three-tiered wedding cake decorated in fall colors and topped with a 35th anniversary emblem. On either side were gold candles in crystal holders, a wedding gift 35 years ago from Mrs. Art Jeglum of Buxton, N.D. At the base of the tiered cake was a large sheet cake, also decorated in fall colors. Cutting and serving the cakes, made by Mrs. Edna Bendickson, Crookston, a friend of the family, were Paulsrud's sisters: Mrs. Clarence (Edna) Sargent of Osakis and Mrs. Obert (Carol) Fontaine, Grand Forks, N.D. Mrs. Sam Bratteli, Thief River Falls, a sister-in-law, and Mrs. Thelma Spokely poured the coffee.

Adding a festive air was a bouquet of roses, a gift from Mrs. Clarence Sargent, who was attendant at the wedding on Oct. 14, 1944 when Orris Paulsrud and Julie Brattell of Grygla were married at Nielsville. Since their marriage, the Paulsruds have been engaged in farming.

Unable to attend the anniversary celebration was Mrs. Paulsrud's brother, Hal Brattell of Longview, Tex., who was the other attendant.

Out-of-town relatives and friends present were from Fargo, Cummings, West Fargo, Buxton, and Grand Forks, N.D., Osakis, Thief River Falls, Halstad, Shelly, Erskine, Climax, Ada, Crookston and Fertile.

Children's Clinic Reports Given At DeCor Meeting

Meeting of the DeCor club of the Federated Woman's club was held Thursday at the home of Carla Peterson. Members answered roll by telling what they had done Halloween.

Reports of the Crippled Children and General clinics were given and discussed.

The program, featuring crafts, was presented by Eula Kvikstad. Members participated by making covers for tissue boxes. A dessert lunch was served by Mrs. Peterson.

Members present were Mildred Wick, Bertha Hastad, Geneva Overum, Eula Kvikstad, Ethel Aase, Lillian Aasland and Gladys Isaacson.

Supper Planned By Goodridge Historical Group

Goodridge Area Historical society is planning a potluck supper in recognition of those who had a part in the July Fourth celebrations. This included those who were in the pageant, food stands, booths, games or participated in any way.

Each family attending is asked to bring their choice of a hot dish, salad or sandwiches. The meal, to be held at the Goodridge Community hall, is set for Friday, November 16, beginning at 7:30 p.m. A well-planned program will follow the supper.

Odd Fellows-Rebekahs Will Meet Thursday

Odd Fellow and Rebekah lodges will meet Thursday at 8 p.m., at the Odd Fellows hall.

The Rebekahs will host an official visit from Evalyn Bergsrud of Winona, State warden of the Rebekah Assembly of Minnesota.

A potluck lunch will be served during the social hour that will follow the separate meetings of the lodges.

Thanksgiving Dinner Set for Holt Keen Agers

Holt Keen Agers planned Thanksgiving dinner will be held Friday, November 9, at the Nazareth Lutheran church at Holt.

Serving will begin at one o'clock in place of 12 noon.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Only seldom, do I write "letters to the Editor", but I would like to comment on Dr. Nelson's letter in the November 5 issue.

He speaks of the "city fathers of Brainerd subverting the laws of our state". That has a nasty sound, but is it not true that they used legal means which they had every right to use? They were working within the law, and there was no question of "anarchy" here.

Secondly, has any record been made of a marked increase in dental decay in the Brainerd area these past ten years, in comparison to other localities using fluoride? Has there been such a decrease in these last, that dentists have little work? It would be interesting to know in both cases. Of course I know many factors influence dental decay, and I suspect fluoride is perhaps only a minor factor in prevention.

Last, we are having so much lately of governments "knowing what is best for us" and forcing the solution on often unwilling people. Brainerd is not the only community not wanted water fluoridation, but was one having the courage to fight — using legal means. That still is allowed under our system of government — and let us hope it always will be. Thank you for the chance to express this.

Sincerely,
C.M. Isaacson

Organ Concert Monday Night At St. John's

Bene Hammel

Concert organist Bene Hammel will present a concert on the new organ recently installed at St. John Lutheran church in Thief River Falls on Monday at 8 p.m. Public attendance is invited and no admission will be charged.

A native of Chattanooga, Tenn., Hammel began playing concert under sponsorship of the American guild of organists at the age of 16. While in college he performed at the national (Episcopal) cathedral in Washington, D.C., and St. Thomas (Episcopal) church in New York City. He played the inaugural organ concert in Cincinnati's music hall.

During the first half of the 1979-80 concert season, Hammel will play over 50 concerts and take part in 35 workshops in 19 states from California to New York.

Monday evening's concert at St. John church will include several selections by J.S. Bach and individual numbers by Franz Joseph Haydn, Henry Mulet, Seth Bingham, Karg-Elert and Franz Liszt.

Wheel Chair Securement Rule Begins

Rules governing wheelchair securement devices in motor vehicles will take effect on November 5, according to Minnesota state patrol chief Roger Ledding.

"At that time it will be unlawful to transport a person in a wheelchair unless the wheelchair is secured to the vehicle and the occupant of the wheelchair is restrained by at least one strap of belt encircling the person and the backrest of the wheelchair," said Ledding. "This law applies to all vehicles used to transport persons in wheelchairs, except regularly inspected school buses which are subject to special rules."

According to ledding all securement devices must pass an inspection conducted by the State Patrol. An inspection certificate will be affixed to the lower left corner of the vehicle's windshield upon passing inspection. Securement devices must be inspected annually.

"Since the switch over to approved securement devices cannot be done immediately, presently installed securement devices may be used through December 31, 1980, if the device is in good operating condition and will prevent an occupied wheelchair from moving about in the vehicle," said Ledding. However, he warned that after December 31, 1980, each wheelchair securement device in any vehicle must be of an approved type. Further information about the approved securement devices and their availability will be furnished during inspections.

During the next few weeks the State Patrol will not issue tickets for failure to have an inspection certificate provided the wheelchair is secured. Chief Ledding said this short grace period is necessary to allow time for owners of affected vehicles to comply with the inspection requirements.

Arrangements for inspections can be made with the state patrol district office at Thief River Falls, phone 681-3741.

China To Be Major Market For US Wheat

Mainland China may supply Minnesota wheat producers with a vast new market, according to Minnesota wheat growers vice-president Fred Kreps and western wheat associates executive vice president Gene Vickers. Both Kreps and Vickers will be speaking at the Minnesota association of wheat growers annual convention, November 28, 29 and 30, at the American Inn in East Grand Forks.

"Because of past political situations, the Peoples Republic of China is virtually an untapped market," said Kreps, who recently returned from a trip to Peking.

"Education will play a large part in getting our foot in China's door," noted Vickers. "Once they've learned to accept and use wheat and wheat flour products, however, there's no telling just how far we can go with wheat market expansion in China," Vickers asserted.

Minnesota wheat officials are already exploring the possibility of placing a model bakery in mainland China, to teach the Chinese how to effectively use and make wheat products. Baking seminars would be another step toward educating the Chinese in the use of wheat products.

Kreps and Vickers are just two of several outstanding speakers on the wheat growers convention agenda, according to growers president Jorgen Knutson. "Word is getting around fast that we have an excellent convention planned," said Knutson, who added, "Rooms are already being booked up, so anyone who plans to stay overnight should get their reservations made as soon as possible."

Convention opens 3 p.m. November 28 with a meeting of the resolutions committee. Kreps, Vickers and other wheat executives from all over the world are scheduled to speak Thursday. Former Oklahoma commissioner of agriculture and now deputy undersecretary for USDA commodity programs, Billy Ray Gowdy, is scheduled to speak at the Thursday night banquet. Gowdy recently notified wheat grower officials that he was pleased to accept their invitation, and that he would definitely be attending.

County Board Okays Revenue Budget Tues.

training in Thief River Falls.

A group appeared before the board to discuss problems in relation to County Ditch 21 and the assessment of benefits to property owners. A court case in 1949 had caused some land to be removed from benefiting area of the ditch. Legislation in 1977 permits a review of ditch benefits. The group was advised to petition the board if they desired to initiate action for a review of benefits.

Doug Dehnert of St. Hilaire appeared to re-state his position in opposition to reconstruction of a bridge in St. Hilaire and asked the board to reconsider its decision to proceed with building the bridge. The board discussed the request at length but determined to make no change in its previous position.

Don Grabanski was appointed from the board of commissioners to serve on a committee being organized by the chamber of commerce. The committee would seek a use for the Lincoln high school building and its auditorium if the school district locates new high school facilities elsewhere.

Mary Enerson and Rev. James Bernauer appeared in behalf of the county historical society, stating that maintenance of the historical village now costs approximately $7,000 per year, and requested that amount from the county. After review of revenue sharing funds, the county commissioners redistributed funds to provide for increasing the historical society allocation from $3,500 to $6,000 for the coming year.

Representatives of the state department of public welfare appeared to discuss use of grant funds for chemical dependency in the county. They were informed that the county social services board is in the process of hiring an alcohol counselor for Pennington county.

Plat of property by Don Magner south of Thief River Falls and west of the Red Lake river was approved, as was the preliminary plat by Ray Oen for land east of the river.

Anna Sandberg Hosts Swedish Visitors Here

studies, Miss Olsson works about 100 hours a month in a tea shop which sells 49 different varieties of tea. Anna Karin says she has tried them all and prefers either Chinese tea or some of the flavored kinds. Her father is a landscape artist in arcylics and oils and has traveled on exhibitions, allowing Anna Karin as his only child to visit 21 different countries. Her mother is a dentist.

Both girls speak English well, having learned the language in the eight years of compulsory English education in second throuth ninth grade. Miss Olsson has an advantage in that her mother was reared in the United States and that she has visited here once before several years ago.

The young ladies admitted that the socialized system of Sweden requires high taxation (average taxes are 35 and 40 per cent of income), but also insist that "we get a lot for our taxes". Medical and dental as well as hospital care is available to all at practically no cost and the education system is free in the first nine grades and heavily subsidized in the upper levels.

Both Anna Karins said that they had expected the United States to be more different than their home country in the way people dress and the foods we eat. They have found the countries to be quite similar but Miss Olsson says she noticed more small cars on this trip to the U.S. than she did a few years ago.

Gasoline in Sweden is now $2 to $3 per gallon and seems to be available on a ready basis although conservation is stressed there as well. Miss Olsson has her own car, and older model BMW, which she said gets about 12 kilometers per liter (a mile is 1.609 kilometers and there are 3.785 liters in a U.S. gallon).

From here the girls go to Minneapolis, then on to Jamestown, N.Y., before leaving for Sweden November 17. While in the United States they have been traveling on a Greyhound bus 30-day pass which provides them with economical transportation that allows them to see more of the country than flying would. They came from Washington state to Fargo on one bus which had several changes of drivers enroute. In the last two weeks they said they have spent 84 hours on the bus.

As they were showing pictures from Sweden to Mrs. Sandberg at her apartment at 417 Third St. W., Mrs. Sandberg commented on how much she had enjoyed the visit. "I wish they could stay longer," she said.

AN EXAMPLE of textile work done by Anna Karin Johansson of Stora Bjorka, Sweden, is this miniature mitten. Anna Karin used wool from sheep on her family's farm to form the felt-like material by hand, then did the embroidery and assembly with her own design. She teaches textiles to students 18 years of age and older.

Health Care Proposal Is Introduced

Senator Dave Durenberger has introduced in the Senate an updated version of his competition-based health care bill. Durenberger's health incentives reform act (HIRA) was introduced as the Senate committee on finance began hearings on catastrophic health insurance plans.

In his statement on the floor of the Senate while introducing HIRA, Durenberger said his proposal has received support from many quarters. The bill "has been carefully reviewed and examined by the business community, health providers, insurers, labor and consumers. The comments from these diverse groups have been numerous and helpful. Their best ideas have been incorporated in the version I am introducing today," said the senator.

Durenberger said his bill will control health care costs and improve coverage by encouraging competition among the providers of health care. HIRA focuses on employer-based group health insurance plans and gives employers and employees incentives to be conscious of health care costs.

Currently, most employers select one insurance plan with the hope that the one plan will adequately cover a large number of employees. Differences in the individual needs of employees are rarely taken into consideration.

According to Durenberger's bill, employers of 100 or more employees would be encouraged through tax incentives to offer at least three plans, each from a different insurance carrier, to their workers. The employees would have the option of selection the plan that best met their needs. Persons selecting a less costly plan would receive the price difference in taxable cash or other benefits.

Since insurance carriers would no longer have a monopoly within a company, they would have to compete to provide the most attractive offering. These competing plans, each associated with a limited number of health care providers — doctors, hospitals and others — would be forced to keep costs down.

State Second In Case Rate Of Measles

Despite the fact that reported measles cases in the U.S. are at an all-time low, Minnesota has the second highest reported measles case rate in the nation.

In Minnesota this year, the incidence rate for reported cases of measles is 30.1 per 100,000 population, compared with the U.S. rate of 5.5 per 100,000.

Forty-six of the 87 counties have reported one or more cases. Highest incidence is in Crow Wing county, which has reported 210 cases (a rate of 523 per 100,000 population). Majority of these cases occurred in the Brainerd schools last spring, with four more reported during the summer.

Education commissioner Howard B. Casmey and health commissioner George R. Pettersen point out that the department of health, education and welfare (HEW) set as a national goal the eradication of indigenous (locally transmitted) measles in the U.S. by October of 1982 — a goal that "appears to be realistic", according to Dr. A.G. Dean, the state epidemiologist.

Dean cites four apparent reasons for the Minnesota epidemic: (1) Forty-five per cent of the cases reported in Minnesota either had not received measles vaccine or at best were uncertain about their immunization histories;

(2) Fifteen per cent of the cases occurred in persons immunized before 1968, when now-obsolete recommendations were in effect concerning the age at which children should be immunized, the use of immune globulin, the use of killed virus vaccines;

(3) Thirteen per cent were immunized when they were not yet one year old and never were reimmunized, despite repeated emphasis during the last several years on the importance of reimmunization;

(4) Twenty-seven per cent of the cases were "well immunized"

Henry Buen, 86, Dies Nov. 7; Rites Pending

Henry Buen, 86, of Thief River Falls died this morning (Wednesday) at the CNC unit at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services for Henry Buen are pending. The Belmont Funeral home is in charge of arrangements. A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Ole Easthouse Of Goodridge Dies Tuesday

Ole Easthouse, 85, of Goodridge died Tuesday at Northwestern hospital in this city.

Funeral services for Ole Easthouse will be held Friday at 2 p.m., at the Faith Lutheran church in Goodridge with Rev. Gene Broughton officiating. Interment will be in the Goodridge cemetery.

The body will repose at the Green Funeral home, Thursday afternoon and evening, and at the church for one hour prior to the time of services.

A complete obituary will be published in Monday's edition of the Times.

Bernard Reller, Father of TRF Resident, Dies

Bernard J. Reller, 82, of Waubun, father of Mrs. Cordes Engel of Thief River Falls, died Sunday afternoon at St. Mary's Nursing center at Detroit Lakes.

Mass of the Christian Burial for Bernard J. Reller will be offered Thursday at 11 a.m., at St. Ann's Catholic church at Waubun. Con-celebrants will be Rev. Adrian Foxxe, O.S.B., Rev. Frank Reid and Rev. Rudolph Baumberger, O.S.B. Mrs. James Christianson will serve as organist and Daniel Eikenberry, the soloist. Interment will be in the church cemetery with the Mattson Funeral home, Mahnomen, in charge of arrangements. Recitation of the Rosary will be tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m., at the funeral home.

Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Waubun Fire Department: Michael Kersting, Gerhard Kersting, Lloyd Pavek, Tony Voit and Raymond Carlson.

Active pallbearers will be Richard Kersting, Everett Wermager, Benny Chromy, James Horack, Ronald Moore and Max Voss.

Bernard Reller was born Sept. 15, 1897 at West Union to Frank and Mary Reller. Since 1918, he had made his home at Waubun, where he was employed by Waubun Case and Box factory for a number of years. He also was employed for a time by August Vegts construction company and the Keewatin Sawmill. He served as city constable for a number of years and was Waubun policeman for several years.

He was a member of St. Ann's Catholic church and the Knights of Columbus. He was married in Minneapolis on Aug. 1, 1926 to Anna Ahles.

Surviving are his wife, three daughters: Mrs. Henry (Bernice) Horack of Waubun, Mrs. Cordes (Lorraine) Engel, 306 St. Paul Avenue South, Thief River Falls, and Mrs. Mary Stangle of Little Falls; seven grandchildren, and six brothers: Frank Reller of Albany, Albert and Victor, Little Fork; Henry, Ogema; and Leo and Paul, Waubun.

He was preceded in death by his parents, four brothers and one sister.

Mabel Krats Services Held At Redeemer

Funeral services for Mabel Krats, 87, of rural St. Hilaire, were held Tuesday at 2 p.m., at Redeemer Lutheran church. Mrs. Krats died Friday morning at the Hillcrest Nursing home in Red Lake Falls where she had been a resident for the past several years.

Rev. Keith Prekker officiated at the services. Mrs. William Halbasch was the organist and Jan Nordin, the soloist. Interment was in the Clara cemetery, rural St. Hilaire, with the Belmont Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers were Mrs. Krats' grandchildren: Wayne Dehkes, Mark Pearson, Thomas Krats, Douglas Krats, David Krats and Dean Krats.

Serving as active pallbearers were Douglas Peterson, Donald Erickson, Howard Peterson Verdeen Grove, James Engelstad and Carl Peterson, Jr.

Mrs. Krats, the former Mabel Peterson, was born Feb. 16, 1892 in Wyandotte township, Pennington county, to Anton and Alma Peterson. She grew to womanhood in that area and later worked for a few years in Crookston.

On Sept. 27, 1917, she was united in marriage to Erick Krats at St. Hilaire. The couple lived in Minneapolis until 1938, when they returned to Wyandotte township. Since 1971, she had made her home at the Hillcrest Nursing home. She is survived by three sons: Kenneth Krats, Rantoul, Ill.; Carl, Minneapolis; and Roy, International Falls; two daughters: Mrs. Reynold (Alba) Dehkes, Osakis; and Mrs. Barbara Pearson, Thief River Falls; 16 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren; a brother, Elmer Peterson, Skokie, Ill, and one sister, Selma Peterson, Chicago, Ill.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in 1972, a son, her parents, four brothers and three sisters.

Mandius Vake Services Set For Thursday

Funeral services for Mandius Vake, 73, who died Sunday at his home in Mayfield township, Pennington county, have been scheduled.

Services will be held Thursday at 2 p.m., at the Ebenezer Lutheran church, Mayfield township, with Rev. Clifford Randall officiating. Mrs. Gelene Lundeen will be the organist and Mrs. Grace Hammer, the soloist. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Alton Carlson, Russell Jesperson, Tilmer Johnson, Lyle Olson, Calvin Sorenson and Myles Swanson.

The body is reposing at the Green Funeral home and will repose at the church for one hour prior to the time of services.

Mandius Vake, a son of the late Anders and Ingebor Homme Vake, was born Oct. 7, 1906 in Chester township, Polk county. As an infant, he moved with the family to Star township, Pennington county. There he attended school and grew to manhood. In 1931, he moved to Mayfield township, where he was engaged in farming. Later, he worked for 10 years in the U.S. Steel Mines at Chisholm. Since returning from Chisholm, he had lived on his farm in Mayfield.

He was a member of the Ebenezer Lutheran church.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Olai (Esther) Langie, East Grand Forks; two brothers, Hans Vake, Thief River Falls, and Elling of Chisholm; six nephews and nine nieces.

He was preceded in death by six brothers: Tom, Knute, Ike, Carl, Isaac and Gunder, a niece and two nephews.

Russell Young Of Devils Lake Dies Sunday

Russell A. Young, 82, of Devils Lake, N.D., father of Allen K. Young of St. Hilaire, died Sunday at the Mercy hospital.

Funeral services for Russell A. Young were held today (Wednesday) at 2 p.m., at the Lawton Lutheran church with Rev. Mel Rau officiating. Interment was in the Lawton cemetery with the Aaker Funeral home of Lakota, N.D., in charge of arrangements.

Russell A. Young was born March 24, 1897 at Lakeside, Ontario, Canada. In 1906, he moved to Brocket, N.D.

Young was a veteran of World War I. He served in the U.S. Army in France where he was gassed and wounded.

On Feb. 6, 1937, he was married at Devils Lake to Clara Strate. He was a longtime employee of the Ramsey County highway department, where he was employed at the time of his retirement. The couple moved to Grand Forks in 1964 and lived there until moving to Devils Lake four years ago.

He was a member of the American Legion and the Disabled American Veterans.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Robert (Lenelle) Morris, Salem, Ore.; two sons: James E. Young, Brocket, N.D., and Allen K. Young, St. Hilaire; four granddaughters, and two sisters: Mrs. Gertrude Waterson, Devils Lake, and Mrs. Arthur (Geralda) Herk, Valley City, N.D.

He was preceded in death by a son, Gary, who died in 1940.

Mondale Is Speaker For Farmers Union

Vice President Walter Mondale will be featured speaker at the Minnesota Farmers union 38th annual convention to be held November 18-20 in Bloomington.

In addition to hearing Mondale's address Monday evening, November 19, the Farmers union convention delegates will gather to form the policy their organization will pursue in the coming year, hear from several other prominent speakers, and take part in panel presentations on two issues of critical importance to farmers at this time.

Farmer delegates will get a chance to question four experts about the energy and transportation outlook for agriculture on Monday afternoon. Richard Wilson, president of the Missouri based Agri-Trans corporation, a interregional cooperative barge line operating on the U.S. inland waterway system, will discuss a wide range of transporation concerns.

Shelby Southard, transportation expert with the cooperative league of the U.S.A., will give a presentation on the league's plan for a railroad transportation cooperative developed along the lines of the Rural Electric association. They will be joined by Curt Sorteberg, a National Farmers union alcohol fuels expert, and a top ranking official, yet to be announced, from the U.S. department of energy.

Tuesday morning, November 20, the conventioners will take on a broad ranging discussion about farming's future when a second panel will lead debate on the economic and social issues that affect the structure of American agriculture and rural communities: Secretary of agriculture Bob Bergland called for a nationwide dialogue on the issue at the National Farmers union convention last spring.

Susan Sechler, who directs the U.S. department of agriculture project that is collecting data for the dialogue, will speak as a panel member. She will be joined by Gene Wenstrom, Elbow Lake farmer and former state legislator who is heading a special farm structure research project in Minnesota. Marty Strange, co-director of the center for rural affairs based in Walthill, Neb., is also a panel member.

Barbara Lindemann Schlei, administrator of the U.S. department of agriculture's agriculture marketing service and Gerry Morrow, regional marketing manager for CENEX (Farmers Union central exchange, a regional farm supply cooperative) will speak to the delegation about the future of farmer cooperatives during Monday morning's program.

Other important convention speakers include National Farmers union president Tony T. Dechant, Minnesota Farmers union president Cy Carpenter and state commissioner of agriculture Mark Seetin. Dechant, who has served for 13 years as the president of the 300,000 farm member National Farmers union, will not seek reelection at the next national convention. His successor will be elected next March. A special "president's night" program will honor Dechant on Sunday evening.

Minnesota Farmers union is made up of more than 24,000 Minnesota farm families.

State Helps 10 Farmers To Buy Farms

Ten more Minnesotans have joined the ranks of family farm owners under the state guaranteed farm security loan program, raising to 180 the number of qualified families granted the ownership assistance thus far, reports agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

The 10 new loans recommended by the farm security advisory council at its October meeting and approved by the commissioner, put a 90 per cent state guarantee on the $2,113,500 financing of the purchase of 1,830 acres of Minnesota farm land.

October farm security loan guarantees raised the accumulative totals to just short of $30 million financing on 29,513 acres of farm land in 51 Minnesota counties.

Recipients of the October Farm Security loan guarantees are:

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moore, Osakis, $100,000 lender and seller sponsored loan for a 125 acre dairy farm in Todd county;

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Huls, Avon, $143,000 seller sponsored loan for a 160 acre hog farm in Stearns county;

Joseph Van Overbeke, Jr., Marshall, $119,500 seller sponsored loan for a 120 acre hog farm in Lyon county;

Rudolph Storm, Dover, $349,000 seller sponsored loan for a 280 acre hog farm in Olmsted county;

Mr. and Mrs. James Schawe, Danube, $460,000 seller sponsored loan for a 240 acre dairy farm in Renville county;

Mr. and Mrs. James Conroy, $172,000 lender and seller sponsored loan for a 200 acre crops farm in Traverse county;

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomson, Ortonville, $190,000 seller sponsored loan for a 305 acre beef and hog farm in Big Stone county;

Mr. and Mrs. Barry Ervin, Montevideo, $224,000 lender and seller sponsored loan for a 160 acre hog farm in Chippewa and Renville counties;

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rosendahl, Lakefield, $224,000 lender and seller sponsored loan for a 160 acre crops farm in Pipestone county;

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pauling, Lakefield, $126,000 seller sponsored loan for an 80 acre hog farm in Jackson county.

NEWS OF TECHNOLOGY

Research And Development — A Company's Lifeblood

How many companies spend nearly $500,000 every working hour on research and development? There aren't very many, but one of them is Siemens AG, the German-based electrical and electronics giant. This year the company will invest over $1.2 billion, or 8% of its sales on R&D—twice as much as is spent by the average U.S. electrical manufacturer. Siemens alone accounts for about 13% of total R&D expenditures in German industry.

Why this emphasis on R&D? It is axiomatic that a successful R&D program not only assures a company's future but is vital to its growth. New markets open up for companies that innovate. The handful of world leaders in technology are distinguished by their exceptionally high research expenditures and Siemens has for many years been among the leaders.

A major task of Siemens has been to channel the results of this vast R&D activity quickly and systematically into marketable products. For example, nearly half of all products sold by the company are less than five years old, while three-quarters are only five to ten years old. These products are enormously varied, ranging from tiny computers to huge electric power generators, from super-fast laser printers to the latest cancer therapy equipment.

Although accounting for only a small portion of its parent company's world-wide sales, Siemens Corporation, the fast growing U.S. subsidiary, is no piker when it comes to R&D spending. This year it has budgeted $21 million for R&D activity.

Beyond the benefits to the company itself, research and development is vital to the well-being of nations. This well-being depends upon such factors as industrial production, transportation, information distribution and above all, the generation and distribution of energy. The growing scarcity of raw materials and energy resources and the limits of what the environment can absorb are a permanent challenge to industry to develop new and better products, equipment and systems.

Seminar On Reducing Pain Set Nov. 14th

Thief River Falls AVTI is offering a two-hour seminar entitled "Outsmarting Pain: Psychological Strategies for Reducing Physical Discomfort". Seminar will be held Wednesday, November 14 from 8 to 10 p.m. in the CNC chapel at Northwestern hospital.

Dr. Steve Levinson, clinical director of the day-night psychiatric unit at Northwestern hospital, will conduct this seminar designed for the general public. His lecture will provide an introduction to the theory and practice of psychological approaches to controlling pain.

Based on the observation that the experience of pain can be powerfully influenced by readily controlled mental events, Dr. Levinson describes methods by which hurting persons can use their own mental abilities to lessen the discomfort occasioned by disease or injury of any kind.

To pre-register contact adult education, AVTI, phone 681-5424.

SBA District Office Cited For Service

Minnesota district office of the Small Business administration has been selected as the federal agency's district office of the year in the six-state Region V. Employees of the office were honored in special ceremonies.

Participants included Harold A. Theiste of Washington, SBA's Associate Deputy Administrator for Programs; Mrs. Donna R. Harrigan of Chicago, the agency's regional administrator; and Paul W. Jansen, the SBA's Minnesota district director.

This marks the third time in five years the office has been selected for the regional honor. In 1975, the office was chosen as SBA's top district office in the nation.

For the regional award, the Minnesota office was chosen from among seven comparable offices in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois.

Mrs. Harrigan said the Minnesota office had made marked gains in the recently concluded fiscal year 1979.

She cited particularly an 18.5 per cent increase in total dollars loaned and a 143 per cent increase in contracting assistance to minorities.

Minnesota SBA office has 50 employees and is headquartered at 12 South Sixth street in Minneapolis.

Savings Bonds Affordable Securities

Almost all securities that are issued by governments or corporations are designed for large investors. A few cost $1,000, but most cost at least $5,000 or $10,000. This is far beyond the reach of most people.

There is one security that everyone can afford — United States savings bonds. EE bonds come in many denominations, ranging from $50 to $10,000. But with a purchase price of half their face amount, they can be purchased for as little as $25.

Making them even easier to buy, bonds can be purchased in regular installments, sometimes as low as $1.25, alloted from an employee's paycheck through the payroll savings plan. Payroll savings encourages regular, effortless saving for everybody — no matter what their income.

Bonds purchased this way yield 6.5 per cent interest when held five years or more, are exempt from state or local income taxes, and are fully guaranteed against any loss by the United States. Changes in money market conditions do not affect savings bonds.

Bonds are recognized by organized labor and by business to be an effective method of building personal financial security. Unions have been among the bond program's strongest backers, and industry leaders have been in the forefront of volunteer efforts on behalf of bonds.

As a result, an estimated 9.5 million Americans now buy bonds regularly through the payroll savings plan. They have found savings bonds to be a good way to increase their savings, and a good source of ready cash in time of need.

Without broker's fees, without market fluctuations, and without any chance of loss, savings bonds are a security that can be counted on. And, at the price, it is no wonder they have become the worker's security.

LEGAL BRIEFS

Jury Duty Is A Citizen's Responsibility

By Michael F. Colley
President
Association of Trial Lawyers of America

As U.S. citizens, we are likely to have only two opportunities to take a direct part in the process of our government. One is when we elect public officials to the administrative, legislative and judicial branches of local, state or national government.

The other is when we are personally called upon for jury duty to shield or protect our fellow Americans from possible judicial or administrative injustice in the courts.

Michael F. Colley

Each year the U.S. court system calls upon at least a million American citizens to serve as jurors on some 200,000 juries. Just about anyone can be called to serve as a juror, but there are some general qualifications.

In most states, you must be an American citizen, a local resident, at least 21 years of age, have good character, ordinary intelligence, and be able to read, write and understand the English language.

The assembly of a jury panel is normally carried out by a jury commissioner who selects names from a variety of sources such as voter registration rolls, census records, property and tax rolls, vehicle registration records and even city telephone directories.

After a person has qualified as a juror, their name is then placed in a general ballot box from which all trial jurors are drawn as they are needed.

Drawing names for jury duty must be done publicly, as it is the law. After the desired number of names have been drawn, each juror is served a notice specifying the time and place where he or she is required to appear. This is not a request that can be ignored. It is a legal summons and must be obeyed.

But jury duty doesn't take forever. Usually, a jury duty call runs from five days to three weeks, unless you become involved in a lengthy criminal trial or if you are on a grand jury.

Pay for jury duty ranges from a low of $3 a day in Colorado to a high of $16 a day in Massachusetts.

Being summoned for jury duty and its impending responsibility is an honor, and you should not regard it as an unwanted intrusion into your personal life. It recognizes that you are a U.S. citizen and a resident in good standing of your community.

It also means that you will have an opportunity to play an active part in our democratic form of government and see that justice is done in our court system.

Annual Sheep Day Scheduled At Crookston

Fourth annual sheep production day is set at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston, on Thursday, November 29. Registration and refreshments begin at 9:30 a.m. in the auditorium of the agricultural research center.

Theme this year is, "Confinement Sheep Production — an Alternative for Northwestern Minnesota?" Program will open with a top-level extension veterinarian, Dr. Kurt Wohlgemuth from North Dakota state university, who will discuss the health problems one can expect with confined sheep management. Neal Martin, extension agronomist, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, follows and will speak briefly on producing forages for sheep.

Marvin Norby, Fairview, Mont., a successful sheep confinement operator, will speak on why he confines sheep even though he lives in the open range country. Bob Jacobs, extension animal husbandman, will address the group briefly on "Sheep Production During the Past 40 Years".

Harvey Windels, meat animal scientist, Northwest experiment station, will address the group and share some of the lambing barn fundamentals learned with the confined sheep operation. Bob Jordan, animal scientist, St. Paul, will talk on "Nutrition for the Ewe From Flushing to the Lambing Pen".

Sheep producers, their bankers, vo ag men and extension agents are especially encouraged to be on hand. Program details will be mailed to all sheep producers who have previously attended sheep days at the Northwest station.

New Proposal For Refuse Disposal Set

In response to public comments, the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) has revised its proposed changes in refuse-disposal rules for rural areas. New proposals will be discussed at public hearings November 15 in Detroit Lakes and Grand Rapids, November 19 in Roseville and November 20 in Brainerd.

Proposed changes to Minnesota Rule SW-11 would allow some areas with less than 2,500 residents to operate "modified landfills" if certain conditions are met. Modified landfills would have less-strict operating standards than those currently governing sanitary landfills, which now apply statewide for solid waste disposal.

Current regulations require all sanitary landfills to cover refuse daily with a layer of soil. Proposed rules would require modified landfills to cover their waste once a week from May 1 to November 30 and once a month from December 1 to April 30.

The MPCA proposed the less-stringent standards in response to complaints from rural counties that current sanitary landfill standards are too strict and expensive for small rural landfills to meet. Proposals are aimed at cutting waste-disposal costs without harming rural environmental quality.

The MPCA held seven hearings last summer on the proposed changes. Based on comments from interested citizens, the original proposal was altered in three ways.

(1) A distance requirement, which would have permitted modified landfills only if they were at least 30 miles from an existing sanitary landfill, was dropped. Instead, modified landfills could be permitted if economic and environmental analyses show that no practical alternative exists, such as canister systems, transfer stations, or the use of existing sanitary landfills.

(2) A modified landfill would not be permitted if it would cause "adverse economic and environmental impact" on existing permitted solid waste facilities.

(3) Modified landfills would not be allowed to accept hazardous wastes.

In addition, the proposed rule-changes would allow some open burning of certain materials — wood-demolition and tree wastes which are bulky and hard to bury. However, an MPCA burning permit and permission from local authorities still would be required.

The hearings schedule is: November 15, Detroit Lakes area vocational technical institute, multi-purpose room, south one-half, Highway 34 East of Detroit Lakes, convening at 10 a.m.

November 15, Itasca community college, Wilson hall, Room 137, Route 3 East of Grand Rapids, convening at 7 p.m.

November 19, Minnesota pollution control agency board room, 1935 West county road B-2, Roseville, convening at 10 a.m.

November 20, Crow Wing county social service building, meeting room No. 1, East Laurel and Fourth streets, Brainerd, convening at 1 p.m.

Johnson/Olsen Musical Duo To Be At St. John

Johnson-Olsen, a Christian Performance Ministry team from Minneapolis will be in Thief River Falls Sunday and will present the 10:30 morning worship service at St. John Lutheran church.

Kurt Johnson, lead vocalist of the team, has been in professional Christian performance for over three years. He majored in vocal music at Bemidji State University and Concordia college, St. Paul. He also served as director of development for Lutheran Island camp at Henning.

Jimi Olsen has been playing stringed instruments for over 15 years and with his experience carries a good share of the difficult instrumental selections. He attended Concordia college, St. Paul, and has been in professional Christian performance for nearly two years.

The duo will offer professional quality entertainment in a worshipful atmosphere with music and a message for all ages. Scripture based music will feature over 12 different stringed instruments. Included will be the guitar, banjo, bass guitar, steel guitar, mandolin, autoharp, electric guitar and dulcimer.

UM Invites HS Seniors To Scholars Day

Some 2,000 top-ranking high school seniors from throughout the state of Minnesota and their parents have been invited to participate in scholars day at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, Friday.

One purpose of the day is to expose the students to the university's college of liberal arts.

Part of the day will be devoted to talks by leading faculty members in the humanities and fine arts, social sciences and natural sciences. Subjects covered will range from "Theater Magic" to "The Development of Artificial Organs: Pitfalls and Progress in Imitating Nature." Main speakers will include Walter Heller, Regents' professor of economics, and Pulitzer Prize winning composer Dominick Argento. Nineteen other speakers will also give addresses.

The day will also include an open forum on colleges and careers moderated by the director of the CLA Career development office; a discussion of the honors program; a Minnesota Scholars congress; and a forum for parents.

Parents forum will include discussion of the ways families develop, the kinds of changes parents and adult children can expect to experience during college years and ways they can help each other.

Information will also be available for parents who want to return to school themselves.

Student participants in Scholars day were selected on the basis of test scores and the recommendations of high school counselors.

Garnishment Not Easy Procedure To Satisfy Debt

With inflation claiming a larger percentage of people's paychecks, few persons are anxious to lose more. The prospect of a garnishment against one's wages, then, is likely to be met with both personal and financial depression in even the most stable of workers, notes the Minnesota Supreme court's information office.

Garnishment is also one of the areas of law that has attracted more than its share of rumors. Some of the commonly-held fears about garnishment have been stripped away over the past decade by court cases and legislation which now afford more constitutional protection to a person who might be faced with garnishment.

For example, there is now a strict limit on the amount that can be taken from a paycheck on a garnishment. In addition, certain legal processes that must be followed give a debtor a circle of protection that didn't exist years ago.

Exactly what is garnishment? It is a legal process that can be used by a creditor, that is, a person or company owed a legal debt, to collect the money. If a garnishment is permitted, the employer of the debtor, or person who owes the money, can be ordered to hold the sum from the employee-debtor's paycheck. But, there are limits on how and when garnishment can be used.

As an example, suppose that Frank Smith owes money to ABC Furniture company for purchases on credit. ABC, as the creditor, has carried a past due account and now wishes to collect.

Before any garnishment steps can be taken, ABC must bring a lawsuit against Frank. Frank will get notice of ABC's claims when a summons and complaint are served on him. This notice is actually Frank's first protection against garnishment. Frank has the opportunity to raise any defenses to ABC's claims, for example, that the debt was already paid or that the items he received were defective. ABC can proceed with garnishment only if Frank does not file an answer to the lawsuit, a default, or if ABC wins in court.

Frank's second line of protection enters if ABC prevails and gets or can get a judgement against Frank. But, Frank's wages still may be exempt from garnishment. ABC must send out a "Garnishment Exemption Notice" 10 days before an intended garnishment. If Frank receives any type of welfare assistance — such as aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) or supplemental security income (SSI) — or has received any in the last six months, his pay is exempt from garnishment altogether, and no money can be taken. Or, Frank could be exempt if he had been an inmate in a correctional institution during the previous six months. To claim an exemption, Frank fills out the form he was sent and returns it to ABC or its attorney.

This notice serves another purpose: it puts Frank on the alert to a pending garnishment. Sometimes a debtor might be able to contact the creditor and work out a voluntary payment plan to avoid garnishment.

People are protected from garnishment in other ways, too. A person who has a low income may not be subject to garnishment. If Frank's weekly take-home pay (pay after tax and social security deductions) is less than 40 times the federal minimum hourly wage, Frank cannot have his wages garnished. This limit comes to $116 a week or less, although the amount will increase to $124 in 1980.

Even if Frank's earnings can be subject to a garnishment, there are restraints. Unlike earlier years, Frank must be left with enough money to live on. The maximum amount that can be taken from his income is one-fourth of his pay. But, in any case, Frank must be left with at least $116 to feed himself and family (again, 40 times the minimum wage.) These rules and others seek to assure that no one is deprived of bread and board because of a garnishment order.

Probably the thing that worries people most about garnishment is that they will lose their jobs because of it. Here's one more protection of the law: an employer generally cannot fire an employee because of a garnishment. Only after an employee's wages have been garnished for three separate debts could the employee be let go.

Garnishment is often complicated. Debtors may have legitimate claims against their creditors or may be able to take steps to negotiate a settlement and avoid a garnishment. When such situations arise, it's always best to contact an attorney, as well as to be aware of the current protections provided by law against the abuses of garnishment, the court information office suggests.

'79 TOPS Rally Has Awards, Skits, Songs

The 1979 Northwestern Minnesota fall rally for TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) entitled, "How the Waist was Won" was conducted in the Lincoln high school cafeteria Saturday.

Rally included sing alongs, the introduction of chapter queen, coronation of rally royalty, wedding apparel parade, officer awards, best losers, and alumni and graduating KOPS (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly). Skits and contests were also performed throughout the day.

Chapter queens are selected for losing the most weight in a year from their original starting date until their goal is reached. Best losers are selected for losing the most weight in a year, while alumni KOPS are those who lose the most weight in a year and who are able to keep it off. Wedding apparel parade included four women who were able to wear their wedding dresses after losing their desired amount of weight while in TOPS.

Rallies are conducted every year, according to Dorothy Nelson, TOPS member. They are usually conducted in Thief River Falls because of the city's central location, she said.

"TOPS is a weight reducing organization that is based on group therapy and incentives," she said. The organization is based also on doctor recommended diets. Meetings are at St. Bernard's church at 7:15 p.m. Monday with weigh-ins at 6 and 7 p.m. Recently a new club was started Friday at 9:30 a.m. For more information on these meetings, or on the new club, interested persons may call 681-6432.

Handicapped Support Group Being Formed

A parent support group for children with any type of physical or mental handicap is being formed for the Thief River Falls area with an organizational meeting scheduled for Thursday, November 15, at 8 p.m. at United Methodist church in Thief River Falls.

Parents of handicapped youngsters or others interested in being advocates for the handicapped are encouraged to attend. The group expects to increase public awareness of needs and rights of the handicapped and to deal with problem areas which may arise. Persons with questions prior to the meeting may call Mrs. Linda Taylor at 681-7489.

Road Contract Is Awarded In Crookston

Contracts totaling $648,848 have been awarded in Crookston, the Minnesota department of transportation (MnDOT) announced, acting for the city.

Minn-Kota Excavating, Inc., Minneapolis, was awarded a contract for grading and aggregate base and for a storm sewer to be installed on 0.7 mile of Barrette street between Central avenue and Fisher avenue.

Work is scheduled to begin within 10 calendar days after date of notice of contract approval, and to be completed within 75 working days.

Fish As Pets Need Special Attention

by Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

Pet owners in growing numbers are becoming fish enthusiasts. Aquariums in pet shops and dime stores are well stocked with a wide selection ranging from the hardy goldfish to exotic, saltwater tropical fish.

Novice fish fanciers often make the mistake of buying the fish first and setting up the aquarium second. This is often fatal to the fish. Water is a fish's total environment, and should be carefully prepared in advance.

If the water supply in your area contains chlorine or fluoride compounds, it is essential that they be eliminated. Chlorine will evaporate if the water is aged in a wide-mouthed, open container for two or three days. Aging, however, will not eliminate the fluoride compounds. These can be neutralized by adding a chemical compound available in pet shops. Water for a saltwater aquarium is prepared in this same fashion, with the addition of a special blend of "salt," also available at the pet store.

When the water is ready, the tank can be partly filled and plants rooted in a layer of coarse, washed sand. Plants should be arranged on a slight slope from back to front, and the rest of the water added. Finally, the filter, pump and thermostat should be positioned, and the filtration system started. In a day or two the water temperature will stabilize, the pump will remove any passing cloudiness and the aquarium will be ready for the fish.

Fish owners are often tempted to overstock their aquariums. In a tank with no aeration system, you should calculate one inch of fish (excluding tail) per gallon of water. A good air pump will let you double the stocking capacity of the tank, since water in motion will absorb a great deal more oxygen. The fish you stock should be compatible in size and temperament. With a little study, you can learn about individual differences in varieties — those fish that do best in pairs and those that tolerate other smaller fish.

Since one sick fish can infect all others in the aquarium, choose your specimens carefully. The fish should swim evenly, and have no spots or other signs of fungus on its body. If the tail is not in good condition or the body is misshapen, you should choose another fish.

The work is not over when your fish have adjusted to their new home. Water in a functioning aquarium is a constantly changing medium; waste products from the plants and fish, minerals dissolving from decorative rocks and water added to compensate for evaporation can change the water's pH (the acid-base ratio). A pH kit can help you determine the water's acid level and adjust it to your fishes' needs.

Even in a well-regulated aquarium, you may eventually notice a fish with suspicious white spots, or one with limp fins that stays near the bottom. These are only two of the signs that can indicate illness. Ich, the most common disease of aquarium fish, is identified by white pinhead-sized spots scattered over the body and fins. Fuzzy, irregular cotton-like patches on the fish are signs of fungal infection. They generally occur on a fish that already has a bruise or other skin injury.

Treatment for these problems varies. Bacterial infections are best controlled by antibiotics, while fungus growths can be treated with dilute antiseptic solutions. Often a warm saltwater bath can be used to encourage parasites to loosen their hold on the fish's skin, so the parasites can be exposed to the proper medication. Your veterinarian may be able to recommend a reference book that will list the proper concentrations and types of remedies for your tropical fish.

Jury Duty Is A Citizen's Responsibility

By Michael F. Colley
President
Association of Trial Lawyers of America

As U.S. citizens, we are likely to have only two opportunities to take a direct part in the process of our government. One is when we elect public officials to the administrative, legislative and judicial branches of local, state or national government.

The other is when we are personally called upon for jury duty to shield or protect our fellow Americans from possible judicial or administrative injustice in the courts.

Each year the U.S. court system calls upon at least a million American citizens to serve as jurors on some 200,000 juries. Just about anyone can be called to serve as a juror, but there are some general qualifications.

Michael F. Colley

In most states, you must be an American citizen, a local resident, at least 21 years of age, have good character, ordinary intelligence, and be able to read, write and understand the English language.

The assembly of a jury panel is normally carried out by a jury commissioner who selects names from a variety of sources such as voter registration rolls, census records, property and tax rolls, vehicle registration records and even city telephone directories.

After a person has qualified as a juror, their name is then placed in a general ballot box from which all trial jurors are drawn as they are needed.

Drawing names for jury duty must be done publicly, as it is the law. After the desired number of names have been drawn, each juror is served a notice specifying the time and place where he or she is required to appear. This is not a request that can be ignored. It is a legal summons and must be obeyed.

But jury duty doesn't take forever. Usually, a jury duty call runs from five days to three weeks, unless you become involved in a lengthy criminal trial or if you are on a grand jury.

Pay for jury duty ranges from a low of $3 a day in Colorado to a high of $16 a day in Massachusetts.

Being summoned for jury duty and its impending responsibility is an honor, and you should not regard it as an unwanted intrusion into your personal life. It recognizes that you are a U.S. citizen and a resident in good standing of your community.

It also means that you will have an opportunity to play an active part in our democratic form of government and see that justice is done in our court system.

Savings Bonds Affordable Securities

Almost all securities that are issued by governments or corporations are designed for large investors. A few cost $1,000, but most cost at least $5,000 or $10,000. This is far beyond the reach of most people.

There is one security that everyone can afford — United States savings bonds. EE bonds come in many denominations, ranging from $50 to $10,000. But with a purchase price of half their face amount, they can be purchased for as little as $25.

Making them even easier to buy, bonds can be purchased in regular installments, sometimes as low as $1.25, alloted from an employee's paycheck through the payroll savings plan. Payroll savings encourages regular, effortless saving for everybody — no matter what their income.

Bonds purchased this way yield 6.5 per cent interest when held five years or more, are exempt from state or local income taxes, and are fully guaranteed against any loss by the United States. Changes in money market conditions do not affect savings bonds.

Bonds are recognized by organized labor and by business to be an effective method of building personal financial security. Unions have been among the bond program's strongest backers, and industry leaders have been in the forefront of volunteer efforts on behalf of bonds.

As a result, an estimated 9.5 million Americans now buy bonds regularly through the payroll savings plan. They have found savings bonds to be a good way to increase their savings, and a good source of ready cash in time of need.

Without broker's fees, without market fluctuations, and without any chance of loss, savings bonds are a security that can be counted on. And, at the price, it is no wonder they have become the worker's security.

Annual Sheep Day Scheduled At Crookston

Fourth annual sheep production day is set at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston, on Thursday, November 29. Registration and refreshments begin at 9:30 a.m. in the auditorium of the agricultural research center.

Theme this year is, "Confinement Sheep Production — an Alternative for Northwestern Minnesota?" Program will open with a top-level extension veterinarian, Dr. Kurt Wohlgemuth from North Dakota state university, who will discuss the health problems one can expect with confined sheep management. Neal Martin, extension agronomist, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, follows and will speak briefly on producing forages for sheep.

Marvin Norby, Fairview, Mont., a successful sheep confinement operator, will speak on why he confines sheep even though he lives in the open range country. Bob Jacobs, extension animal husbandman, will address the group briefly on "Sheep Production During the Past 40 Years".

Harvey Windels, meat animal scientist, Northwest experiment station, will address the group and share some of the lambing barn fundamentals learned with the confined sheep operation. Bob Jordan, animal scientist, St. Paul, will talk on "Nutrition for the Ewe-From-Flushing to the Lambing Pen".

Sheep producers, their bankers, vo ag men and extension agents are especially encouraged to be on hand. Program details will be mailed to all sheep producers who have previously attended sheep days at the Northwest station.

New Proposal For Refuse Disposal Set

In response to public comments, the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) has revised its proposed changes in refuse-disposal rules for rural areas. New proposals will be discussed at public hearings November 15 in Detroit Lakes and Grand Rapids, November 19 in Roseville and November 20 in Brainerd.

Proposed changes to Minnesota Rule SW-11 would allow some areas with less than 2,500 residents to operate "modified landfills" if certain conditions are met. Modified landfills would have less-strict operating standards than those currently governing sanitary landfills, which now apply statewide for solid waste disposal.

Current regulations require all sanitary landfills to cover refuse daily with a layer of soil. Proposed rules would require modified landfills to cover their waste once a week from May 1 to November 30 and once a month from December 1 to April 30.

The MPCA proposed the less-stringent standards in response to complaints from rural counties that current sanitary landfill standards are too strict and expensive for small rural landfills to meet. Proposals are aimed at cutting waste-disposal costs without harming rural environmental quality.

The MPCA held seven hearings last summer on the proposed changes. Based on comments from interested citizens, the original proposal was altered in three ways.

(1) A distance requirement, which would have permitted modified landfills only if they were at least 30 miles from an existing sanitary landfill, was dropped. Instead, modified landfills could be permitted if economic and environmental analyses show that no practical alternative exists, such as canister systems, transfer stations, or the use of existing sanitary landfills.

(2) A modified landfill would not be permitted if it would cause "adverse economic and environmental impact" on existing permitted solid waste facilities.

(3) Modified landfills would not be allowed to accept hazardous wastes.

In addition, the proposed rule-changes would allow some open burning of certain materials — wood-demolition and tree wastes which are bulky and hard to bury. However, an MPCA burning-permit and permission from local authorities still would be required.

The hearings schedule is:

November 15, Detroit Lakes area vocational technical institute, multi-purpose room, south one-half, Highway 34 East of Detroit Lakes, convening at 10 a.m.

November 15, Itasca community college, Wilson hall, Room 137, Route 3 East of Grand Rapids, convening at 7 p.m.

November 19, Minnesota pollution control agency board room, 1935 West county road B-2, Roseville, convening at 10 a.m.

November 20, Crow Wing county social service building, meeting room No. 1, East Laurel and Fourth streets, Brainerd, convening at 1 p.m.

Johnson/Olsen Musical Duo To Be At St. John

Johnson-Olsen, a Christian Performance Ministry team from Minneapolis will be in Thief River Falls Sunday and will present the 10:30 morning worship service at St. John Lutheran church.

Kurt Johnson, lead vocalist of the team, has been in professional Christian performance for over three years. He majored in vocal music at Bemidji State University and Concordia college, St. Paul. He also served as director of development for Lutheran Island camp at Henning.

Jimi Olsen has been playing stringed instruments for over 15 years and with his experience carries a good share of the difficult instrumental selections. He attended Concordia college, St. Paul, and has been in professional Christian performance for nearly two years.

The duo will offer professional quality entertainment in a worshipful atmosphere with music and a message for all ages. Scripture based music will feature over 12 different stringed instruments. Included will be the guitar, banjo, bass guitar, steel guitar, mandolin, autoharp, electric guitar and dulcimer.

UM Invites HS Seniors To Scholars Day

Some 2,000 top-ranking high school seniors from throughout the state of Minnesota and their parents have been invited to participate in scholars day at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, Friday.

One purpose of the day 's to expose the students to the university's college of liberal arts.

Part of the day will be devoted to talks by leading faculty members in the humanities and fine arts, social sciences and natural sciences. Subjects covered will range from "Theater Magic" to "The Development of Artificial Organs: Pitfalls and Progress in Imitating Nature." Main speakers will include Walter Heller, Regents' professor of economics, and Pulitzer Prize winning composer Dominick Argento. Nineteen other speakers will also give addresses.

The day will also include an open forum on colleges and careers moderated by the director of the CLA Career development office; a discussion of the honors program; a Minnesota Scholars congress; and a forum for parents.

Parents forum will include discussion of the ways families develop, the kinds of changes parents and adult children can expect to experience during college years and ways they can help each other.

Information will also be available for parents who want to return to school themselves.

Student participants in Scholars day were selected on the basis of test scores and the recommendations of high school counselors.

Garnishment Not Easy Procedure To Satisfy Debt

With inflation claiming a larger percentage of people's paychecks, few persons are anxious to lose more. The prospect of a garnishment against one's wages, then, is likely to be met with both personal and financial depression in even the most stable of workers, notes the Minnesota Supreme court's information office.

Garnishment is also one of the areas of law that has attracted more than its share of rumors. Some of the commonly-held fears about garnishment have been stripped away over the past decade by court cases and legislation which now afford more constitutional protection to a person who might be faced with garnishment.

For example, there is now a strict limit on the amount that can be taken from a paycheck on a garnishment. In addition, certain legal processes that must be followed give a debtor a circle of protection that didn't exist years ago.

Exactly what is garnishment? It is a legal process that can be used by a creditor, that is, a person or company owed a legal debt, to collect the money. If a garnishment is permitted, the employer of the debtor, or person who owes the money, can be ordered to hold the sum from the employee-debtor's paycheck. But, there are limits on how and when garnishment can be used.

As an example, suppose that Frank Smith owes money to ABC Furniture company for purchases on credit. ABC, as the creditor, has carried a past due account and now wishes to collect.

Before any garnishment steps can be taken, ABC must bring a lawsuit against Frank. Frank will get notice of ABC's claims when a summons and complaint are served on him. This notice is actually Frank's first protection against garnishment. Frank has the opportunity to raise any defenses to ABC's claims, for example, that the debt was already paid or that the items he received were defective. ABC can proceed with garnishment only if Frank does not file an answer to the lawsuit, a default, or if ABC wins in court.

Frank's second line of protection enters if ABC prevails and gets or can get a judgement against Frank. But, Frank's wages still may be exempt from garnishment. ABC must send out a "Garnishment Exemption Notice" 10 days before an intended garnishment. If Frank receives any type of welfare assistance — such as aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) or supplemental security income (SSI) — or has received any in the last six months, his pay is exempt from garnishment altogether, and no money can be taken. Or, Frank could be exempt if he had been an inmate in a correctional institution during the previous six months. To claim an exemption, Frank fills out the form he was sent and returns it to ABC or its attorney.

This notice serves another purpose: it puts Frank on the alert to a pending garnishment. Sometimes a debtor might be able to contact the creditor and work out a voluntary payment plan to avoid garnishment.

People are protected from garnishment in other ways, too. A person who has a low income may not be subject to garnishment. If Frank's weekly take-home pay (pay after tax and social security deductions) is less than 40 times the federal minimum hourly wage, Frank cannot have his wages garnished. This limit comes to $116 a week or less, although the amount will increase to $124 in 1980.

Even if Frank's earnings can be subject to a garnishment, there are restraints. Unlike earlier years, Frank must be left with enough money to live on. The maximum amount that can be taken from his income is one-fourth of his pay. But, in any case, Frank must be left with at least $116 to feed himself and family (again, 40 times the minimum wage.) These rules and others seek to assure that no one is deprived of bread and board because of a garnishment order.

Probably the thing that worries people most about garnishment is that they will lose their jobs because of it. Here's one more protection of the law: an employer generally cannot fire an employee because of a garnishment. Only after an employee's wages have been garnished for three separate debts could the employee be let go.

Garnishment is often complicated. Debtors may have legitimate claims against their creditors or may be able to take steps to negotiate a settlement and avoid a garnishment. When such situations arise, it's always best to contact an attorney, as well as to be aware of the current protections provided by law against the abuses of garnishment, the court information office suggests.

'79 TOPS Rally Has Awards, Skits, Songs

The 1979 Northwestern Minnesota fall rally for TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) entitled, "How the Waist was Won" was conducted in the Lincoln high school cafeteria Saturday.

Rally included sing alongs, the introduction of chapter queen, coronation of rally royalty, wedding apparel parade, officer awards, best losers, and alumni and graduating KOPS (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly). Skits and contests were also performed throughout the day.

Chapter queens are selected for losing the most weight in a year from their original starting date until their goal is reached. Best losers are selected for losing the most weight in a year, while alumni KOPS are those who lose the most weight in a year and who are able to keep it off. Wedding apparel parade included four women who were able to wear their wedding dresses after losing their desired amount of weight while in TOPS.

Rallies are conducted every year, according to Dorothy Nelson, TOPS member. They are usually conducted in Thief River Falls because of the city's central location, she said.

"TOPS is a weight reducing organization that is based on group therapy and incentives," she said. The organization is based also on doctor recommended diets. Meetings are at St. Bernard's church at 7:15 p.m. Monday with weigh-ins at 6 and 7 p.m. Recently a new club was started Friday at 9:30 a.m. For more information on these meetings, or on the new club, interested persons may call 681-6432.

Book Week At Library Aimed At Children

National children's book week will be celebrated at the Northwest regional library Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, November 13-15, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. each day.

Programs each day will involve a storyhour for school age children featuring the book, "Ramona and Her Father" by Beverly Cleary, a popular author of children's books.

Children's book week is an annual celebration sponsored by the children's book council. Its intent is to focus attention on children's literature and its importance in children's lives. Northwest regional libaray will join libraries across the country in this celebration.

All three storyhours are free and open to children of all ages. No registration is necessary. For more information call the libaray at 681-4325.

Fish As Pets Need Special Attention

by Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

Pet owners in growing numbers are becoming fish enthusiasts. Aquariums in pet shops and dime stores are well stocked with a wide selection ranging from the hardy goldfish to exotic, saltwater tropical fish.

Novice fish fanciers often make the mistake of buying the fish first and setting up the aquarium second. This is often fatal to the fish. Water is a fish's total environment, and should be carefully prepared in advance.

If the water supply in your area contains chlorine or fluoride compounds, it is essential that they be eliminated. Chlorine will evaporate if the water is aged in a wide-mouthed, open container for two or three days. Aging, however, will not eliminate the fluoride compounds. These can be neutralized by adding a chemical compound available in pet shops. Water for a saltwater aquarium is prepared in this same fashion, with the addition of a special blend of "salt," also available at the pet store.

When the water is ready, the tank can be partly filled and plants rooted in a layer of coarse, washed sand. Plants should be arranged on a slight slope from back to front, and the rest of the water added. Finally, the filter, pump and thermostat should be positioned, and the filtration system started. In a day or two the water temperature will stabilize, the pump will remove any passing cloudiness and the aquarium will be ready for the fish.

Fish owners are often tempted to overstock their aquariums. In a tank with no aeration system, you should calculate one inch of fish (excluding tail) per gallon of water. A good air pump will let you double the stocking capacity of the tank, since water in motion will absorb a great deal more oxygen. The fish you stock should be compatible in size and temperament. With a little study, you can learn about individual differences in varieties — those fish that do best in pairs and those that tolerate other smaller fish.

Since one sick fish can infect all others in the aquarium, choose your specimens carefully. The fish should swim evenly, and have no spots or other signs of fungus on its body. If the tail is not in good condition or the body is misshapen, you should choose another fish.

The work is not over when your fish have adjusted to their new home. Water in a functioning aquarium is a constantly changing medium; waste products from the plants and fish, minerals dissolving from decorative rocks and water added to compensate for evaporation can change the water's pH (the acid-base ratio). A pH kit can help you determine the water's acid level and adjust it to your fishes' needs.

Even in a well-regulated aquarium, you may eventually notice a fish with suspicious white spots, or one with limp fins that stays near the bottom. These are only two of the signs that can indicate illness. Ich, the most common disease of aquarium fish, is identified by white pinhead-sized spots scattered over the body and fins. Fuzzy, irregular cotton-like patches on the fish are signs of fungal infection. They generally occur on a fish that already has a bruise or other skin injury.

Treatment for these problems varies. Bacterial infections are best controlled by antibiotics, while fungus growths can be treated with dilute antiseptic solutions. Often a warm saltwater bath can be used to encourage parasites to loosen their hold on the fish's skin, so the parasites can be exposed to the proper medication. Your veterinarian may be able to recommend a reference book that will list the proper concentrations and types of remedies for your tropical fish.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

Chief's Corner

by Ken Froschheiser
Chief of Police
Thief River Falls, MN.

Thursday morning, November 1, we awoke to find the first snowfall of the fast approaching winter. This reminds us of the snow removal process for our city streets and avenues.

The Police department will again proceed before the snow plow and remove vehicles that are parked on the street being cleaned. This is a long and inconvenient process for the police and street departments and the owners of the vehicles parked on the wrong streets. We ask all vehicle operators to make sure they are parking their vehicles on the proper streets as outlined below. We would also ask all landlords who have rental property to instruct their renters as to proper times for parking and where to park.

During the last part of this month I will be sending a snow removal notice out in the Shopper that is delivered to your home. Please keep this notice and become familiar with it to expedite the street cleaning process and to help us avoid causing an inconvenience to you by towing your vehicle.

As to safe driving practices, we must all remember that winter is here again and we cannot drive our vehicles in the same manner as one month ago. Care must be exercised on all streets, and especially at intersections, pedestrian crossings and known areas that tend to be very slippery. While talking to street commissioner Blackstad, I was informed that salt will not be available this winter as it was in the past. This means that slippery spots will be just graveled and no melting compound will be used. We must proceed with due caution in these areas.

Once again, the snow removal process will soon begin and I ask that you please follow this schedule when parking:

Snow removal on city streets and avenues will be done in the following manner: (1) Avenues (north and south) 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, Friday; (2) streets (east and west), 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday.

Do not park on avenues on Monday, Wednesday, Friday (6 a.m. to 9 p.m.)

Do not park on streets on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday (6 a.m. to 9 p.m.) All vehicles parked on the streets and avenues when snow removal is in process are subject to tags and tow-away at owner's expense. (City of Thief River Falls Ordinance 9:9.09. subd. 3)

Bone Marrow Transplant Area Opens At U of M

University of Minnesota researchers have announced the opening of a new bone marrow transplant center at University hospitals. Event follows designation of the university as one of six major national transplant centers by the National Institutes of Health and receipt of a three-year NIH grant totaling $540,000.

Pediatrician John Kersey, director of the center, said the university's bone marrow transplant program will now have its own hospital unit and will be able to expand to include up to 40 patients a year. Since 1974, when the university's bone marrow transplant team was established, 70 transplants have been performed in space shared with other hospital units.

Kersey said bone marrow transplant patients from throughout the Midwest will be referred to the university since the other centers are located on the coasts. Also, he said, the university will now be accepting young adult and middle-aged transplant patients for the first time.

In early work on the method, the best results were the children, Kersey said, but refinements in the procedure have allowed expansion not only to older patients but also to new diseases.

Patients with severe aplastic anemia and leukemia, rare but fatal diseases, have been the primary candidates for this treatment, in which liquid marrow donated from a healthy sibling is transfused into the patient. Common denominator in these conditions and other blood and bone diseases for which the procedure is now seen to have potential is dysfunction of bone marrow, the body's factory for blood cells.

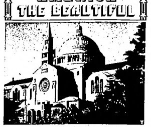
Cure rates for aplastic anemia and leukemia patients after bone marrow transplants are encouraging, and recent improvements in the technique may soon make it the treatment of choice for both diseases, researchers say. Between 50 and 85 per cent of the patients who receive bone marrow transplants survive at least one year, depending on the disease, the transplantation procedure used and the center where it is performed.

With leukemia, a malignant condition in which the marrow produces an excessive number of white cells, the biggest obstacle has been recurrence of this cancerous condition following transplantation. But, said hematologist Philip McGlave, a switch to transplanting marrow while the disease is in remission rather than while it is active has led to improved cure rates.

Major advances are also being made in work with aplastic anemia, a disease in which marrow is underproductive. Pediatrician Norma Ramsay has achieved unusually high one-year survival rates with a small group of patients by conditioning them prior to transplantation with a new technique known as total lymphoid irradiation (TLI) Radiation is used to suppress the patients' immune systems so their systems accept the foreign marrow, Ramsay said. Total body irradiation, a more rigorous procedure that can damage the brain and lungs, was used in the past. TLI affects only the lymph organs, which are involved in the immune system, avoiding unnecessary damage from the radiation, she said.

In a new avenue of bone marrow transplant research, the technique is showing potential for application in some kidney transplants. Recognition of the foreign kidney by the body's immune system, which stems from the bone marrow, often leads to rejection of the kidney in high-risk patients. Transplant surgeon David Sutherland said researchers hope the recipient's immune system can be made compatible with the donor's kidney by giving the recipient bone marrow from the donor. Six high-risk kidney transplant patients on whom the technique was tried during the last six months have not shown signs of rejection, he said.

AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL



One of the beauties of America you can help build is this magnificent church.

One of the most beautiful manmade sights in America for many is this tribute to God, the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. The seventh largest church in the world and the largest Catholic church in the United States, it's a Byzantine fantasy of blue and gold domes and slim white towers rising above sober Washington, D.C., and echoing the Capitol dome and Washington Monument.

Dedicated to Mary, protector of the United States, the shrine is being built with the financial help of many Americans, individuals and organizations of a variety of faiths.

The shrine's architecture, sculpture, windows, inscriptions, mosaics and decorations are the fruit of American imagination, skill and devotion. Gifts from fraternal organizations include eight large and four small marble columns from the Catholic Order of Foresters. The tower, its carillon of 56 bells and the campanile to hold the bells came from the Knights of Columbus.

The shrine has no steel skeleton. Fashioned by craftsmen fitting together mortar, stone, brick and tile, the building relies on the laws of physics to "defy" gravity—that is, forces pushing upward and inward balance forces pushing downward and outward. The stones that keep up the semicircular arches inside are all wedge shaped, each one held in place by its neighbors.

The great dome is covered with blue and gold tiles forming the Fleur-de-Lys, the Tower of Ivory and other symbols of Mary. The shrine offers a one-day, two-day or five-day pilgrimage program, including catechetical talks, prayer services, Sacrament of Reconciliation and Sunday liturgy. Tours of the city are also included, and the longer programs offer visits to places associated with the two newest American Saints, St. John Neumann and St. Elizabeth Seton.

For more information, write Rev. Msgr. John J. Murphy, Director, National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Fourth and Michigan Avenues N.E., Washington, D.C. 20017.

LEONA HEMMES, Humboldt, was crowned chapter queen during the Northwestern Minnesota fall rally for TOPS in the Lincoln high school cafeteria Saturday afternoon. Chapter queens are selected for losing the most weight in a year from their original starting date until their goal is reached.

Hints For Homeowners

Remodeling your bathroom doesn't have to mean remodeling your budget. There are some economical ways to improve it. These include changing the color, increasing the light and updating the fixtures.

Light- or bright-colored walls, floor, fixtures and ceiling can make the room seem larger, airier. Dark colors can add a look of luxury. Warm shades of red, brown and yellow can make the room seem warmer, too, so stepping out of a hot shower isn't quite so chilling. Cool blues and greens create a tranquil mood.

Another feature often slighted in bathrooms is lighting. Keep it bright, let it reflect off mirrors and white or light-colored walls.

A very important aspect of a bath or powder room is a lovely lavatory. One such fixture that's unique has a delicately sculptured edge for a touch of elegance. The new Aqualady lavatory, by American-Standard, is available in a wide range of colors to offer full decorating freedom. The lighter colors tend to enhance the feminine aspect, while the darker hues, such as Americana Brown and Colonial Blue, make it more suitable to masculine tastes.

An elegant sink can make a powder room look superb—and help you save.

The lavatory measures 21 by 18 inches and comes with fittings on either four-inch or eight-inch centers—either way it can be perfect for a remodeled or newly built bath.

The self-rimming drop-in design in vitreous china eliminates the need for metal rims, and this oval lavatory fits nicely into countertop installation plans.

It's something to think about when you shop for fixtures for a better-looking bath.

Numbers Of Billboards In State Reduced

Billboard signs continue to dwindle along Minnesota's trunk highways, according to F. C. Marshall, assistant commissioner, technical services division, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT). Marshall said that Minnesota probably ranks among the top six or seven states in the percentage of billboards and signs removed from along highways.

Only 400 nonconforming signs are left to be removed from along Minnesota's trunk highway system. Litigation to determine compensation for them is now in progress, he said.

Nearly 13,000 signs have been taken down under the 1971 Minnesota outdoor advertising control act. Prior to 1971, about 30,000 were removed under Minnesota's original law, which preceded the federal beautification act of 1965.

Between June of 1978 and June of 1979, more than 1,800 nonconforming and nearly 500 illegal signs were removed from along the state's trunk highways.

Nonconforming signs were lawful before passage of the outdoor advertising control act. Because of amendments to the state statute which took effect on that date, the signs no longer met the requirements of the law, Marshall said. Some reasons for nonconformity are improper spacing from other signs; churches, schools, parks and rest areas; signs in areas no zoned for that particular use; and signs that exceed the size limitation.

Sign sizes run from a few square feet, or even less, to in excess of 1,000 square feet. The maximum size is limited to 750 square feet outside of incorporated areas and 1,000 square feet within them. Some signs exceed the maximum size, but they were in existence prior to the 1971 Minnesota law.

Flashing lights may not be used on signs. Lights that cause glare or impair the motorists' vision are prohibited.

Spacing varies from 100 feet to 500 feet depending upon the regulations in effect in a given locale.

He pointed out that the law does allow some signs along Minnesota's trunk highways including on-premise signs (those advertising a business at that business location), official signs (traffic control, directional, motorist service, etc.) and off-premise signs located in areas that are zoned for commercial or industrial use or qualify as unzoned commercial or industrial. Signs can be made of any material, but are usually constructed of wood or steel.

Illegal signs outside the highway right of way are issued 60-day violation notices requiring the sign owners to remove the signs or — if possible — bring them into compliance with the law. Mn-DOT crews take the signs down if they are still in place after the time period expires. The owner then is billed for removal costs.

Illegal signs located on a highway right of way are removed by Mn-DOT as soon as they are detected, Marshall said.

Owners of nonconforming signs are reimbursed on the basis of the cost of rebuilding the signs, less observable depreciation. Owners of the property on which the signs are located are reimbursed for the value of the remaining lease life, discounted on the basis of immediate cash payment. When there is a verbal agreement, payment is made as though a year's lease exists, he added.

I & R Center Publishes Newsletter

Women's resource center at Crookston is now publishing a newsletter which includes a calendar of events related to the center as well as new developments and a listing of publications and support groups.

"One of the main purposes of the newsletter is to keep women in Region I better informed," said Kay Kraatz, coordinator of the information and referral (I&R) center.

Payroll Plan Helps To Buy Savings Bonds

News in the past few months that the United States has the lowest rate of saving by its citizens of any major industrialized nation does not speak well for our economic future. Money saved today is spent tomorrow, creating demand for the consumer goods that keep American industry producing and Americans working. Lower the savings rate, the greater the potential for future economic instability.

Reasons for our low savings rate are many. One that many people cite is that they don't make enough money to be able to save — that everything they earn is eaten up by expenses. But everyone can save, given the right circumstances.

Millions of Americans have found that the right circumstances equal the payroll savings plan for U.S. savings bonds. With payroll savings, money can be saved without any effort at all. A one-time decision of how much to save is all that is required. From then on, that amount is automatically allotted to savings bonds from the saver's salary before it can be spent. Each time the price of a bond is reached, as little as $25, a bond issued. When the bond is held five years or more, it earns interest at an average annual rate of 6.5 per cent.

Savings Bonds are exempt from state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until the bond is cashed or otherwise disposed of — a fact which can increase a bond's effective yield. They are also guaranteed safe against any loss by the United States itself.

Tens of thousands of companies, including most large industrial firms, offer payroll savings. For employees of these companies it is easy to save and, even if the amount saved from any given paycheck is not much, regular saving means a good-sized nestegg in a surprisingly short period.

For nearly 40 years, men and women have used savings bonds to build themselves greater financial security. Today, the reasons for doing so are more compelling than ever. Our country's future may well depend on raising our rate of saving. And Savings Bonds are the way America can, and does, save.

Cut Transportation Costs

Mayor Guy "Sandy" Sanders of Brighton, Colorado rides his motorcycle to City Hall.

In these days of high gas prices, a gallon saved is more than a few pennies earned, and no matter what your means of motorized transportation, proper driving habits will stretch your mileage.

By avoiding jackrabbit starts, keeping speed constant, slowing down for stops and warming the engine by driving instead of idling, you're bound to save gas.

Not only individuals are concerned about the prices at the pump and the shortages in the wells. In Brighton, Colorado, for example, the town's mayor decided two wheels were better than four.

It started when Mayor Guy "Sandy" Sanders began riding his Suzuki FZ-50 to City Hall every day. He was so impressed by the mileage and performance that he ordered the purchase of three more Suzukis for city use. Now the police department is considering putting some of its patrolmen on the two-wheelers.

In Oklahoma, 64-year-old Associate District Judge Paul Simmons rides his Suzuki GS-400 from his cattle farm to Wagoner Courthouse every day. Daily cost of the 50-mile round trip: about $1, says the Judge.

Depending on size, weight and engine capacity, motorcycles can get up to 200 miles per gallon. The average mileage for a large, comfortable, comparatively quiet touring bike — like the Suzuki GS 1000N — is 40 to 50 miles per gallon.

And that's no fueling. Well, at least not too often!

Durenberger Bills Would Aid Disabled

Senator Dave Durenberger's proposals to remove the roadblocks disabled persons often face when they try to return to work were approved last week by the Senate committee on finance.

Durenberger's measures will change social security provisions that cause a handicapped person to lose all benefits if his or her monthly income exceeds $280 and will make it easier for the handicapped citizens to learn a trade. His proposals were included in the disability insurance amendments of 1979.

The finance committee, of which Durenberger is a member, finished work on the overall bill Oct. 30 and reported it to the Senate floor.

Durenberger's provisions could help the estimated 2,500 Minnesotans who are receiving disability benefits, but who could return to work.

Durenberger also introduced another bill to benefit severely disabled persons. His bill will exempt totally and permanently disabled persons from capital gains taxes on profits from the sale of their homes.

The legislation will exempt up to $100,000 on a one-time basis.

"The sale of a home by a disabled person is in many cases an event arising out of desperation — the disability wreaks havoc with one's life making it impossible to be gainfully employed on a long-term basis," said Durenberger.

"Without income from a job, the maintenance of a house is a virtual impossibility. The home that was previously a haven has become an albatross. The only alternative the disabled individual and his or her family has is to sell the home and either purchase a smaller residence or move to a rental unit.

The senator's work in the finance committee will authorize the social security commissioner to develop and implement demonstration projects that enable the handicapped to work; it provides that extraordinary expenses needed to permit a severely disabled person to return to work would not be counted against the amount of earnings ($280 per month) that cause a person to lose benefits; and, it extends from nine to twelve months the on-the-job trial period during which a handicapped person does not lose benefits. His approved program will also protect benefits for disabled widows and widowers who seek employment and makes it easier for medicare beneficiaries to regain their benefits if he or she has been terminated from employment or must return to the disability rolls for another reason.

Concert Series Hosts St. Olaf Orchestra

Conductor O'Dell

Second concert of the Thief River Falls concert association series will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium when the St. Olaf college orchestra from Northfield will perform with David O'Dell as conductor.

The orchestra is comprised of students from St. Olaf college and has a history of upper midwest concert tours for the past 30 years. It is the first tour with O'Dell as conductor, since he has succeeded Donald Berglund who retured this summer after 33 years as conductor of the St. Olaf organization.

Admission to the concert series is by season membership only.

Scandinavian Wood Exhibit Tour Begins

"Scandinavian Wood," the first of six planned touring exhibitions of Scandinavian arts sponsored by the University of Minnesota gallery, will open Sunday, November 11, in the fourth floor gallery of Wilson library on the Twin Cities campus. At a later time the exhibit will come to Thief River Falls.

Following its closing at Wilson November 30 the exhibition will be presented in 20 Minnesota cities during the next two years. This exhibition will be followed by others on Scandinavian fabrics, metalwork, furniture, ceramics and glass.

Wood exhibition includes about 100 objects which have been loaned to the gallery by area museums and private collectors and includes examples from Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden, as well as the work of Scandinavian immigrants. Objects related to food preparation, storage containers, tools, musical instruments and whimsical or non-utilitarian objects are included. Forms of decoration range from incised lines to elaborate painting such as the rosemaling of Norway.

"Scandinavian Wood" explores the structure of handmade wooden objects and the numerous ways in which wood can be decorated," said Mary Harvey, coordinator of the touring program. "The exhibition shows the great skill of the craftsmen."

Exhibit in Wilson will open with a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. November 11. Regular hours for the fourth floor gallery are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday; and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission charge.

Exhibition is scheduled to visit Windom, Sandstone, International Falls, Ely, Hibbing, Thief River Falls, Park Rapids, Detroit Lakes, Breckenridge, Rochester and 10 other communities during the next two years.

University gallery touring exhibitions program is a cooperative effort with the Agricultural extension service and continuing education in the arts, a department of continuing education and extension. Funding for "Scandinavian Wood" has been provided by the Otto Bremer foundation and its affiliated Minnesota banks and the Minnesota Humanities commission.

Many Feel Car Is Necessity Of Life

by Gary Witzenburg
Popular Mechanics Magazine

Ann Dusatko, former schoolteacher, is not quite the sort of woman you'd expect to find with a bumper sticker on her car reading, "Don't mess with my ride." But there it is, and Mrs. Dusatko, a widow and twice a grandmother, is not at all reluctant to tell you why she put it there.

"It's my message to Washington," she says firmly. "You can't exist in a country town like this without a car, and I can't afford to pay $500 or $800 more for a new car just because the government says it has to come equipped with things I've gotten along without all my life. Inflation is bad enough."

Mrs. Dusatko is typical of many Americans who feel that their "ride" is threatened. Like her, some blame a Washington bent on more and more regulation of the auto industry, with each new federal edict forcing car prices upward. Others point to factors such as the increased cost of gasoline, higher state and local taxes on automobiles, and the anti-car arguments of environmentalists.

America's love affair with the auto is more than three-quarters of a century old, but the determination of increasing numbers of car owners to speak up in its behalf is a relatively new development. Motorists, it seems, have finally come to realize what one farsighted U.S. Secretary of Commerce, Luther Hodges Sr., was talking about in 1962, when he warned them that they must "speak up" if they did not want their "freedom of mobility" curtailed by "the anti-autoists."

Addressing "Mr. and Mrs. Motorist," Hodges said: "Make no mistake about it, restrictions on the use of our cars are coming — unless we stop taking our freedom of the road for granted."

To motorists like Mrs. Dusatko, mobility is the key word. It comes quickly to the tongue when she is asked what her car means to her.

"It means," she declares, "the difference between mobility and immobility. Without it, I'd be stuck. I'd have no way to get out of town to my dentist, to a medical specialist, to go shopping, to get to a beauty shop, or visit my family. There's no bus service here, no train, no plane. You go by car or truck, or you don't go at all."

It's easy to see her point. Like other rural American communities with limited facilities, Clarkson, a pleasant town of 900 in northeast Nebraska, relies on automobility for its existence. Its residents know precisely which larger towns offer the specific supplies and services they need and drive there automatically. That means trips of 16 miles to Columbus, a town of 16,000, or 90 miles to Omaha or Lincoln, Nebraska's largest cities.

The car, however, is no less vital to residents of urban areas. Robert Jackson, head of the Compass group, a tourism development firm in Miami Beach, points out that virtually all of southern Florida depends on the automobile to meet transportation needs. "The car isn't just a convenience here," he will tell you, "it's indispensable. This is a resort area and things are so spread out that you simply cannot get to them by mass transit, no matter how good it might be."

As a travel consultant, Jackson averages 160 miles a day by car just to visit his clients. "I couldn't do business without a car," he says.

Across the country in Los Angeles, Dick Barton, an aerospace executive, is equally adamant. He lives 35 miles from his office at the Rockwell International space systems plant in suburban Downey, and says it would be impossible for him to make the trip any way but by car. "It takes me 45 minutes to drive here," he explains, "and it would take at least three hours by public conveyance — if there were any public conveyance, which there isn't."

Indeed, declares Barton, "Nobody in California could get by without a car. Our whole economic system — our work system — is based on the car. There really is no other means of transportation possible. You can drive for two hours in Los Angeles and still be in the city. That means that the average person must have a car to pursue his employment. People here literally go 360 degrees when they are on the move and it would be all but impossible to provide a public transit system that could go in all directions."

To 36-year-old Walt Jarema of St. Clair Shores, Mich., the car has a special significance. His not only gets him to and from his job as a dye maker, it gives his family an independence, a sense of privacy and freedom that it could not otherwise have. With their three sons, Walt, and Mary Jarema have traveled by car, or in their light truck, on vacation trips that only the wealthy could have afforded a few decades ago. Without such automobility, the Jaremas could not drive their sons around the Detroit area to play the hockey the boys love. Without a car, they would live not in a suburb but in the city itself where Walt and Mary grew up, and, says Mary, "I don't think we could ever go back to that."

Walt Jarema loves cars. He put his first together as a teenager, customizing it with parts from several makes. Now he and his wife see their automobility threatened by government regulation and by inflation.

"It's like a freedom we worked for and we earned," Mary Jarema says, "and someone's trying to take it away."

Such strong feelings by motorists are interpreted by New York psychologist Nicholas Zill as reflecting the individual driver's concept of the car as a "cocoon" that offers privacy and as a vehicle embodying various characteristics, among them freedom.

Sociologist Leroy Gould of Yale views the situation in these terms: "We have built a suburban society which depends on the automobile and demands mobility. It's structurally built in."

And Washington Post writer William Greider has pointed out that, without the automobile, America's poor would be the hardest hit of all. "If you want to see what it looks like," he has written, "examine a Latin American city where the poor lack mobility — where they stack up in the cities and build tarpaper slums, unable to find work and unable to return home."

Motor vehicles, according to Greider, "spread equalitarian life values through America — the values of time and mobility — and they spread these qualities downward in our society, more than any patch-up government programs. Cars give poor people more choices. If government regulation were to cripple the automobile society, in the name of saving oil, it would most surely hurt the least first and hardest."

Against that background, Greider has commented: "I am reasonably certain that government regulation will not be allowed to cripple the automobile because too many politicians understand that the very idea contains the seeds of class war."

Strong words, those, but there is evidence that politicians and government officials are susceptible to education as to the public's determination to protect the principle of automobility.

When former secretary of transportation Brock Adams talked last December of the need to "re-invent the car," he found himself the target of such widespread criticism that he was soon backtracking. By early 1979 he was explaining that what he had meant was "that we must improve the automobile as a means of personal mobility." In March, he told the Richland, Wash., Chamber of Commerce: "Preserving the motor vehicle and the freedom it affords us — the 'automobility' we enjoy and which our economy depends on — is one of the most important and most urgent transportation challenges before us."

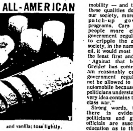
Adams' successor, Neil Goldschmidt, has avoided any reference to "re-inventing" the car.

Still, no one who follows developments in the auto industry and in Washington can doubt that more restrictions on our cars are coming — unless, as Luther Hodges, Sr., put it, "we stop taking our freedom of the road for granted."

Keep that bumper sticker on your car, Mrs. Dusatko.

EUROPEAN BREADS RATE ALL-AMERICAN

While traditional European recipes for these breakfast treats are time consuming, these all-American versions are quick to prepare. They start with refrigerated dough, so you can easily serve them for a special family breakfast or with coffee to friends.



FRUIT 'N CHEESE DANISH

1 tablespoon sugar
3-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
10-oz. can Hungry Jack refrigerated big flaky biscuits
1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
Any flavor fruit preserves

Heat oven to 375°F. Blend the 1 tablespoon sugar and the cream cheese until smooth; set aside. Combine the 1/2 cup sugar and the cinnamon. Separate dough into 10 biscuits. Dip both sides of biscuits in melted margarine, then in sugar-cinnamon mixture. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. With thumb, make a 1 1/2-inch indentation in each roll; fill with rounded teaspoonful cream cheese mixture. Bake at 375°F. for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Top each roll with preserves. Serve warm or cool. 10 rolls.

TIP: Coarse grain (crystal) sugar can be substituted for sugar-cinnamon mixture.

STREAMLINED CRESCENT APPLE STRUDEL

Filling

1/4 cup butter
1/3 cup dry bread crumbs
1/3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 1/2 cups finely chopped apples
1/3 cup raisins

8-oz. can refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
1 egg, beaten
Powdered sugar

In small saucepan, melt butter. Add crumbs; simmer 1 to 2 minutes or until crumbs are golden brown. Combine apples, raisins, sugar, lemon juice, cinnamon and vanilla; toss lightly.

Heat oven to 350°F. On lightly floured surface, unroll dough into 2 long rectangles. Overlap long sides to form a large rectangle; firmly press perforations and edges to seal. Roll out dough to form a 14x12-inch rectangle. Spread bread crumb mixture over dough to within 1/2 inch of edge. Starting on the 14-inch side of rectangle, spoon apple mixture over 1/3 of dough to within 1 inch of the edges. Starting with the apple side, roll up jelly-roll fashion. Place diagonally, seam-side-down, on ungreased 15x10-inch jelly roll pan. Tuck under ends. Brush with egg.

Bake at 350°F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. 8 servings.

350 Million Bushels Sold By Farmers

More than 350 million bushels of grain and oilseeds disappeared from Minnesota farm storage into marketing channels during the June through September quarter, Agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin estimated recently.

That volume of commodities sold and fed to livestock had an estimated farm value of over $1 billion.

But the well of Minnesota's most productive industry is far from dry, commissioner Seetin said, pointing out that the October 1 farm grain stocks plus the new crops of soybeans, sunflower seeds, and corn being harvested this fall added up to nearly 1.2 billion bushels with a farm value of almost $3.5 billion.

Corn showed the greatest volume of disappearance, an estimated 193.1 million bushels worth over $442 million sold and fed to livestock between June 1 and October 1. But the October 1 carryover and new crop of corn added up to over 740 million bushels that Minnesota farmers have for continuing marketings and the production of milk, meat and eggs.

Soybeans probably contributed the second highest amount of cash marketing receipts during the three month period. Farm stocks of this crop are estimated on September 1, and compared to June 1 the volume marketed by Minnesota farmers was an estimated 25.6 million bushels. If they marketed only 10 million bushels of the old crop carryover during September, the three month marketings of soybeans generated $243.5 million in gross income. October 1, unofficially, Minnesota farmers had 175 million bushels of soybeans to sell.

Minnesota farmers marketed 53.56 million bushels of wheat valued at $200.6 million during the quarter. October 1 they had a farm stored carryover of 101.1 million bushels worth almost $379 million.

Minnesota farm marketings of other field crops during the June through September period, as indicated by the June and October farm stored inventories and 1979 harvest estimates, are:

Barley 24.1 million bushels, $53.5 million farm value, October 1 carryover of 45.6 million bushels worth $101.2 million; oats 44.75 million bushels, $55.9 million farm value, October 1 carryover 86.3 million bushels worth $107.9 million; Rye 903,000 bushels, $2.25 million farm value, October 1 carryover 2.26 million bushels worth $5.6 million; Flaxseed 868,000 bushels, $5.85 million farm value, October 1 carryover 1.64 million bushels worth $11.1 million.

KICKING UP THEIR HEELS Tuesday evening at a "pep fest" held as a preliminary to the Hydra-Mac "Skid Steer Loader Bowl" slated for 3:30 p.m. today are these members of the Texas Cowgirls dance group. The former Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders were imported from Dallas, Tex., to do the cheering for the Hydra-Mac team as part of a dealer promotion based around a football theme. The Thief River Falls based Hydra-Mac firm manufactures skid steer loaders and has brought nearly 300 dealers, distributors, factory representatives and other guests into town for the dealer meeting. The Texas Cowgirls are a feature attraction, making their initial appearance at the pep fest and scheduled to appear this afternoon at the big bowl game between the Hydra-Mac Geer Drives and The Chain Gang in the Thief River Falls sports arena. A football field complete with turf and goalposts has been created in the arena for the event. The Cowgirls above are performing at midfield.

WHY THE BIBLE IS STILL A BEST-SELLER

By Marla McCallister

In each reader's life there are times when finding just the right book seems like an impossible dream. He goes to the shelf, scrutinizes the collection and often discovers little there to capture his interest. Yet time after time he reaches for the book of books, the Bible, because, perhaps more than any other book, it has something for everyone.

It is no wonder, then, that the Bible remains a best-seller, while other works come and go.

Though divinely inspired, the Bible is a kaleidoscope of human experience and is easily related to everyday life. From the beauty and romance of the Song of Solomon to the cries of joy and sorrow in the Psalms it describes our emotions, our intellect and our actions.

We can relate to the cast of characters because they are real people and we see ourselves in them. We can identify with Moses who got angry, Job who got frustrated and the disciples who bickered with each other. Encouragement is found, too, as we see God enable each of them to achieve victory over their difficult circumstances.

Our thirst for adventure and excitement can be quenched by reading about David's close encounter with Goliath, the parting of the Red Sea and Daniel's experience in the lion's den. Here is human drama at its best — because it is coupled with divine intervention.

The Bible, then, is popular because it has adventure, suspense and emotion. But more importantly it is a story of a Father's great and unceasing love for His children. We treasure it because it is God's word to each of us. Through it we are told we can know Him personally because of what His Son did on the cross. He tells us we can come directly to Him for guidance, and our lives are given meaning and purpose.

Most of all we are told the almighty God loves us, that nothing can separate us from that love, and that ultimately He will have victory over all circumstances.

The Bible thus continues to be a best-seller because it takes all of life's loose ends and weaves them together into a beautiful tapestry. As long as people want to understand themselves and life, it will remain the most widely read book in history.

Dave Goltz Will Speak Here

Dave Goltz, a member of the Minnesota Twins pitching staff since 1972, will be a special guest speaker Mon., Nov. 26, at the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club pie and ice cream social.

Goltz, who was recently claimed by the maximum 13 teams in the annual major league baseball free agent draft, was born in Pelican Rapids, went to school in Rothsay and now lives during the off-season in Fergus Falls.

A 20-game winner for the Twins in 1977, the 6-4, 215-pound righthander is no longer an official member of the Minnesota organization, with whom he signed in 1967. However, he could still be in a Twins uniform in 1980 should the club bid for his services on the free agent market.

Prowlers Looking For An Opponent

Lincoln high school athletic director Russ Smith is still looking for a 1980 football opponent for the Prowlers to replace Crosby-Ironton.

Thief River Falls' football schedule is expected to remain basically the same next fall when the Prowlers will play at home against Grand Forks Red River, staples, Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks while traveling to Detroit Lakes, Moorhead, Bemidji and Crookston. Smith is awaiting signed contracts to verify the schedule.

With Crosby-Ironton officials looking elsewhere for an opponent, it's the third week of the season that Smith has to fill. And to date he hadn't had any luck. There is still a possibility, too, that the Prowlers and Rangers, who have met on a home-and-home basis the past two years, may get together again if Crosby-Ironton is unable to find a suitable opponent to replace the Prowlers.

Should the Prowlers face an open date next fall, it'll be the second time Thief River Falls has failed to fill a schedule in six years. The Prowlers had an open date in the middle of the 1975 season when they finished 3-5. Then Thief River Falls coach Jim Sims made it known he didn't like the week off when he said, "That open date didn't help at all. It took the edge off the kids. I never want to go through that again."

Miscellaneous

+ Thief River Falls skaters Tom Goddard and Scott Sabo played key roles as the Warroad Lakers opened their 1979-80 hockey season with a 7-4 win at Morden, Man. Monday as Goddard, a third-year Laker veteran scored once and Sabo, a 1979 Lincoln high school graduate, collected four assists in his Warroad debut as a right winger after a high school career as a center. The Lakers begin play in the stronger CASH league Thursday at St. Boniface and open their home schedule Saturday night against St. James.

+ Interested in attending a National Hockey League game, but don't want to face that long trip to the Twins Cities for a Minnesota North Stars game? Try the Winnipeg Jets, one of the former WHA teams now playing in the NHL. Jets remaining home dates in November include Sat., Nov. 10, Toronto; Wed., Nov. 14, Hartford; Fri., Nov. 16, Quebec; Sun., Nov. 18, Pittsburg; and Sat., Nov. 24, Vancouver. Monday through Friday game times at the Winnipeg arena is 8 p.m. On Saturdays its 7 p.m., Sunday 7:30 p.m. For additional information call 772-9491.

Region 8AA Matches Are Set Thursday

Moorhead, East Grand Forks, Thief River Falls and Crookston will compete Thursday in the semifinals of the 1979 North Half Region 8AA girls high school volleyball tournament at Moorhead.

All four advanced through opening round quarterfinal play Saturday. Thursday's semifinals will find Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks playing at 5 p.m., with Crookston taking on Moorhead at 6:30. The winners meet in the championship match at 8 that night.

The North Half winner will host already-crowned South Half titlist St. Cloud Apollo Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Region 8AA championship match.

John Hustad Will Address TRF Boosters

John Hustad, Lincoln high school girls swimming coach, will be the guest speaker Thursday at the weekly 12 noon luncheon meeting of the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club in the basement of the Rex Cafe.

Prowlers Disappointed With 3-6 Finish

According to head coach Gene Jurgens, the numbers were right, but in reverse order as the Lincoln high school football team compiled a 3-6 record during the recently completed 1979 season. Jurgens said it should have been 6-3.

"We were disappointed with our season because we felt we were definitely better than 3-6," explained Jurgens. "I think 6-3 was definitely within possibility and we should have had that."

A shaky start; a strong midseason run and a poor finish summed up the Thief River Falls fall campaign as the Prowlers opened with losses to Grand Forks Red River 30-8 and Detroit Lakes 13-6 before beating Crosby-Ironton 26-14, Staples 37-0, losing to Moorhead 41-14 and upsetting then No. 2-ranked Bemidji 22-21. That set the Prowlers up as a Northwest Athletic Conference title contender, but they wound up losing three straight season-ending NWAC games to Fergus Falls 28-22, East Grand Forks 20-18 and Crookston 28-8.

"We figured we had the best chance we've had for a while," said Jurgens when he talked about his preseason expectations. "But we lost three games we should have won. There was absolutely no reason for losing to Detroit Lakes, East Grand Forks and Fergus Falls. We just didn't play very well against those people. I don't know if we could have done anything about those other three losses: we just weren't ready for Red River in the opener; against Moorhead we played well but still lost; and Crookston was just better than we were."

Thief River Falls did an about-face in midseason when the Prowlers' strength went from their defense to offense. And in the end it was their defense that let them down.

"Offensively we rolled up quite a few yards," mentioned Jurgens. "We were scoring three touchdowns a game with no problem, and I think you should win most high school ball games with three touchdowns."

Multi-talented senior Bill Jury, the team's captain, led the Prowlers offensively as he accumulated 990 yards in total offense to rank third on the NWAC charts that included rushing, passing, receiving and kick return totals.

Jury's 716 yards rushing is the fifth highest single season total since the Times began keeping such records in 1970. Rob Swenson leads the list with 979 yards in 1971, with Kent Smith collecting 928 yards in 1972, Swenson 793 more in 1970 and Jeff Kosel 746 in 1977.

In addition to Jury's performances, the Thief River Falls offense featured a passing attack this year that found first-year starter Jeff Ulrich completing 26 of 65 passes for 402 yards. That's the third highest passing yardage figure for the Prowlers since 1970 when Mike Lee was 54-for-106 for 878 yards. In 1976 Mike Wiebolt was 28-for-80 for 491 yards.

"Our passing game developed as the season progressed," explained Jurgens who said the Prowlers began using their backs as receivers instead of trying to go deep to wide receivers. "By adding the screens, it helped our passing game a lot," he acknowledged.

The statistics back up that claim. Fullback John Dillon and Jury, a halfback, shared the team lead with eight pass receptions apiece. Dillon, whom Jurgens called the best fullback in the NWAC, collected 167 yards on his eight catches and Jury finished with 135.

What does the future hold for the Prowlers? The Lincoln sophomore team was unbeaten in six games this fall, but the combination sophomores-junior varsity squad was winless in three starts.

"There's a good number of sophomores and some good juniors coming," pointed out Jurgens. "But we just don't have two strong classes back-to-back. The junior class has a few good players, but it just don't have the big numbers. A lot of those sophomores will have to pay a lot for us next year."

Host Brainerd . . .

Spuds Beat Swim Team

Lincoln high school girls swimming team will close out its 1979 home schedule Thursday when the Prowlers host Brainerd in a 5 p.m. duel meet in the Franklin middle school pool.

Thief River Falls, a 101-71 loser at Moorhead yesterday, will complete its regular season schedule Tuesday at Bemidji. The defending champion Prowlers will compete in the 1979 Section 3 swimming and diving championships Nov. 20-21 at Bemidji State University.

"We were just basically outswam," reported Thief River Falls coach John Hustad after Tuesday's meet at Moorhead. "We made some improvements, but on the wrong side — our younger kids made the improvements but our older ones didn't. When your number 2 and number 3 swimmers get their fastest times but your number 1 people don't, it normally doesn't affect the meet that much. And that's what happened to us."

The Prowlers, who challenged the highly regarded Spuds before losing by a mere 87-85 margin here a month ago, managed to win just two events yesterday. Franki Kuyath took the 100-yard breaststroke with a 1:18.9 and Brenda Lund set a new pool record in winning the diving competition with 217.2 points.

In addition, Joan Giauque established a new Lincoln school record with a 1:08.5 in the 100-yard butterfly where she finished second to Moorhead standout Holly Corner.

Some Hunting Seasons Close In Minnesota

Hunting seasons on woodcock, rails and jacksnipe closed in Minnesota Nov. 4, the Department of Natural Resources noted.

Although the birds are lightly hunted in this state, considering the opportunity available, about 58,000 woodcock and 5,000 rails were taken in 1978.

State Football Playoffs Reach Semifinal Games

by Larry Larson,
MSHSL Publicist

When the eighth annual Minnesota State High School League state football playoffs began last week, 20 of the 40 teams that had qualified in the five classes — AA, A, B, C and nine-man — had never previously played in the state playoffs. This week as semifinal action takes place, nine of those 20 teams are still alive.

Last Friday and Saturday's 20 quarterfinal contests resulted in the usual number of upsets and exciting games. One game was decided in the waning moments when a field goal was made and another outing resulted in a 32-point differential when a close game was expected.

This week's play is again expected to result in the same kind of excitement and unexpected action.

Class AA

Three of the four teams that have reached the semifinals in Class AA are appearing in their first state playoffs. One of them is Minneapolis Roosevelt (9-1), who last week shocked strong Stillwater 7-6. This Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis, the Teddies will face Richfield (9-1), a school which has appeared in three previous state playoffs — 1972, 1975 runner-up and 1977. Richfield advanced to the semi's via a 20-0 triumph over Rochester John Marshall last Saturday evening.

Two schools making their first appearance in the playoffs will battle in the other semi-final game. Columbia Heights (9-1) will face Armstrong (9-1) of Plymouth on Friday night at 7:30 p.m. at Parade Stadium. Columbia Heights impressed in quarterfinal play when sidelining Cambridge, 40-8, while Armstrong edged past Duluth Denfeld, 29-27, last weekend.

Class AA championship game is scheduled for Fri. Nov. 16, 7:30 p.m. at Parade Stadium.

Class A

Like in Class A, three of the four schools that have reached the semifinal round have never before appeared in a state playoffs. They are undefeated Paynesville, Rochester Lourdes and Crookston. Apple Valley, making their third straight state playoff appearance, rounds out the field.

This week's Friday night 7:30 p.m. game pits Paynesville (10-0) against Apple Valley (9-1) at Rocori high school in Cold Spring and Rochester Lourdes (9-2) will face Crookston (7-3) in Rochester, on Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Paynesville advanced by virtue of a 15-14 triumph over Paynesville while Apple Valley blanked St. Peter 17-0. Rochester Lourdes won in their quarterfinal game over Brooklyn Center by a 40-15 margin and Crookston stopped Park Rapids 24-12.

Class B

All four of the schools that have reached the second round in Class B competition are undefeated and have previously played in the state playoffs. Most noteworthy is Gaylord, who won state championships while in Class C in 1972 and 1973 and then captured the Class B title in 1975. The Spartans also appeared in last year's playoffs.

Another perennial entry is Mahnomen, who appeared previously in 1974, 1975 and 1976, but has never advanced beyond the semi-final round. Other semifinalists this year are Holdingford, a runner-up in 1973 and entrant in 1977, and Winona Cotter, who appeared for the first time last fall.

This week's Friday, 7:30 p.m. games pit Mahnomen (11-0) against Holdingford (11-0) in action at Little Falls while Gaylord (11-0) will face Winona Cotter (10-0) at Faribault. Last week Mahnomen, who has given up but nine points all season, shut out Blackduck 35-0 and Holdingford rolled by Sleepy Eye St. Mary's 27-15. Gaylord limited Belle Plaine to a field goal in winning 19-3 while Winona Cotter whitewashed Blooming Prairie 26-0.

Class C

Two of the four semifinalists in Class C are experiencing their first state playoff appearances while the other two old hands at state playoff play have appeared three previous times. Making first trips are Tyler (11-0) and Harmony (10-0), who will face each other in Preston Friday night at 7:30 p.m. Tyler beat Lamberton 21-8 last Friday in quarterfinal play and Harmony handed Randolph their first loss of the season when winning 35-6 last Saturday.

In the other semifinal game the two schools involved have been involved in state championship games in Class C four of the past five years. And in one of those years — 1974 — Battle Lake and Bird Island-Lake Lillian played in the state title game against each other and battled through two overtimes before Battle Lake won 34-26. Neither reached the finals in 1975, but in 1976 Bird Island-Lake Lillian was runner-up. So this Friday night's 7:30 p.m. game at Willmar between unbeaten Battle Lake (11-0) and undefeated Bird Island-Lake Lillian (11-0) should be a dandy.

Nine-Man

Among the four teams that have reached the semifinals in nine-man play, only Toivola-Meadowlands is undefeated. . .and they are the only school in this year's field that has never been to the state playoffs. The others — McIntosh-Winger, Russell and Morton — have been there before. . .but never to the championship game.

This Friday's 7:30 p.m. games will find Russell (8-1) playing at Morton (9-1) and Toivola-Meadowlands (9-0) meeting McIntosh-Winger (10-1) at Walker.

In quarterfinal play last week, Russell eked out a 14-12 victory over Alden-Conger, the school which had the state's longest winning streak — 26 games — and was last year's Class C state champion. Morton, meanwhile, got a game-winning field goal from senior kicking sensation Jim Gallery in winning 25-22. Gallery, a quarterback, had booted two field goals earlier this season from 53 yards. In lower bracket quarterfinal play, Toivola-Meadowlands, one of nine unbeaten teams still remaining, advanced with a 18-6 verdict over Kelliher and McIntosh-Winger downed Lake Park by 16-12.

TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

Second portion of the 1979 Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) preseason hockey clinic begins Monday in the sports arena.

The annual TRFAHA-sponsored clinic resumes after a week break. The two-week clinic ran October 29-November 3, and will now run from Mon., Nov. 12, through Sat., Nov. 17.

Purpose of the clinic is to stress the basic fundamentals of the game of hockey. Skating, stickhandlings, passing and shooting will be emphasized.

Volunteer coaches from the high school and youth programs serve as instructors for the clinic, designed for Tiny Mites, ages 5-8; Squirts, ages 9-10; Pee-Wees, ages 11-12; and Bantams, ages 13-14.

WOMEN'S '500' CLUB

DOLLIE NEWLAND of Thief River Falls hit a couple of high points in her bowling career during the past few days. She finished fourth out of more than 1,000 entries in the state women's 600 tournament held at Maplewood Lanes in St. Paul, rolling games of 189-201-205-201 for a 796 scratch in the four-game event. Her 45-pin handicap for the four games gave her an 841 for the fourth place finish. She had scarcely returned from the tournament when she rolled the season's high series at Family Bowl here. Bowling in a Monday afternoon league she had games of 234-242-170 for a 652 series. It was a few pins over her previous personal high series. The tourney in St. Paul was restricted to women bowlers in the state who have bowled a series over 600 pins. She is shown delivering a strike ball in the Tuesday afternoon league and with the women's 500 club board which shows her on top with 13 series of 500 pins or higher this season.

State Cross Country Meet Is Completed

Safe Hunting Includes Care On Highways

Hunters should start thinking "safety" long before they reach their hunting site, urged Commissioner John P. Sopsic, department of public safety.

"It's just as important for hunters and trappers to follow common sense rules of highway safety while driving as it is to follow safety precautions while hunting," said Sopsic.

According to the commissioner, in too many cases, hunting parties leave right after work and try to reach their hunting site in a non-stop, marathon drive. Driver fatigue is highly likely in this situation, so frequent stops are a good idea. On the other hand, stopping for a alcoholic drinks or "pick-me-ups" is always a bad idea when driving is involved.

An open bottle in a van, motorhome or in any motor vehicle is not only a bad idea, but strictly illegal.

Traffic may be heavy on the way to and from weekend hunting ventures. Extra care is called for when passing, especially on two-lane roads. The pass that might save a minute could cost a life.

Unpredictable weather conditions of late fall can also require extra care in driving. Frost, rain or an early snow can cause slippery road conditions and also affect windshield visibility. Decreasing speed to match weather and road conditions is a must.

Combined with low sun in the morning and evening, even light frost on windows can produce a glare capable of nearly blinding a driver. Remember to bring sunglasses for unexpected glare. Use headlights freely, whenever there is any doubt of impaired visibility, remembering to dim brights when meeting traffic. This not only lets you see better in poor visibility, but just as importantly, lets others see you.

Most hunters have strict rules about drinking while hunting and using safety precautions such as carrying their guns properly and using safety catches. Besides following these important rules of the woods, hunters should remember the equally important rules of the road while getting to the woods.

Beaver, Otter Trapping Will Start Nov. 15

Minnesota trappers should find a good population of beaver and higher fur prices when the beaver and otter trapping season opens on Nov. 15, the Department of Natural Resources said.

Beaver trapping will be open statewide except in special areas, such as state parks, where it is prohibited. But otter trapping will be confined to a north zone, shown on page 12 of the 1979 small game hunting and trapping regulations — available from county auditors, license agents and DNR offices.

There is no limit on the number of beaver that may be trapped during the season but no more than three otter may be taken. The season on otter only lasts 15 days, closing on Nov. 29, but beaver may be taken through Feb. 29, 1980.

An annual aerial census of active beaver colonies conducted by the DNR this spring revealed that beaver numbers had increased in most areas compared with last year.

A law was enacted by the 1979 legislature to allow the use of snowmobiles and all terrain vehicles in Lake of the Woods county to transport and check traps and to transport beaver and otter carcasses. However, use of the machines for these purposes is prohibited elsewhere in the state.

Officials said trappers should read all the regulations carefully before setting out their traps. They added that persons who obtained a license to trap beaver this spring must use the same license for the upcoming winter season.

Since all hunting and fishing licenses are valid from March 1 to March 1, a beaver trapper will be able to use his license through the end of the season on Feb. 29.

Special permits must be obtained from managers of some state and federal wildlife areas in order to trap, and some areas — or parts of some areas — are closed to trapping.

MJCAA State Playoff Game Is Saturday

Northern Division champion Golden Valley Lutheran will face Southern Division representative Normandale Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Macalester college in St. Paul in the 1979 Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) state football playoff game.

Unbeaten Golden Valley Lutheran, 8-0 in Northern Division play, completed its regular season schedule Saturday with a 28-6 victory over the Gustavus Adolphus junior varsity. Normandale shared the Southern Division crown with Inver Hills this fall, but the Lions beat the Giants in head-to-head competition to earn the post-season playoff berth.

In final week Northern Division games, Northland surprised Crookston 27-7, Brainerd outlasted Hibbing 32-28, Mesabi edged Itasca 6-3 and Vermilion defeated Fergus Falls 20-7.

State Soccer Title Contest Is Thursday

A state high school soccer champion will be named for a sixth time Thursday night when the sixth annual Minnesota State High School League-sponsored state soccer tournament culminates at Richfield senior high school.

The event began Tuesday with semifinal games scheduled at Richfield. Action included a contest between Section Four champion North St. Paul (16-3) and Robbinsdale (14-3-2), winner of Section Six, and Section Three victor, South St. Paul (15-2-1), last year's state runner-up, against Section Five titlist, Burnsville (16-4-1).

Losers on Tuesday meet for the third place trophy beginning at 5 p.m. on Thursday at Richfield. The state championship game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. that night.

Three of the teams entered in this year's state tournament made their first ever appearances. They are North St. Paul, Robbinsdale and BBurnsville.

South St. Paul comes into the tourney with the best record and many people think the Packers are the team to beat, despite the fact that their first state tournament opponent, Burnsville, beat them 3-2 in regular season play.

The four state tournament entrants are among 52 soccer-playing high schools that participate in the sport.

"On a lark" originated in the 16th century when people set out nets at daybreak to catch the small larks, considered to be tasty breakfast fare. Since young men and women joined in on the netting enterprise and because their activities were not wholly limited to trapping the birds, the whole business took on aspects of an outdoor frolic.

Jon Swanson Is Named Cards' Football MVP

Jon Swanson, a versatile senior who played both end and quarterback on offense, along with his linebacking duties on defense, was named most valuable player on the 1979 Plummer high school football team, it was announced by Cardinals coach Gary Brantl.

Swanson had a busy fall as he led the Cardinals in scoring with five touchdowns, a two-point conversion and a safety for 34 points; topped the team defensive charts with 95 tackles; caught six passes for 80 yards and two touchdowns; completed eight of 25 passes for 73 yards and two touchdowns when regular signal caller Brad Rosten was injured; rushed for 268 yards; and punted 28 times for a 29-yard average.

His efforts earned Swanson a spot on the North Tri County all-conference football team. And in addition to the MVP award, Swanson was also named the Cardinals' top lineman.

Senior Kevin Malwitz, an offensive end and a linebacker on defense, was also an all-conference pick this fall and he was presented with the Cardinal award by Brantl and assistant coach Bill Poole for his hard work and hustle, both in games and during practice.

Malwitz' 1979 figures included a team-leading 19 pass receptions for 229 yards; two touchdowns and four two-point conversions for 20 points; four pass interceptions; three fumble recoveries; and 90 tackles, which ranked him a close second to Swanson in that category. He shared the team lead in interceptions and fumble recoveries.

Other special awards went to Alan Mattison, top back; Rosten, most improved; and Dave Haugen, top rookie.

Mattison, a senior, led the Cardinals in rushing with 642 yards on 129 carries. He scored three touchdowns and 24 points; collected 62 tackles; and tied Malwitz for the team lead in fumble recoveries with three.

Rosten, although he missed several games because of an injury, still passed for 320 yards, completing 23 of 56 attempts. The junior quarterback passed for five touchdowns and scored four times himself for 24 points.

Rosten and Ken Fisher were named co-captains of the 1980 Plummer football team.

Seniors Blair Gustafson and Clifton Franklund also figured in the 1979 Plummer statistical charts. Gustafson rushed for 572 yards, scored three touchdowns for 18 points and was credited with 66 tackles on defense. Franklund caught six passes for 126 yards and three touchdowns.

Jay Brekke matched Gustafson with 66 tackles and scored eight points on a touchdown and a two-point conversion.

Kevin Gerardy completed the Plummer scoring with a touchdown and he shared the team lead in interceptions with Malwitz by picking off four passes.

Plummer turned things around the second half of the 1979 season when the Cardinals won four of their final five games after losing four straight season-opening games, finishing 4-5.

The Cardinals opened with losses to Mentor 12-2, McIntosh-Winger 24-0, Middle River 44-14 and Oklee 46-0. Plummer broke into the win column with a 56-26 homecoming win over Clearbrook, lost to Gonvick 30-14 and then closed with wins over Goodridge 24-16, Grygla 28-0 and Erskine 14-6.

Offensively the Cardinals finished with 2,719 yards, with 2,179 yards coming on the ground and 540 more coming on 40 pass receptions.

Illegal Wildlife Imports Profitable

Sales of illegally imported wildlife in the U.S. now run into "tens of millions of dollars a year," earning for an international network of smugglers profit margins comparable to those in the drug trade, according to the current issue of National Wildlife magazine.

Illegal trade in products made from wildlife, such as ocelot fur jackets and crocodile shoes, is even greater in volume, reports the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication.

"The most sobering fact is that much of this traffic involved protected wildlife — including many species whose existence is threatened or endangered," the magazine observes. "The rarer the creature, the higher the price. And the higher the potential profit, the greater the incentive to smuggle."

As examples of rare and valuable wildlife often smuggled into the U.S., the magazine cites the unusual hyacinthine macaws from the jungles of southern Brazil, which bring as much as $8,000 apiece. And a shipment of 375 threatened Indonesian cockatoos seized two years ago was valued at $750,000.

There is a "seemingly insatiable appetite" in Europe, the U.S. and Japan for exotic wildlife, and the market is supplied by an international network of poachers, middlemen, brokers and dealers, says the magazine report. "The markups are staggering," the report adds "and the risks, at least in the past, have been low."

Most of the illegal wildlife comes from the jungles and tropical rain forests of Asia, South America and Africa. For impoverished natives, collecting mammals, birds and reptiles is a source of income. Dealers in Bangkok, Singapore, Barranquilla (Colombia), Asuncion (Paraguay) and certain other cities buy up the harvest for a fraction of the final retail price, and they, in turn, supply dealers and brokers in Europe, the U.S. and Japan.

How are the animals smuggled into the U.S.? Many younger animals are crammed into small crates and die in transit. Endangered radiated tortoises from Madgascar were found under the false bottom of a crate containing poisonous snakes. Rare Australian parrots were concealed in a shipment of race horses. Parrots were found stuffed in nylon stockings and stashed in automobile door panels.

"Up to ten animals may perish for every one that reaches its destination alive," National Wildlife estimates.

Most often, illicit wildlife and their products come into the U.S. shielded by false or misleading documents, and this is what makes the illegal trade so difficult to control. Clark Bavin, Chief of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's law enforcement division explained to National Wildlife that with just 210 agents and 35 inspectors at work it's nearly impossible to stem the flow of illegal imports. "We suspect that there's a large volume of illegal traffic that we're nowhere near approaching," Bavin said.

In addition, penalties for those animal smugglers who are caught have been little more than hand slaps, the magazine reports. There are 584 convictions for such crimes in 1977, all of which were classified as misdemeanors, with fines totalling just $31,117. Jail sentences totalled only 2,015 days.

Now, however the word is out that the U.S. is cracking down on animal smugglers. The Fish and Wildlife Service, the Justice Department, and the Customs Service are all stepping up their efforts to catch and convict smugglers, brokers and dealers.

Kenneth Berlin, who runs the Justice Department's wildlife enforcement program, told National Wildlife that in the future, U.S. attorneys will be pressing for tougher sentences for wildlife smugglers. And the Fish and Wildlife Service is preparing new regulations requiring all wildlife importers and exporters to get federal licenses. That way, a conviction for illegal trade could cause a license revocation and put the dealer out of business.

President Carter announced in his August environmental message that he would submit to Congress a bill strengthening the federal government's power to control illegal smuggling of wildlife and wildlife products. In addition, Carter announced the establishment of a Department of Justice "strike force," to crack down on violators, especially those trading in protected wildlife species.

With the risks of conviction and punishment much greater, officials now hope illicit wildlife trade will cease to be such a lucrative international crime. Until then, the earth's beleaguered wildlife will be helpless victims. As Joseph O'Kane, a U.S. customs agent, told National Wildlife, "You can't equate wildlife smuggling solely in terms of dollars. You must also think in terms of when something becomes extinct."

Trapper To Give Program At Plummer

Government trapper Ernie Zahn will present his program on furbearing animals at the Plummer public school on Friday, November 16 at 8:30 a.m.

If it grows a fur coat and is a native of the upper midwest, Ernie Zahn more than likely has its pelt. His collection contains examples of everything from the smallest sought after fur-bearer to the largest.

Zahn has been with the North Dakota fish and game service for 28 years. His responsibilities were in the area of predator control, which involved the control and restraint of any animals causing destruction to crops or livestock or suspected of disease. He has also given technical assistance with workshops on bird and rodent control and on rabies detection.

Ernie Zahn is touring the upper midwest under the management of the Dakota Assemblies, Box 804, West Fargo, N.D. 58078.

Gophers Host Hockey Coach Clinic Saturday

University of Minnesota head hockey coach Brad Buetow will hold a clinic for coaches of all levels Saturday, November 10. The clinic will be divided between Williams Arena and Bell Museum of natural history on the U of M campus.

Then from 3:30-7:30 in the basement of Stub & Herb's (Washington-Oak St.) is a social hour preceding the Gophers' 7:30 face-off time with Colorado College in Williams Arena.

UND Sports Teams Draw Over 1 Million

Three high visibility sports at the University of North Dakota — basketball, football and hockey — have drawn 1,278,018 fans in the last seven seasons, according to figures announced today by the UND athletic department.

UND football the past seven seasons, including 1979, has drawn an average of 8,465 in 32 home games on total attendance of 270,873. UND Memorial Stadium, which was renovated in recent years, has a capacity of 15,000. The 1978 season was the best of seven for average attendance, 10,380. UND averaged 8,410 for five home games the past season.

Hockey, played in the 5,630-seat Winter Sports Center, which was opened Nov. 2, 1972, has drawn 610,478 in 132 games, an average of 4,625. Last season 117,723 attended 22 games, an average of 5,351, including a two record-setting crowds of 6,000.

Sioux basketball, which has enjoyed great success under the expert tutelage of Dave Gunther for nine seasons, annually ranks among the nation's NCAA Division II basketball attendance leaders, frequently in the top five or six.

In the past seven UND cage seasons 396,667 have attended 103 games in the UND Fieldhouse, an average of 3,851. In the last six seasons, the average is an even more impressive 4,005 per game. As many as 8,000 have packed the UND fieldhouse for games. The fieldhouse was opened in 1951.

Few of the nation's NCAA Division II members can match those figures, according to UND athletic director Carl R. Miller.

HI . . . .
I'm TOM KENVILLE from THOMAS MOTORS in Thief River Falls. You know me as the one way car dealer . . . . one way . . . . your way . . . . If you've purchased your automobile from Thomas Motors, you know what I'm talking about. If you've never done business with Thomas Motors before, I'm going to give you a reason to try us out. Right now we are in the process of selling 25 cars in 25 hours . . . . in order to do that, we've got to make some tremendous car deals. My prices are slashed on my entire stock . . . . I mean everything . . . . new cars . . . . used cars . . . . demos . . . . trucks . . . . vans . . . . if you see it on my lot or in the show room . . . . that price is slashed . . . . Here's another reason for you to come out to Thomas Motors . . . . Let us appraise your car, and we'll give you $2.00. That's right we'll pay you $2.00 when we appraise your car . . . sound like a gimmick???? No, we just feel confident that we can make a car deal you'll be happy with . . . and check out my 1980 Regals and Grand Prix's for just $7333.00 . . . . These aren't strip down models . . . . They're simply great car buys for you . . . . at Thomas Motors we're going to sell 25 cars in 25 hours . . . . Because we're going to do things one way . . . . your way . . . . the 25 cars in 25 hours sale is going on now . . . . come out for a Thomas Motors deal.

Mrs. Gust A. Gustafson

Dawn Lambert recently observed her seventh birthday anniversary. In her honor, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lambert, entertained at a birthday party. Besides her parents and brother Jason, others present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rude and Arlo and Mrs. Larry Tveitbakk and Jarad.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rude and Mrs. Hannah Kisch helped their grandson Brandon Kisch celebrate his fifth birthday anniversary on Tuesday afternoon.

Mark Lundeen of Spicer, Mn., visited several days last week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson and other relatives.

Mrs. Inga Lappegaard and Vernon and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kleinvachter and children were Tuesday callers at the Herman Rude home.

A new garage is being built at the Herman Rude home. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tveitbakk and Jarad and Harlan and Kurt Rude were there Saturday to help put the siding on.

Mrs. Erling Lundeen of Spicer visited Saturday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Torkelson and Mrs. Herman Rude were in Bottineau, N.D. Friday to attend the funeral of Albert Froseth. The Froseth family lived here many years ago on what is now the Stanley Donarski farm. Albert will be remembered as a good neighbor and friend. Sympathy is extended to his wife Anna Froseth and their family.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED and notice is hereby given that a hearing concerning the above-entitled matter will be held on Tuesday, November 27, 1979, in the Newfolden Community Center, Newfolden, Minnesota, 56738, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Central Standard Time.

The hearing will be held before Bernard Singer, 1745 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55104, (612-296-8110) a hearing examiner appointed by the Chief Hearing Examiner of the State of Minnesota. This address is the office of the Hearing Examiner.

All parties have the right to be represented by legal counsel or any other representative of their choice, throughout the proceeding. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to the contested case procedures set out in Minnesota Statutes Section 15.0411 through Minnesota Statutes Section 15.052 and Minnesota Regulation HE 201 through HE 222. Questions concerning the issues raised in this Order and Notice or concerning informal disposition or discovery may be directed to Special Assistant Attorney General Douglas Blanke, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155, (612-296-2586).

The purpose of the hearing will be to receive and consider testimony and evidence bearing upon a Petition for a Change in the Boundary Line of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, signed by the managers of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, asking for certain changes in the boundary of said watershed district. The above petition was filed with the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 23, 1979.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District was established by Order of the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 28, 1970, in accordance with Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 112.

The Director of the Division of Water, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, submitted a memorandum on the above petition to the Minnesota Water Resources Board on October 16, 1979.

The said petition has been served upon the County Auditors of Marshall, Pennington and Polk Counties, and the Commissioner, and the Director of the Division of Waters of the Department of Natural Resources.

Any person who desires to become a "party" to this case, must submit a timely petition to intervene to the hearing examiner pursuant to Minnesota Regulations HE 210, showing how that person's legal right, duties, and privileges may be determined or affected by the decision in this case. The petition must also set forth the grounds and purposes for which intervention is sought. A party to the case has the right to present evidence and argument with respect to the issues and to cross-examine witnesses. At the time and place fixed for the hearing on the above petition, all persons interested in or affected by the contemplated improvement shall be given an opportunity to be heard without becoming "parties".

Any person desiring to intervene as a party must submit a written request to the Hearing Examiner by 4:30 p.m., Central Standard Time, on November 23, 1979.

The above-cited procedural rules are available for inspection at the Office of Hearing Examiner, or may be purchased from the Documents Section of the Department of Administration, 140 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155 (612-296-28741.

Persons attending the hearing should bring all evidence bearing on the proceeding including any records or documents.

A copy of the petition is available for inspection by all interested persons during normal business hours at the office of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, at the County Auditors' offices of Marshall, Pennington and Polk Counties, and at the office of the Minnesota Water Resources Board.

Dated at Saint Paul, Minnesota, 55102, this 30th day of October 1979.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That default has occurred in the conditions of that certain mortgage, dated the 24th day of October, 1974, executed by Donald H. Wenage and Vicki L. Wenage, husband and wife, as mortgagors to First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Thief River Falls as mortgagee, filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota, on the 31st day of October, 1974, at 3:30 o'clock P.M., and recorded in Book 129 of Records, page 688, the original principal amount secured by said mortgage being $17,000.00; that no action or proceeding has been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, that there is due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage, including interest to date hereof, the sum of Sixteen Thousand Six Hundred Twenty-two and 47-100 ($16,622.47) dollars, and that pursuant to the power of sale therein contained, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the tracts of land lying and being in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, described as follows, to wit:

Lots Twenty-seven (27) and Twenty-eight (28), of Block Eight (8), in the Townsite of Red Lake Rapids, now a part of the City of Thief River Falls, will be sold by the sheriff of said county at public auction on the 27th day of November, 1979, at 10:00 o'clock A.M., at the front door of the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls in said county and state, to pay the debt then secured by said mortgage and taxes, if any, on said premises and the costs and disbursements allowed by law. The time allowed by law for redemption by the mortgagors, their personal representatives or assigns is six (6) months from the date of said sale.

Dated October 9th, 1979.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—I plan to submit new and material evidence related to my service-connected condition for consideration by a Veterans Administration regional office rating board. I have already filed notice of appeal. Must I first withdraw the appeal before I submit the new evidence?

A—No. New and material evidence may be submitted for consideration by the regional office rating board at any time prior to certification of the appeal and transfer of the claims file to the Board of Veterans Appeals.

Q—Does a widow or widower permanently lose entitlement to Veterans Administration benefits if he or she remarries?

A—No. A widow or widower may reclaim eligibility for Veterans Administration benefits if the remarriage is terminated by death, divorce or annulment.

Q — My claim for compensation for a World War II service disability has now been approved by the Veterans Administration. Am I now eligible for service-disabled veterans insurance?

A — You are not eligible if your only service was during World War II. Service-disabled veterans insurance is available only to those veterans released from active service under other than dishonorable conditions after April 24, 1951.

Q — My father reached age 78 in March 1979. Is he eligible for the 25 per cent increase in his Veterans Administration pension?

A — No. Public Law 95-588 eliminated the 25 per cent increase in rates for veterans attaining age 78 on or after January 1, 1979. However, those pensioners who attained age 78 before January 1, 1979, do retain the 25 per cent pension increase they received.

681-1697

Dawn Lambert recently observed her seventh birthday anniversary. In her honor, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lambert, entertained at a birthday party. Besides her parents and brother Jason, others present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rude and Arlo and Mrs. Larry Tveitbakk and Jarad.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rude and Mrs. Hannah Kisch helped their grandson Brandon Kisch celebrate his fifth birthday anniversary on Tuesday afternoon.

Mark Lundeen of Spicer, Mn., visited several days last week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson and other relatives.

Mrs. Inga Lappegaard and Vernon and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kleinvachter and children were Tuesday callers at the Herman Rude home.

A new garage is being built at the Herman Rude home. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tveitbakk and Jarad and Harlan and Kurt Rude were there Saturday to help put the siding on.

Mrs. Erling Lundeen of Spicer visited Saturday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Torkelson and Mrs. Herman Rude were in Bottineau, N.D. Friday to attend the funeral of Albert Froseth. The Froseth family lived here many years ago on what is now the Stanley Donarski farm. Albert will be remembered as a good neighbor and friend. Sympathy is extended to his wife Anna Froseth and their family.

STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF RAMSEY

In the Matter of the Petition for a Change in the Boundary Line of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District (Section 112.39, Subd. 4)

ORDER FOR HEARING AND NOTICE THEREOF

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED and notice is hereby given that a hearing concerning the above-entitled matter will be held on Tuesday, November 27, 1979, in the Newfolden Community Center, Newfolden, Minnesota, 56738, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Central Standard Time.

The hearing will be held before Bernard Singer, 1745 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55104, (612-296-8110) a hearing examiner appointed by the Chief Hearing Examiner of the State of Minnesota. This address is the office of the Hearing Examiner.

All parties have the right to be represented by legal counsel or any other representative of their choice, throughout the proceeding. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to the contested case procedures set out in Minnesota Statutes Section 15.0411 through Minnesota Statutes Section 15.052 and Minnesota Regulation HE 201 through HE 222. Questions concerning the issues raised in this Order and Notice or concerning informal disposition or discovery may be directed to Special Assistant Attorney General Douglas Blanke, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155, (612-296-2586).

The purpose of the hearing will be to receive and consider testimony and evidence bearing upon a Petition for a Change in the Boundary Line of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, signed by the managers of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, asking for certain changes in the boundary of said watershed district. The above petition was filed with the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 22, 1979.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District was established by Order of the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 28, 1970, in accordance with Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 112.

The Director of the Division of Water, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, submitted a memorandum on the above petition to the Minnesota Water Resources Board on October 16, 1979.

The said petition has been served upon the County Auditors of Marshall, Pennington and Polk Counties, and the Commissioner, and the Director of the Division of Waters of the Department of Natural Resources.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—I plan to submit new and material evidence related to my service-connected condition for consideration by a Veterans Administration regional office rating board. I have already filed notice of appeal. Must I first withdraw the appeal before I submit the new evidence?

A—No. New and material evidence may be submitted for consideration by the regional office rating board at any time prior to certification of the appeal and transfer of the claims file to the Board of Veterans Appeals.

Q—Does a widow or widower permanently lose entitlement to Veterans Administration benefits if he or she remarries?

A—No. A widow or widower may reclaim eligibility for Veterans Administration benefits if the remarriage is terminated by death, divorce or annulment.

Q — My claim for compensation for a World War II service disability has now been approved by the Veterans Administration. Am I now eligible for service-disabled veterans insurance?

A — You are not eligible if your only service was during World War II. Service-disabled veterans insurance is availalbe only to those veterans released from active service under other than dishonorable conditions after April 24, 1951.

Q — My father reached age 78 in March 1979. Is he eligible for the 25 per cent increase in his Veterans Administration pension?

A — No. Public Law 95-588 eliminated the 25 per cent increase in rates for veterans attaining age 78 on or after January 1, 1979. However, those pensioners who attained age 78 before January 1, 1979, do retain the 25 per cent pension increase they received.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

November 7, 1979
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
October 16, 1979

Pursuant to Adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 7 p.m., October 16, 1979.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

The Board proceeded to discuss the 1980 proposed Budget presented by the various Office and Department Heads in an attempt to justify the proposals and to be made aware of any changes that were being contemplated in any of the Departments.

The County Court Budget was reviewed with Judges Harren and Jorgenson and the need was indicated that some new equipment was needed and an additional Secretary should be added. This was reflected in the Clerk of Court Budget.

Veterans Service Officer asked that the Board consider funding his Office on a full time basis.

The Treasurer, Highway Department, Sheriff and Auditor were questioned with no substantial changes being asked for. The County Attorney indicated a problem with the time involved with County work and indicated a probability that an Assistant would have to be added.

No action was taken on any of the requests.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Tasa that the meeting adjourn to convene at 9:00 A.M., Oct. 23, 1979. Motion carried.

PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD

November 7, 1979
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington Couty, Minnesota
October 23, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioner's Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 9:00 A.M., October 23, 1979.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

The minutes of the meetings of Sept. 4, 25 and Oct. 9th were read and approved as read.

The Highway Engineer discussed at length various drainage problems and highway matters.

The County Assessor visited with the Board about his proposed budget and anticipated changes.

At 1:30 P.M. the Chairman announced that the meeting was convened to consider bids for the purchase of $200,000 General Obligation Drainage Bonds of the County. The County Auditor presented affidavits showing publication of notice of sale in the official county newspaper and in Commercial West, a financial paper published in Minneapolis, Minnesota, which affidavits were examined and found satisfactory and ordered placed on file.

The County Auditor then presented sealed bids received at his office. These were opened and tabulated and found to be as follows:

M.H. Novick & Co., Inc., Minneapolis as the bidder at a rate of 7.00 per cent for 1981-88, 6.90 per cent for 1989 and 6.75 per cent for 1990 with premium par and NIC of $79,802.50 at a rate of 6.9393 per cent. American National Bank & Trust Company of St. Paul as the bidder at a rate of 7:00 per cent for 1981 through 1990, with a premium of $50.00 and NIC of $80,450.00 at 6.995 per cent. Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED By the County Board of Pennington County, Minnesota, that the bid of M.H. Novick & Co., Inc. to purchase $200,000 General Obligation Drainage Bonds of 1979 of the County is hereby accepted, said bid being to purchase said bonds bearing interest as follows: 7.00 per cent for 1981-88, 6.90 per cent for 1989 and 6.75 per cent for 1990 at a price of $200,000.00. The Chairman and County Auditor are authorized and directed to sign a contract for the sale of said bonds on behalf of the County of Pennington.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the check of the successful bidder be retained by the County Treasurer until the bonds are sold and delivered, and that the checks of the unsuccessful bidders be returned forthwith by the County Auditor.

The motion for the adoption of the foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote being taken thereon, the following voted in favor thereof: All present in favor and the following voted against the same: none whereupon said resolution was declared duly passed and adopted.

Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED By the County Board of Pennington County, Minnesota, as follows:

1. The $200,000 General Obligation Drainage Bonds of 1979, numbered 1 to 40, both inclusive, in the denomination of $5,000 each, shall bear interest payable August 1, 1980, and semiannually thereafter on August 1 and February 1 in each year, and shall mature serially on Faburary 1 in the years and amounts as follows: $20,000 in each of the years 1981 and 1990, both inclusive: all bonds issued without right of prior redemption.

2. The bonds and the interest coupons to be hereto attached shall be in substantially the following form:

United States of America
State of Minnesota
County of Pennington
General Obligation
Drainage Bond of 1979

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS That the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, hereby acknowledges itself to be indebted, and, for value received, promises to pay to bearer, without option of prior payment, on the 1st day of February, 19 , the sum of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS and the pay interest thereon from the date hereof until the principal amount is paid at the rate of per cent ( ), all interest to maturity payable August 1, 1980, and semiannually thereafter on the 1st day of February and the 1st day of August in each year, in accordance with and upon presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached as they severally become due. Both principal and interest are payable at in any coin or currency of the United States of America which at the time of payment is legal tender for public and private debts and for the prompt and full payment of such principal and interest as the same become due, the full faith, credit and taxing powers of the country have been and are hereby irrevocably pledged.

This bond is one of an issue of bonds in the aggregate principal amount of $200,00 all of like date and tenor except as to maturity and interest rate, all issued by the County of Pennington for the purpose of providing money to defray, in whole or in part, the cost of repair of drainage ditches in the County, pursuant to resolution of the County Board, and is issued by authority of and in strict accordance with Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 106.

IT IS HEREBY CERTIFIED AND RECITED That all acts, conditions and things required by the Constitution and laws of the State of Minnesota to be done, to happen and to be performed precedent to and in the issuance of this Bond have been done, have happened and have been performed in regular and due form, time and manner as required by law; that the bonds of this issue are payable primarily from special assessments heretofore levied or hereafter to be levied for repair of drainage ditches, but the full faith, credit and resources of the County are pledged for the prompt payment of the principal and interest hereof, and the County Board is required to provide money for the payment of the principal of and interest on the bonds as they severally mature by the levy of ad valorem taxes on all of the taxable property in the County, which taxes may be levied without limitation as to rate or amount; and that this bond, together with all other indebtedness of the County outstanding on the date of its actual issuance and delivery does not exceed any Constitutional or statutory limitation thereon.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, Pennington County, Minnesota, by its County Board of Commissioners, has caused this bond to be executed in its behalf by the facsimile signature of the chairman of the Board and countersigned by the manual signature of the County Auditor under a facsimile of his official seal, and has caused the attached interest coupons to be executed and authenticated by the facsimile signatures of said Chairman and County Auditor, all as of November 1, 1979.

3. The County has agreed to furnish the approving legal opinion of Messers. LeFevere, Lefler, Pearson, O'Brien & Draws of Minneapolis, Minnesota, to the purchasers and such opinion is hereby requested. The County Auditor shall cause a copy of such opinion to be printed on each of such bonds and shall certify on each bond with his facsimile signature that such opinion is on file in his office, in substantially the following form:

I, the undersigned County Auditor of Pennington County, Minnesota, hereby certify that, except for dating thereof, the above is a full, true and correct copy of the legal opinion of Messers. LeFevere, Lefler, Pearson, O'Brien & Dawz of Minneapolis, Minnesota, which was delivered to me prior to the delivery of this bond and is on file in my office.

County Auditor
Pennington County, Minnesota

At the time of bond delivery, the County Auditor shall obtain a copy of the legal opinion for filing in his office and shall execute a separate certificate as to such fact.

4. The bonds shall be prepared under the direction of the County Auditor and when so prepared shall be executed on behalf of the County by the signature of the Chairman of the County Board and countersigned by the manual signature of the County Auditor under a facsimile of his official seal, and the interest coupons shall be executed and authenticated by the printed, engraved or lithographed facsimile signatures of said officers. When the bonds have been so executed and authenticated, they shall be delivered by the County Treasurer to the purchaser upon receipt of the purchase price, and the purchaser shall not be required to see to the application thereof.

5. The American National Bank and Trust Company, St. Paul is hereby designated paying agent for payment of principal of and interest on said bonds, and the County shall pay the reasonable charges of said bank for its services as paying agent.

6. A separate sinking fund is hereby created for this issue, and the County Treasurer shall provide moneys therein to pay principal and interest when due. It is hereby determined that the bonds of this issue shall be payable in the first instance wholly from the proceeds of the special assessments heretofore or hereafter to be levied for the drainage ditch improvement projects listed in a Resolution adopted by this board on September 4, 1979, and no ad valorem tax levy shall be spread for their payment at this time; but the County is obligated to provide moneys for the payment of the principal and interest on the bonds as they severally mature, and the County Auditor shall report to the County Board annually as to any amount required to be levied to meet current or anticipated deficits in the sinking fund.

7. The County Auditor and the County Treasurer are hereby authorized and directed to prepare and furnish to the purchaser of said bonds and the attorneys approving the same, certified copies of all proceedings and records of the County relating to said bonds and to the financial affairs of the County, and such other certificate as may be required to show the facts within their knowledge or as shown by the books and records under their custody and control, and such certified copies and certificates shall be deemed representations of the county as to the facts stated therein.

8. The County Board will cause the assessments for said drainage improvements to be promptly levied so that the first installment will be collectible not later than 1980, and will take all steps necessary to assure prompt collection. The County Board shall cause all further actions and proceedings relative to the making and financing of the improvements financed hereby to be taken with due diligence that are required for the construction of each improvement finance wholly or partly from the proceeds of bonds issued hereunder, and for the final and valid levy of assessments and the appropriation of any other funds necessary to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds as they respectively come due.

9. The Chairman and County Auditor are hereby authorized and directed to certify that they have examined the official statement or prospectus prepared by Evenson-Dodge, Inc. and circulated in connection with the issuance and sale of $200,000 General Obligation Drainage Bonds of 1979, and that to the best of their knowledge and belief said statement is a complete and accurate representation of the facts and representations made herein as of the date of said official statement or prospectus as it relates to the County of Pennington.

The motion for the adoption of the foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote being taken thereon, the following voted in favor thereof: All present in favor and the following voted against the same: none whereupon said resolution was declared duly passed and adopted.

IT IS TO BE NOTED AT THIS POINT that this sale of bonds regulates the interest rate on the Liens being filed on the seven (7) various ditches for collection over the next 10 years. The rate shall be 7 per cent on said Liens.

Moved by Koop seconded by Stenberg that the funds available from Revenue Sharing in the amount of $161,083.00 for the 11th Entitlement Period be tentatively allocated according to schedule before the Board and the Auditor was instructed to publish said proposed allocation and advertise that a public hearing will be held according to Revenue Sharing regulations in the Courthouse in the City of Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M., Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1979. Motion declared adopted unanimously.

At 4:00 P.M. the Board moved to the 1st Floor Meeting Room to conduct a Public Hearing as required by Law for replacement of a Bridge over the Red Lake River at the South-East edge of the City of St. Hilaire as duly advertised and called for. A full transcript of the proceedings were taken by Court Reporter and made a part of the total Bridge proceedings, of record in the Office of the Highway Engineer.

The Chairman of the Board called the meeting to order and announced the purpose of the hearing and asked that Engineer Arvid Olson continue to 'Chair' the hearing. Approximately 30 people were in attendance.

Engineer Olson read an opening statement into the record indicating the purpose of the hearing and then asked for statements from those supporting the installation of the bridge.

Mayor James Gavin of St. Hilaire spoke briefly of the need for the additional bridge and this was followed by presentations by business people and members of the St. Hilaire City Council.

The opposition was then asked to speak and Attorney Paul Ihle took charge and in behalf of Doug Dehnert proceeded to document by questioning Mr. Dehnert, and entering maps and photos of the area. Other owners in the area were questioned relative to their position on the matter. Attorney Ihle presented J.F. Quinlivan, a planner for the City of Thief River Falls, and questioned him relative to a professional approach. The opposition consumed the greater part of an hour on presenting their case.

The Board then adjourned the Hearing and continued their County Board meeting in the Commissioners' room.

Because of the late hour and because of the need for the Board to attend another meeting at 7 P.M. Moved by Tasa seconded by Stenberg that the meeting adjourn to convene at 7:00 P.M., Thursday, Oct. 25, 1979. Motion carried.

Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
October 25, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 7:00 P.M., October 25, 1979.

Members present: Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. Members absent: Hoffman.

The Board took up the matter of the budgets for 1980 and considered the various requests. The request of the County Extension Committee and 4-H Leaders Council for an additional person to work in the Extension Office with the Youth was considered by rejected because of the additional cost.

The County Extension Budget was then reviewed as received for 1980 and recommended by the Extension Committee. Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED That the sum of $28,375.00 be set apart from the General Revenue Fund and appropriated subject to the Order of the Dean of the Institute of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota for the support of County Extension work in agriculture and home economics in Pennington County, for the year beginning January 1, 1980, in accordance with Chapter 202, Laws 1953 and acts supplementary thereto.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and declared unanimously carried.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, THE County Welfare Board has submitted a budget for Welfare purposes for the year 1980 and has requested a levy to provide funds to enable it to meet its responsibilities under Section 393.08 MSA, and

WHEREAS, said budget and requested tax levies have been duly considered,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the Board of County Commissioners approve such budget, including the following tax levy, with the provision that when taxes are collected and apportioned, the apportionment to each of the welfare funds shall be in the ratio that the levy for each bears to the total levy for welfare purposes, as follows: Minnesota Supplemental Aid, $23,000, 6.56 per cent, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, $76,000, 21.67 per cent; General Relief, $39,000, 11.12 per cent; Administration, $1,000, .28 per cent; Medical Assistance, $55,000, 15.68 per cent and Social Services, $156,743, 44.69 per cent for totals of $350,743 and 100.00 per cent.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED That the County Auditor be authorized and directed to spread a levy for welfare purposes in the amount of $350,743 on the tax roles of the County.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and declared unanimously carried.

The County Auditor then submitted the proposed budget and levy, as follows: Listed in the order of Budget requests, Amount, Less Local Govt. Aid and Net Levy. Revenue Fund, $639,633. $163,527. $476,106; Road & Bridge Fund $380,000, no local govt. aid, $380,000; Welfare Fund, $350,743, no local govt. aid, $350,743; Oakland Park Home Bonds, $38,728, no local govt. aid, $38,728; Law Enforcement Bonds, $74,423, no local govt. aid, $74,423. For totals of $1,483,527, $163,527 and $1,320,000.

Special Levies certified by other taxing entities: Northwestern Regional Commission, $4,544; Red Lake Watershed — in area served by this Watershed, $14,318, with an additional 2.00 mills to be shared equally with the Lower Red River Watershed according to Statute. Middle River-Snake River Watershed — in area served by this Watershed a levy of 1 mill has been certified and an additional 2 mills to be shared equally with the Lower Red River Watershed.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Koop that the Board accept the levy and budget and authorized and directed the County Auditor to spread said levy on the tax roles of the County for the year 1980, with the provision that as part of the Road & Bridge levy there is hereby appropriated the sum of $28,500 to the City of Thief River Falls to be paid from the tax collections in 1980 for use on City streets. Motion declared unanimously carried by the Vice-Chairman, presiding.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that meeting adjourn to convene at 10:00 A.M. Nov. 6, 1979.

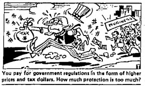
The Public Interest

REGULATION—THE PENALTY FOR SUCCESS

Ironically, business often functions more immediately in your interest than do the so-called "public interest advocates." In this article, a distinguished American businessman, the president of the Formica Corporation, shows how your interests and those of business intermesh.

By Martin B. Friedman



You pay for government regulations in the form of higher prices and tax dollars. How much protection is too much?

Certain individuals and organizations in government want to bring business "to heel." Then they criticize business for speaking out in protest against being brought "to heel."

Friedman

Businesses represent many billions of dollars in investment across our land, millions of jobs for Americans, and no small portion of the future health and viability of our country. We have the right to a voice in public policy debates.

Businesses have constituencies, just as government agencies and officials do. Our constituencies include employees and prospective employees, shareholders, managers, suppliers, customers and our local communities, as well as the national community that benefits from our labors. We have the right to assume an advocacy role on issues of importance to these people.

In many cases, the constituency of a given business may be larger than that of many public agencies, and its relationship to that business more relevant to the real-life concerns and everyday interests of individual Americans.

The elected public official has a demanding constituency that cares about both his philosophy and performance—and holds him directly accountable.

The appointed official, however, is a level removed from the public—observed by and accountable to none but the most keenly involved special interests. The public in whose name so much is done, knows little or nothing about his personal philosophy or performance.

In the past few years, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has devised new ways of looking at thousands of businesses. My company, for instance, Formica Corporation, has been locked in a struggle with the FTC since last May when the agency decided to have our trademark—which is also our company name—canceled on the grounds that it had become generic.

The FTC says the Formica name has stifled competition, yet many of our competitors have spoken out against the FTC action. The FTC apparently feels we have abused the public trust. But no consumers have complained about us. If we haven't stifled competition, and we haven't wronged consumers, what have we done? We've been too successful. We've become too well-known!

It is difficult to see how spending millions of dollars in taxpayer and consumer monies on pursuit of trademarks will either lower costs and prices or lessen inflation—or to see how stripping famous trademarks will increase innovation.

NEWS OF HEALTH

How To Care Better For Mind And Body

Ways to achieve better health can be easy to learn from a new health film.

Do you know one thing that can probably do more to promote your good health and prevent disease than hospitals, doctors and medicine?

It's you as an individual, according to the U.S. Surgeon General's Report on Health Promotion and Disease Prevention, released after two and a half years of research.

Both the government and medical profession are urging Americans to make changes in their living habits that will promote a healthier existence, especially since the cost of health care is going up.

Staggering 1979 statistics show that the cost of living has risen 74 percent in 25 years, but medical care costs have soared 330 percent! Experts say the major causes of many expensive illnesses are habits over which people have a degree of control—alcohol abuse, smoking, overeating and chronic stress.

These and other facts about health are the theme of a new film, "The Wellness Revolution," commissioned by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. The 27-minute health film explores the care of body and mind through relaxation, exercise, stress management and nutrition.

Narrated by Dick Van Patten, star of the ABC-TV series "Eight Is Enough," the new movie features a cast of experts in various fields, such as stress researcher Dr. Hans Selye, founder of the International Institute of Stress at the University of Montreal, and Dr. Robert Arnot, sports medicine center director at Lake Placid for the 1980 Winter Olympics.

"The Wellness Revolution" is available on a free-loan basis through Modern Talking Picture Service, 5000 Park Street, N., St. Petersburg, FLA 33709. When ordering the film, refer to it as "Digest 11899."

Showing this movie to your club or group could suggest ways for your members to participate in the wellness revolution.

GOOD PSYCHOLOGY

People who study people have found that one can work faster, more accurately and with more pleasure at a job in which the tedious and repetitious is at a minimum.

People who want to do well in business have found that one way to make jobs more interesting is to get the proper tools, such as a microcomputer. The new TRS-80 Model II from Radio Shack, for instance, can make tasks like inventory, general ledger posting, payroll and accounts receivable fast and easy.

Awareness Of Library Goal Of Promotion

"Be With a Book for a Day", a nationwide support program for the White House conference on libraries and information services, will take place in Minnesota November 15-19. Program intends to involve all citizens in an effort to expand public awareness on the importance of libraries.

According to Bill Asp, director of the Minnesota office of public libraries and inter-library cooperation, this is a followup to the successful pre-White House conference called by ex-Governor Rudy Perpich and conducted in Minneapolis during September 10-12, 1978.

"Be With a Book for a Day" emblem, featuring the White House on an open book, will be distributed to Minnesota citizens via public, school, academic and special libraries. Civic groups, youth groups and service organizations will also assist in getting the emblems onto wearers in all sections of the state.

In addition to thousands displaying their support for libraries with the diamond-shaped symbol, people are being asked to carry a book during the period November 15-19, as an indication of their interest in libraries.

Governor Albert Quie will celebrate "Be With a Book for a Day" by a ceremony adding new books to the collection of Minnesota books housed in the governor's mansion and said he would personally be with a book that week of November 15-19. All residents in Minnesota are urged to visit a library during the period, pick up an emblem, and check out a book.

According to Wayne Alfveby of Northwest regional library "if you don't have a book with which to be, stop by a library or bookmobile and select one."

Miss Schwartz In "Who's Who"

Tamara Schwartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schwartz, formerly of Thief River Falls, is among 48 North Dakota state university students nominated to be included in the 1979-80 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Originated in 1934, "Who's Who" recognizes individual academic excellence on a national level. Nominations are solicited from administrators, faculty and student leaders.

Funeral Service For Inga Strand of Trail

Funeral service was held at the Mt. Olive church on Saturday at one o'clock for Inga Strand. Rev. Charles Keeler officiated, organist was Tomine Moen and soloist Rev. Charles Keeler. Pederson-Hallelmen funeral home of Fosston was in charge of arrangements. Inga Strand was born May 16, 1893 to parents Iver and Beret Strand at Hillsboro, N.D. She came to the Trail area at the age of three years with her parents and sister Selma and Norman. She was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran faith and attended rural schools in Polk county. Inga worked as a housekeeper at Kamkels near Terrebonne at Andrew Ydsties near Plummer and John Ydstles near Hillsboro. About 1914 she went to work at Edgewood farm near Fargo where she worked for seven years and then worked at the Elgin Cafe in Fargo. In 1924 she was employed by the Ryan Hotel in St. Paul where she worked until returning to the Trail area to help at home on the Riverview farm. She resided at home until entering the Fair Meadow Nursing home in 1972. She was a member of Mt Oliver Lutheran church in Trail.

Inga Strand passed away Thursday, Nov. 1, 1979 at the Fair Meadow nursing home in Fertile at the age of 86 years, 5 months and 15 days.

Survivors include three sisters, Mrs. Clara Ness of Gully, Mrs. Agnes Christopherson of Fosston and Mrs. Marvin (Minnie) Scott of Fertile. Also surviving are 6 nieces and four nephews and many great nieces and great nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents, one sister, Selma and three brothers, Norman, Bernnert and Sam.

Casket bearers were George Werness, Everett Schumacher, Michael Scott, Irvin Ydstie, Albert Aaknes, Harlen Ydstie. Interment was in the Mt. Olive Lutheran church cemetery.

Those that attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Schmacher of Crookston, Gunder and Ralph Sorenson of Fisher, Helga Lambert and Kjersti Gunstenson and Mr. and Mrs. Ole Breivold all of Oklee, Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson, Cora Hanson of Gully, Mr. and Mrs. George Werness, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Scott and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Scott of Fertile, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Ydstie and Irvin Ydstie.

Visitors last week at John Handy's home were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Handy and Richard Brewing of Burnsville, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Heddin of Mt. Lake, Mn., Mrs. Donna Pepulski of Bemidji, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Turenne and girls of Thief River Falls.

The Lighthouse Principle

Maybe few of us landlubbers ever thought about it, but those graceful old lighthouses were built on a firm and logical principle.

They assumed their light would be seen and understood. In fog ships did not see the light and many foundered on the shoals. Occasionally captains mistook the light for that of another vessel and sailing across its bow or stern they came to grief upon the rocks. Yet despite hazards of nature and blunders of man, lighthouses became the landmarks of our coasts.

Whenever in your travels, work or play, you see a church think of it as a lighthouse. Its gleam may not reach every soul. But it's there for those who see and understand.

It lights our way to port while keeping us off the shoals.

Wild Oats Major Threat For Crops

Wild oats (Avena Fatua) is an ancient weed known to farmers since the days of Roman and Greek antiquity. It is generally believed wild oats were inadvertently carried to North America in the 1600' by European immigrants who settled in western Canada.

The weed now infests more than 60 million cultivated areas in the Central Plains area including the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba as well as northern United States from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Ocean.

A single wild oat plant can produce up to 800 seeds which sometimes remain active in the soil for many years. In most cases, they ripen before the grain crops. The plant then shatters — scattering seeds, instead of retaining them as do food grains. Modern machinery, especially the combine, has increased the wild oat problem in recent years.

Wild oats normally shatter before harvest, but the amount of wild oats removed from the field along with the crop probably was greater when binders and threshing machines were used in harvest operation rather than swathers and combines.

Wild oats cut green a week or 10 days after heading produce seeds. Each kernel bears a twisted, spring-like awn that opens in response to wetting and drying. This causes seeds to actually plant themselves. Once in the soil, the wild oat responds to favorable germination conditions in the same manner as small grain.

Wild oats have other built-in survival characteristics:

(1) Varying and unpredictable dormancy of some seeds. No way has been found to break or regulate this dormancy, which may vary from a few days to several years.

(2) Wild oat seeds emerge from greater depths than wheat or barley. The wild oat seedling can grow up from a considerable depth, often the full depth of the plow layer.

Wild oats, like other weeds, are fierce competitors with the seeded crop for moisture, nutrients and light. Recent field trails at various universities show that wild oats reduce grain yield of all crops. Barley is more competitive than wheat; flax shows the poorest competitive traits.

The number of wild oat plants that must be present before an economic loss occurs depends on the general crop, its vigor and variety. Generally, an infestation of one to 10 plants per square foot is considered low; 11 to 25 plants per square foot is moderate. Over 25 plants per square foot is heavy.

Farmers have estimated their losses in wheat and barley crops to wild oats at over $303,000,000 annually in the United States. Wild oats rob soil of valuable moisture and compete with the crop for plant nutrients. Wild oats harvested with grain count as dockage. Also, the grade of the grain may be reduced if wild oat seeds are not removed. Weight and volume of wild oats adds to storage and transportation costs. Most important factor to consider is that uncontrolled wild oats produce a crop which will reinfest the area to cause even bigger problems next year.

Regardless of the crop, the loss in dollars per acre caused by an infestation is directly related to the market value of the crop. For example, if barley produces 30 bushels per acre and sells for $3 per bushel on the market, 10 wild oat plants per square foot reduce profits by $20.77 per acre. Likewise, a 50 bushel per acre wheat crop selling for $3.40, when 10 wild oats per square foot are present. If 20 wild oat plants per square foot infest a field, wheat yields will decrease by about 48 per cent. This is a reduction of 24 bushels per acre, or $81.60 in gross profit.

Under normal growing conditions, a wild oat plant develops a new leaf about every four to five days, or approximately one-fourth to one-fifth of a leaf per day. This rule of thumb is helpful in estimating at what leaf stage a wild oat plant will be on a given date.

If a wild oat plant has 1½ leaves (second leaf half grown) on Monday, it may have 2½ leaves (third leaf half grown) by Friday. Leaf developments will be somewhat slower under adverse growing conditions such as cold, drought or low fertility.

Look for the leaf with a counter-clockwise twist to identify wild oats. Young wild oat plants are sometimes hard to identify in grain seeded by broadcast methods. You can tell them apart by the twist of the leaves. When viewed from above, the first full wild oat leaf has a counter-clockwise curl. Wheat and barley leaves curl clockwise.

The surest way to identify them is to pull up young plants and check the seed attached to the seedling.

Since the early 60's, herbicides selective for wild oats in various crops have been marketed. Prior to their availability, farmers also had several cultural approaches for wild oat control including delayed crop seeding, post seeding cultivation, and competitive crops.

According to various university studies, both cultural and chemical approaches to wild oat control have not had any noticeable influence on infestation. This may be because of lack of acceptance by farmers on effectiveness of weed control.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's projection for a record-high $32 billion in farm exports this year means a 16 per cent increase in value over last year's foreign farm trade.

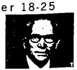
National Bible Week: November 18-25



A nation-wide campaign to promote Bible reading and study will be launched Sunday, November 18, when the Laymen's National Bible Committee begins its 39th interfaith National Bible Week under the leadership of Thomas A. Murphy, Chairman of the General Motors Corporation who is National Chairman for this year's observance.

A major feature of the campaign is advertising for newspapers, magazines, radio and TV created by N.W. Ayer ABH International. It is aimed at young people and is built around the slogan, "Keep the Force With You. Read the Bible."

A major event of Bible Week will be the Eastern Premiere of the film, Jesus, at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington on Sunday evening, November 18. The film, produced by The Genesis Project, Inc., will receive an award from the lay committee at the Washington event. Mr. Murphy also will present to President Carter the completed volumes of the New Media Bible, also produced by The Genesis Project, in appreciation of the President's support for National Bible Week.

A luncheon at New York's Pierre Hotel on November 16 will officially inaugurate Bible Week. It is being chaired by Donald V. Seibert, Chairman, J.C. Penney Company, with noted sportscaster Howard Cosell as master of ceremonies.

Murphy, as National Bible Week Chairman, will be guest of honor. Awards will be presented to the New York International Bible Society for translating and publishing the New International Version of the Bible and to N.W. Ayer for creating the Bible Week advertising.

Another Bible Week program feature is a national billboard campaign, "Welcome to the Bible. Come Inside for the Good Life," for which space on 2,000 large billboards has been donated by 154 outdoor advertising companies across the nation.

Bible Week displays and projects have been planned in various cities, including public readings of the entire Bible patterned after the "America Reads the Bible" marathon held in New York City last year.

President Carter has issued a special message commending "efforts to encourage increased familiarity with the Bible." Senator Dennis DeConcini of Arizona and Rep. Richard T. Schulze of Pennsylvania are co-chairman of the Congressional Committee for National Bible Week.

Gov. William P. Clements of Texas and Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, N.J. are enlisting the cooperation of governors and mayors, respectively.

Hundreds of civic clubs, youth organizations, libraries, book stores and the Armed Forces chaplains are participating, utilizing various materials provided by the Laymen's National Bible Committee.

Complaints On Insulation In Homes Grow

A general increase in complaints concerning insulation installed in older Minnesota homes has been noted by the office of the Minnesota attorney general. This trend reflects a national pattern of unfair and deceptive sales practices recently reported by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

"If the FTC report is accurate, consumers are largely uninformed about insulation effectiveness; insulation is not the kind of product that can be evaluated by even the relatively knowledgeable consumer," says William Angell, extension housing specialist at the University of Minnesota.

The problem is especially serious with insulation installed in the sidewalls of older homes, Angell says. "Statewide, consumers, contractors and building inspectors seldom use effective techniques to evaluate the coverage of sidewall insulation jobs. Consequently, voids, gaps, settling and shrinkage problems aren't discovered unless the consumer takes on major home remodeling."

Due to the unique nature of insulation and how it is purchased by the consumer, there is no one easy answer when it comes to avoiding consumer ripoffs. "Even building inspectors have difficulty determining how complete the coverage is without tearing off siding or plaster," Angell says.

Only sure-fire way to prevent being taken by insulation fraud is to not purchase any insulation this winter, a highly undesirable option. Knowing what should be done in various insulation installations could help consumers know they're getting their money's worth.

Glass fiber insulation in bat form is most common in new construction or in existing attics. "Doing a poor job is relatively hard in this type of job," Angell says. "However, it's quite important to cut around electrical outlets and around plumbing and electrical runs. Make sure the bat is not compressed at any point."

Cellulose is a common loose-fill insulation material. "When installed in attics, the loose-fill should be of uniform density and thickness," Angell says. "The point where the attic floor meets the roof is a common problem spot. This area should be carefully filled in and proper ventilation is a must."

Cellulose is also used to insulate sidewalls. "The best installation uses a two and a half inch hole bored into the wall and an extension inserted into the very top of the wall cavity," Angell says. "After the cavity is filled, the hose should be slowly removed to allow for increased density, which prevents settling."

Angell has a few words concerning insulation contractors: be very careful. Remember, Minnesota has no licensing or certification requirements for insulation installers.

Here are some suggestions to consider when working with an insulation installer:

—Always question and attempt to verify all promises, claims and guarantees made by insulation contractors. Determine the savings potential resulting from insulation installation in your home by obtaining Extension Folder No. 389 free of charge at your local county extension office.

—Always obtain a minimum of two written bids from contractors. Compare the amount to be charge for provided materials.

—Check with but don't rely exclusively upon local utility companies, the Better Business Bureau, municipal building inspectors, friends and neighbors.

—For loose-fill insulation work, try to be on the job site when the work is being done. Request to see empty bags to verify how much material was actually used.

—In sidewall jobs, have an independent infra-red photograph or thermogram made of your house. A number of firms are providing this service for less than $100 in the metropolitan area. Outstate, the price may be higher. To locate these firms, contact your local utility company or the Minnesota Energy Agency.

Tighten House But Allow Air To Aid Flames

Weatherstripping and caulking, insulating and adding storm windows and doors are good conservation measures that can save homeowners both energy and money. However, tightening up your house by doing all these things may change the way your furnace or fireplace burns.

In fact, doing extensive weatherizing on your home without being sure enough combustion air from outdoors is available, can be dangerous. Several tragic deaths have resulted from inadequate combustion air sources in tightly sealed houses, according to the Minnesota energy agency.

This startling fact should not discourage you from tightening up your home. It's wise to remember that home conservation measures have two parts: tighten up your home for comfort and energy savings, and provide enough combustion air for safety.

Now you're wondering just what combustion air is. All fires need air, specifically oxygen, to burn. Furnaces, fireplaces and woodstoves need enough oxygen for complete combustion of their fuels. The incomplete combustion that takes place when a furnace is "air starved" and not enough oxygen is available, causes carbon monoxide to be formed in quantities that can be dangerous or fatal inside a well-sealed house. Carbon monoxide is ordorless and can be deadly in farily small concentrations. Having a source of combustion air from outside prevents this air starvation of the furnace.

Why the problem? In older homes, enough air leaked in through the cracks around windows, doors, utility opening, rim joists and the foundation to provide oxygen for complete combustion of the fuel. This leakage, in most cases, was far in excess of what was needed for combustion air and also caused uncomfortable drafts. Therefore, although the fuel burned well, much energy was wated. Low fuel costs and large energy supplies kept this from being considered a problem.

Now, homeowners are anxious to change their houses for more efficient and cheaper energy use. However, in tightening up a house to save energy, the homeowner may inadvertently reduce infiltrating air below the point needed to provide enough oxygen to the furnace of fireplace.

Problem becomes worse when other kinds of fuel-burning equipment such as fireplaces, woodburning stoves, gas or oil water heaters, gas stoves and clothes dryers compete for combustion air.

Using kitchen, bathroom or attic ventilation fans can add to the problem. This happens because air is being blown out of the house, and not enough replacement air is coming in to make the furnace draft properly.

If you suspect a problem, air out your entire house. Then, crack open a window in the furnace or fireplace room. This is only a temporary solution, but leave that window open until you get some professional advice and-or help to install an outside air duct directly into your furnace room, fireplace or woodburning stove. Consult with your local building official, heating contractor, utility company, furnace serviceman or the Minnesota energy agency right away.

So if you're fixing up your home to save energy, make it more comfortable by eliminating drafts and cold walls. It could save you money. But don't forget that you also change the way your house and heating system "breathe" by doing so. To make sure your furnace — and your family — breathe properly, balance the conservation changes with combustion air changes.

For more information on combustion air, write the Minnesota energy agency at 980 American Center Building, 150 East Kellogg Boulevard, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Amateur Athletes... Professional Fans

Lincoln high school student body and athletic staff have again accepted a challenge from the Minnesota state high school league to participate in sportsmanship competition during the coming sports seasons. Last year the local efforts at sportsmanship resulted in Thief River Falls receiving the championship trophy for Region 8AA.

As we informed Lincoln athletic director Russ Smith in a letter commending him and the school on participation in the program, sportsmanship qualities are the most enduring of those benefits that accrue to high school athletic participants. It should be emphasized by coaches at all levels and student athletes should set the example for their student contemporaries.

It is perhaps natural for student athletes to display emotions of anger or disappointment in the areas in which they compete. But they should not be permitted to affect the level of play nor to be of any long-lasting duration. And they should especially not be directed against opposing players or officials charged with interpreting the rules.

High school athletes are after all amateurs, some of whom are exceptionally gifted but amateurs none-the-less. Their performances may be less than perfect, but if their effort is 100 per cent there should be no criticism of that performance. Athletes do not intentionally throw a pass out of bounds, miss a lay-up, drop a fly ball, fumble, double-fault, triple-bogey. They want to be their best and they strive for perfection as if they didn't know it is unattainable.

Those of us who sit in the stands or watch from the sidelines should take it upon ourselves to do what we can to add to the sports experience. That includes welcoming visiting players and fans, applauding fine play by members of either team, being courteous to officials, taking a positive attitude in team support.

Sportsmanship should be natural; it shouldn't have to be competitive. But there is nothing wrong with healthy competition on a positive basis and there is pride in being among the best in anything.

This year at Lincoln athletic events let's leave the taunts and jeers and other adolescent activity to others who are willing to display their lack of maturity. Let's encourage our boys and girls to play hard and fair and to put out total effort, then to accept victory or defeat graciously. Let's recognize that sports at the high school level involves amateurs, but be professional in the truest sense in our attitude and action as fans.

More On Big Brother

The Bamidji Pioneer editorial column recently contained these tidbits of information on government which, although stimulating to anger, also provide a bit of wry humor by their ludicrous circumstances:

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) seems to have forgotten about the Golden Rule. Last year, one of its employees attended the Computer Security Institute's Fifth Annual Security Conference in New York City. Two letters, three invoices, eight calls and nine months later, the IRS still has not paid its registration fee.

Feeling frustrated, John C. O'Mara, executive director of the institute proposed an alternative. He suggested to the IRS that his firm at least be given an equivalent reduction in its federal income tax — to the tune of $491.67. This would cover the unpaid $430.00 fee, plus interest at 1.5 per cent a month. The IRS told Mr. O'Mara to forget it.

But O'Mara would not forget it. He went public, blasted the agency, and observed that out of more than 600 conferees, the IRS was the only organization that had failed to pay its fees. Three days later a check from the IRS arrived in the mail.

A federal Office of Education program which channels aid to the nation's developing colleges boasts a remarkable 14-year record. After spending nearly a billion dollars, not one of the 800 schools receiving the federal aid has managed to graduate from the program.

The General Accounting Office, the independent congressional oversight agency, has concluded the program is so "beset with problems... (and so) largely unworkable" that Congress should consider abolishing it.

A Michigan community center, that cost U.S. taxpayers $279,000 to build collapsed barely three years after it was completed. Conservative Digest reports it had never been painted, furnished or used. A woodsman discovered the collapsed pile of timbers in a rural part of the state where the building had apparently been crushed by heavy snows.

An Economic Development Administration spokesman, while expressing "regret" at the incident, was quick to see a silver lining. With smug satisfaction, he observed that the major goal of the project — providing more jobs — had been met. He did not say whether the government would provide still more jobs by assigning a new crew to clean up what remained of the first crew's work.

Puffy federal employees are flying first class at taxpayers' expense despite a White House-ordered crackdown.

These cushy trips are allowed whenever bureaucrats present notes from their doctors stating their derrieres are too big for the standard seats in commercial aircraft. These seats are 17-18 inches wide, while the first-class seats are 20-21 inches wide.

The next time politicians promise us they will cut the fat from the federal budget, let's be sure to remind them to start cutting from the bottoms up.

Washington has been plagued with a near-epidemic of hot air for years. Just recently this problem has dramatically worsened. It seems that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which supervises almost everything Americans eat, drink, breathe, or wear, has been spewing cancer-causing chemicals into the air from its own Washington laboratories.

FDA admits to discharging daily more than 38 pounds of toxic and carcinogenic chemicals into the air we breathe, but claims such amounts pose no threat to public health and safety. Congressman Elliott H. Levitas isn't so sure and says: "I find it singularly out of character for an agency such as the Food and Drug Administration to say there's nothing wrong with a little poison."

For your information, FDA also maintains laboratories in Philadelphia, Chicago, Seattle and Denver.

A Farmer's Will

Making the rounds of rural Minnesota newspapers recently has been this last will and testament which farmers should be able to identify with in nearly all cases:

I leave:

To my wife — My overdraft at the bank. Maybe she can explain it.

To my son — Equity on my car. Now he'll have to go to work to meet the payments.

To my banker — My soul. He's got a mortgage on it anyway.

To FHA — My unpaid bills. They took some real chances on me and I want to do something for them.

To the SCS people — My farm plan. Maybe they can understand it.

To the junk man — My machinery. He's had his eyes on it for years.

To my undertaker — A special request: six implement and fertilizer dealers for pallbearers. They're used to carrying me.

To the weatherman — Rain, sleet and snow for the funeral. No sense in having nice weather now.

To the grave digger — Don't bother. The hole I'm in should be big enough.

To the monument maker — For my epitaph use "Here lies a farmer who has now properly assumed all his obligations."

MOTORCYCLES: DOGGONE GOOD IDEA!

Daisy, the motorcycle-riding Airedale from Pinetop, Arizona thinks it's a gasser! Daisy, like her owner, Angelo Lombardo, likes to take to the open road on their Suzuki TS-185. Daisy's love affair with the two-wheeler began when the four-legger was put astride the Suzuki by her master. "When I got off," says Lombardo, "Daisy stayed in the saddle." This cunning canine may know, as do millions of other Americans, that motorcycling can be fun and saves gasoline. Some Suzuki models can get up to 120 miles per gallon. And Daisy... she's "arf" and running!

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

We Need To Get Our Own Energy System Moving

+ Would there be enough fuel to plant Minnesota's crops last spring?

+ Will there be enough fuel oil to heat Minnesota homes this winter?

+ What impact will cuts in Canadian oil to the U.S. have on our supplies?

All these questions have concerned and frustrated me over the past few months.

Even more annoying, while we're presently overly dependent on OPEC oil, we can't seem to get moving on our own domestic projects to help ease shortages. Too often, the cause behind the stall is excessive and unnecessary regulation.

The classic case is the legendary Sohio pipeline, intended to run from California to Texas. The pipeline would have more quickly moved Alaskan oil from the West Coast to the Midwest — presently that oil must be shipped all the way south and through the Panama Canal.

Planning for the pipeline began in 1974. Five years later — last May — it was abandoned after the company had already spent $60 million on investment in materials and on legal work and completing applications and reports.

Sohio had managed to acquire 732 of the required 733 federal, state, and local permits before finally giving up on the project.

Some of these permits exist for valid environmental protection reasons. Many, however, proved duplicative, inconsistent, and even contradictory from one locality to another.

Cases like this are the reason I supported a bill to establish an "energy mobilization" board. This board will study high priority energy construction projects and will have the authority to waive certain procedural laws and regulations when those requirements were judged contradictory and unnecessary.

The mobilization board should break up part of the jam now stalling important projects.

However, what is actually needed for the future is a method to get rid of duplicative and inconsistent laws or regulations in the first place.

To accomplish this, I offered a successful amendment which calls for the Board to report in three years, all the federal laws and regulations which may significantly hinder the completion of energy-producing projects.

I will then be up to Congress to determine which ones are dispensable and should be eliminated.

If we are ever going to get rid of red tape, the first thing we must do is identify it. And, if we are going to get rid of our overly-dependent relationship with OPEC, we can not afford to unnecessarily stall our own energy production.

After-School Snack You Won't Forget

If you have active youngsters who come running home from school hungry for a snack, "Peanutty Tote'Em Cups" is a recipe you'll want to remember. Ready for eating in minutes, these tasty pudding-like snacks are peanutty-rich and dotted with chocolate—sure to be a hit with the kids. You'll enjoy how easy they are to make—it's all done in a blender (even dissolving the unflavored gelatine!), and you can use paper cups to serve them in. Best of all, your youngsters won't forget what a great Mom you are for making this delicious treat for them.

PEANUTTY TOTE'EM CUPS

2 envelopes Knox® Unflavored Gelatine
1 cup cold milk
1 cup milk, heated to boiling
1-1/3 cups peanut butter
1/3 cup sugar
2 cups ice cubes (about 12 to 16)
1/2 cup mini or regular semi-sweet chocolate chips

In 5-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold milk; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Add hot milk and process at low speed until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Add peanut butter and sugar; process at high speed until blended. Add ice cubes, one at a time; process at high speed until ice is melted. Pour into 5-ounce paper cups and stir in chocolate (about 1/2 tablespoon each cup). Chill until set, about 10 minutes. Makes about 10 servings.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson were Tuesday supper guests and evening visitors at the home of Mrs. Gerry Nelson of rural Holt. Other evening callers were Mr. and Mrs. Art Lunke.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Gustafson, Stacy, Susan and Tony spent Saturday evening at the Jarvid Torgerson home in Agder.

Enjoying a potluck dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Swanson Sunday when many of the men folks were deer hunting were Mrs. Kenneth Ranum and girls from Fergus Falls, Mrs. Clara Jaennette, Mrs. Gary Berard, Lynn and Julie, Mrs. Clifford Jorde, Mrs. Dale Ranum and Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Rondorf. Later in the afternoon before returning to Fergus Falls Kenneth Ranum and boys were luncheon guests.

Wednesday evening supper guests at the Lloyd Larson home were Mr. and Mrs. Orville Harstad of Viking.

Due to the storm weather Halloween evening and the warning via radio broadcast for parents not to take their youngsters out for "Tricks or Treats", we all missed the usual little goblins rapping at our doors.

Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mrs. Angie Larson were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Giles, Mary and John, Mrs. Terry Lubitz, Marie and Billy and David Lubitz.

John Lubitz had the misfortune of having his deer stolen out of his pickup when it was parked in Middle River Saturday. Hunting with him were Robert Rausch and his father-in-law Bud May from Brainerd, Gene Miller, Jerry McDougall and Terry Lubitz.

Mrs. Neil Liedberg, Goodridge, 378-4357

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Iverson, Melissa, Shelly and Chris attended the 40th wedding anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schwartz at the Nopers Fireside room in Thief River Falls on Sunday. Mrs. Gary Iverson and Mrs. Marvin Bakken made the cake for their parents and the grandchildren put on the program for their grandparents. Congratulations to the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schlofer, Mrs. Caroline Lovly and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dahlen were dinner guests at the Palmer Lovly home on Sunday. They also helped Mr. and Mrs. Schlofer celebrate their 44th wedding anniversary.

Nathan Liedberg and Nicole Paulson stopped at the Palmer Lovly home Halloweening on Wednesday evening. They also stopped at Nicole's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paulson and the Steve Paulson's, Clarence Dahlen homes and Justin Dahlen homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Liedberg, Nathan and Sheri visited with Corrine Roisland and Diane in Thief River Falls during the week.

Kari Manderud
Third Birthday

Kari Manderud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Manderud celebrated her 3rd birthday at her home October 6. Her guests in the morning were Mark Broughton, Jodi Manderud and Cindy Holthusen. Dinner guests were, Mrs. Kelly Holthusen, Rev. and Mrs. Gene Broughton and Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Conn, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Manderud, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Manderud, Carla and Dale and her father Richard and sister Shannon. In the afternoon Mrs. Gordon Henrickson and Michelle, Mrs. Alan Foley, Shawna and Darcy and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Strom of Brandon came to help Kari celebrate. They all enjoyed birthday lunch featuring a Big Bird cake baked and decorated by her mother. Kari received many nice cards and gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Strom spent a few days visiting at the Richard Manderud home. Kari returned home with her grandparents to Brandon and spent a few days with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Sture, Nathan, Darrell, Carla Joyce, Paula and Anna of Staples spent the weekend at the Hesmen Sturre home.

Mrs. Tillie Newman of Lenore, Idaho is spending some time visiting at the Herman Sturre home.

Bond Between Daughter And Mother Changes

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

When a woman has a baby, she becomes closer to her mother. The barrier between mother and daughter formed by the daughter's marriage is relaxed. This same change in life stage makes the new mother more distant from her mother-in-law, and, under certain circumstances, from her husband too.

These family changes have been explored by Lucy Rose Fischer, sociology professor at the University of Minnesota, in an interview study with 43 daughters, their mothers, mothers-in-law and husbands. Fischer focused on the mother-daughter relationship.

"Women form the alliances that establish the family structure," Fischer said. "Consequently, changes in their lives, especially an event as significant as the birth of a baby, affect families a great deal. Even in male-dominated families, mothers often gain power by forming alliances with their children, and in the most traditional families, the wife forms the bridge even to her husband's family.

Closer mother-daughter relationship begins when the daughter leaves adolescence and eventually moves out of the house. Closeness is intensified when the daughter becomes a mother. "There is a sense of bonding and appreciation," Fischer said, "and more mutual confiding than between a mother and an unmarried daughter."

Many things are discussed, though some topics are still taboo. Pregnancy and delivery room stories are exchanged. Child care advice (from feeding to toilet training), commiseration (over late night feedings and the like), and babysitting are offered, especially when the mother is geographically close. Usually the daughter asks for the advice, but if her mother helps with the baby she feels a "license to criticize too," Fischer said.

This exchange of views is healthy, Fischer added, and probably accounts for the fact that middle-aged women are more receptive to changing values than are middle-aged men.

The now easier mother-daughter relationship is in contrast to the daughter's relationship with her mother-in-law, however. Mother-in-law's child care advice is often seen as an alien threat, and her blow-by-blow accounts of pregnancy and delivery tend to be resented, Fischer said. She does much less babysitting than the daughter's own mother.

"But even mothers and daughters avoid some topics — usually sex, money and complaints about the daughter's husband. Some daughters are afraid their mothers might suggest a new husband," Fischer said.

Most daughters feel their mothers don't interfere, but just to be sure, they give their husbands' time priority even if the mother is very close.

Mothers generally have a quite selfless attitude, Fischer said. Even though most daughters are better off financially than their mothers, and have fewer children and more egalitarian marriages, the research turned up no suggestion of maternal jealousy. Some mothers were wistful about their daughters' life styles, however, and a few had succumbed to feelings of martyrdom, Fischer said.

Strongest mixed feelings came when daughters discussed how they found themselves becoming more like their mothers. They wanted to preserve some of their mothers' child-rearing ways and dump some others, such as silly "let's go nightie-night" routines.

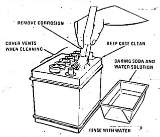
They also wanted to avoid the sexuality model of their mothers. These neutral or negative feelings reflect the low image of women in general," Fischer said. Husbands point out the negative similarities too. "After all," Fischer said, "he never fell in love with his mother-in-law."

Geographical distance doesn't interfere much when the new baby is very young, Fischer said. "You can hug a baby and bring it any toy," said one new grandmother. But when the child reaches two and one-half or three years old, the distant grandmother sometimes feels she doesn't really know the child. This distance can then cause some distance in the mother-daughter relationship.

But the bond between mother and daughter is quite elastic. Most of the women who responded said something comfortable like "my mother knows me." And, as Fischer said, "Women seem to live lives of delicately balanced alliances."

Getting Started on CAR CARE

CLEANING AND SERVICING YOUR CAR'S BATTERY



Your automobile battery should be checked on a regular basis. It's easy to remember to do this if you check both engine oil level and the battery when you fill your car's gas tank.

The level of electrolyte should be checked and filled as necessary (unless the battery is a "maintenance free" type). Check the battery more often in hot weather, or when you're using your car harder or more often than normal.

EASY VISUAL INSPECTION

Water level: Normal operation causes the electrolyte level — commonly called the "water level" — to drop. The level should be to the bottom of the circular or triangular lip on the bottom of the filler hole. If the level falls below this, it may uncover portions of the battery's plates and reduce its efficiency and power.

Battery cables: Inspect your battery cables and posts for a gray or black deposit. This deposit can mean real trouble, since it can insulate the cable end from the terminal.

Battery case: Check the battery case and top for cracks. Raised portions may signal leaks or corrosion at work beneath the surface.

Battery box: Check the battery box for corrosion and damage. Also check the battery's hold-down system for tightness and corrosion damage.

SIMPLE MAINTENANCE

Keeping the battery case clean will reduce corrosion throughout the system. Washing with plain water can get rid of most of the corrosion and acid residue on the outside of the case. If the battery's top is covered with corrosion and residue, cover the vent holes in the battery caps and wash the entire top of the battery with a solution of baking soda and water. MAKE SURE NONE OF THE SOLUTION ENTERS THE BATTERY. Brush the battery with a stiff bristle brush and rinse with clean water. Then remove the covers from the battery vent caps.

These are do-it-yourself tips from Mopar's "Engine Service Guide," a book which helps the automobile owner maintain and service his or her car.

Mopar's 220 page book containing well-illustrated, easy to understand service information for US-made cars and light trucks produced from 1968 to the present, is available for $7.95, including shipping and handling. Michigan residents should add 4% sales tax. Send a check or money order, payable to Chrysler Corporation, to: Engine Service Guide, P.O. Box 970, Dept. C., Detroit, Michigan 48232. Allow several weeks for delivery.

Harvest Mini Chip Breads: Quick And Versatile

This chocolate chip and pumpkin combination is quick, versatile, and easy to prepare. It can be used for breads, cookies or muffins.

Nothing is more tantalizing to the taste buds than the smell of bread and cookies baking on an autumn day. You can give your family good eating and good nutrition by creating these chocolate Mini Chip and pumpkin breads, cookies and muffins in your own kitchen.

Versatitlity is the key—they can all be made from the very same recipe! These wholesome Fall treats feature the great flavor combination of all natural chocolate Mini Chips and canned pumpkin. The mini loaves and muffins are delicious served warm, spread with cream cheese or butter. For an extra taste treat, frost the cookies with "Mini Chip Cookie Frosting."

Warm your family's heart with these delightful harvest breads.

HARVEST MINI CHIP BREAD

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup canned pumpkin
- 2 eggs
- 2-1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 3/4 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup semi-sweet chocolate Mini Chips.
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Cream butter or margarine and sugar in large mixer bowl until light and fluffy. Add pumpkin and eggs; blend on low speed of mixer. Combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, pumpkin pie spice and salt; add alternately with milk to pumpkin mixture. Beat until well-blended; stir in Mini Chips and pecans.

Spread batter into three well-greased mini (3-1/4x5-3/4x2-1/4-inch) loaf pans or spoon into greased or paper-lined muffin cups (2-3/4-inches in diameter) 2/3 full. Bake at 350° for 40 to 45 minutes for mini loaves or 20 to 25 minutes for muffins. Three mini loaves or 22 muffins.

For Cookies: Spoon batter by tablespoonsful onto greased baking sheets. Bake at 350° for 12 to 15 minutes. About 3 dozen 2-1/2-inch cookies.

Mini Chip Cookie Frosting: Combine 1/3 cup sugar and 3 tablespoons water in small saucepan; bring to boiling. Remove from heat; immediately add 1 cup semi-sweet chocolate Mini Chips. Stir until melted; frost cookies. (Add warm water, several drops at a time, if frosting is too thick.)

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Rehabilitation of Cancer Patients is Vital

Rehabilitation is an important part of caring for cancer patients. Helping the patient to return to living as normally as possible is a major goal of any successful rehabilitation program advises the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA). In the following interview, the MMA has answered a number of the questions frequently asked about rehabilitation of the cancer patient.

Q: Why is rehabilitation of the cancer patient so important?

A: The patient who has been afflicted with cancer has suffered in many ways both physically and emotionally. This individual must be helped back on the right track from both points of view. Whatever physical disability has been inflicted on the individual by virtue of the treatment of cancer, it must be corrected as much as possible so that the patient can return to living a normal or near normal life.

Similarly, from the emotional point of view, the patient must be helped when he or she needs help in coping with cancer or the recovery from treatment. The cancer patient must learn to understand that cancer is just one other form of chronic disease which need not be especially feared.

Q: Can all cancer patient benefits from rehabilitation programs?

A: There is no doubt that most cancer patients could benefit in one way or another. However, some patients particularly need rehabilitation. Some procedures are more devastating than others.

In some instances the treatment may involve gentle chemotherapy for easy to treat malignancies and suffer very little from the disease for their treatment. Consequently, very little rehabilitation would be required. In stark contrast, the patient who undergoes a colostomy or a bladder reconstruction may require a great deal of help in getting back into the normal walk of life.

Q: Is there any difference to the approach to rehabilitative programs as they relate to men and women?

A: Men and women cancer patients need rehabilitation equally but the kinds of rehabilitation may differ. Body image is very important. No less so for a man than a woman. For example, the woman who has undergone the mutilating procedure of a mastectomy has experienced a threat to her sexuality, in addition to a change in her body image.

A man who has had a colostomy, the loss of his vocal cords, or a limb removed will also require special rehabilitation assistance the same as for a woman.

Q: What does emotional rehabilitation of the cancer patient involve?

A: In recent years the ranks of the team available to offer emotional support to the cancer patient have expanded to include physical therapists, psychologists, psychiatrists, case workers, in addition to the patient's own doctor and his nurse. In addition there are lay support groups which give cancer patients an opportunity to exchange similar experiences and offer encouragement to those attempting to rehabilitate. The expanding field of plastic surgery can repair or reconstruct portions of the face or body which have been affected by the various cancer therapies.

Numerous body changes take place with advancing age. The eye grows older too. The Minnesota Medical association (MMA) answers some of the questions most frequently asked about the aging eye.

Q. Are most of the changes which take place in the aging eye the result of natural developments or are they due to specific eye disorders or disease?

A. They are really due to both. There are many natural developments that occur as we grow older. However, there are also many diseases which occur as we grow older.

Q. What sorts of natural changes take place?

A. The loss of the ability to focus the eye or presbyopia is one of the most common changes to take place in the aging eye. This condition results when the lens of the eye loses its elasticity and is unable to focus properly for reading and doing close work. This can make reading and close work more difficult. Other eye conditions which can occur are cataracts, floaters and dry eyes.

Q. Should one be willing to accept falling eyesight as one of the signs of growing older?

A. Failing eyesight should not be accepted on the basis of age only. Many of the natural changes and diseases commonly associated with the aging process can be corrected or eliminated with proper care.

Q. Is it inevitable that all people will eventually wear glasses as they grow older?

A. This is generally true because of inability to focus the eye properly due to its loss of elasticity in the lens. Glasses are usually prescribed at some point around age 45, sometimes a few years earlier for reading ability even though distant vision has been normal throughout the individual's life and still remains normal.

Q. Occasionally one sees an older person without glasses. Does this indicate that this individual is an unusual person?

A. Such individuals are very rare. It may mean that this individual does not do a great deal of close work and accepts the fact that he or she cannot see clearly for close up activity. On the other hand, some individuals may accept the fact that they can't see clearly at a distance and opt for close-up work.

Q. What is presbyopia?

A. The terms means old sight — the inability to focus the eye properly for close up sight.

Q. Why does the lens of the eye tend to lose its elasticity as we grow older?

A. The lens substance itself begins to harden as one gets older. Consequently, it cannot change its shape as readily for close up focusing. As the lens becomes harder and cannot readily change its shape, it becomes increasingly more difficult to change the eye's range of focus and thus can make it more difficult to do close up tasks.

Q. What are floaters or spots which seem more noticeable to older people?

A. These are changes which take place in the jelly-like body of the eye called the vitreous humor. Most of the time they are normal and are of no significance. They are commonly noticeable when looking at the bright sky or write paper. They tend to move along with the vision. Generally, these floaters are benign, and are no cause for concern. However, an eye examination at the time when those floaters or spots first begin to appear will rule out any more serious problems.

Q. Why do these floaters occur? Does it mean that there is some part of the eye that is coming loose and floating around in the eye?

A. No, when the person is younger, the jelly-like (vitreous humor) in the eye is firm. At about age 20, the vitreous humor in the eye begins to liquify. As this happens, there are really two substances in the eye, the liquid and the jelly-like substance and their protein pieces which cause floating. There are also pieces of pigment in the back of the eye which may come off into the vitreous humor. The only time there is any cause for concern is if there is a sudden shower of floaters or flashing lights with the floaters.

Q. What does this mean?

A. It may mean a tear in the retina of the eye or retinal detachment. When retinal detachment is diagnosed, and repaired early, a good percentage of sight can be saved.

Q. When should a person consult a physician about eyes?

A. It is wise to see a physician when a change in vision occurs or when an irregularity appears. Early detection of a problem can result in successful treatment of aging eyes.

Pimiento Shrimp Quiche—A Classic Cuisine Contender

Today's popularity for France's time-honored delicacy, quiche, takes on added flair and flavor with this delectable Pimiento Shrimp Quiche. Perfect for brunch, lunch or late evening entertaining.

A guaranteed taste winner with succulent shrimp and the flavorful blending of special ingredients, this quiche is the basis for a light yet filling meal that is matchless when served with a fresh fruit salad and some piping hot muffins.

Good tasting and looking too.

Send for a free recipe booklet by writing: Associated Pimiento Canners, P.O. Box 73, Griffin, Georgia 30224.

PIMIENTO SHRIMP QUICHE

- 1 partially baked pastry shell
- 4 eggs, beaten
- ⅔ cup (small can) evaporated milk
- ¼ cup margarine, melted
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 jar (4 oz.) pimiento, cut in pieces
- ¼ cup onion, chopped
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 to 2 cups canned, frozen or fresh shrimp
- ½ cup sharp Cheddar cheese, grated

Combine all ingredients except cheese. Pour into partially baked pastry shell and bake at 375 degrees about 40 minutes or until nearly set. Sprinkle grated cheese over top and return to oven to melt and until filling is set. Garnish with bright pimiento pieces. Serves 4 to 6.

Associated Pimiento Canners: Cherokee Products Co. (Osage); Monticello Canning Co. (Betty Ann); NABISCO, INC. (Dromedary); Pomona Products Co. (Pomona Sunshine and Stokely's Finest); Zebulon Foods Inc. (King Pharr).

COUNTY OFFICIALS from Roseau and Marshall county were interested participants Thursday at a meeting held with officials of the Minnesota department of natural resources at the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls. Sen. Marvin Hanson of Hallock (third from left facing the camera) points to a map of the two counties as he seeks clarification of an area in question. The meeting was called by Hanson in an attempt to resolve controversy over classification of state-owned lands

Water Quality Management Meeting Here

A public information meeting will be November 26 at 12:30 p.m. at the Thief River Falls city auditorium to receive citizen input on the state's proposed water quality management plan.

Primary purpose of this meeting will be to identify and prioritize those alternative arrangement programs which should be focused upon over the next 20 years in northwestern Minnesota.

Because of the far reaching significance of the items to be dealt with at this meeting, the water quality committee of the Northwest regional development commission is requesting that as many persons as possible that have participated or simply followed the committee's work over the past three years make an effort to attend.

Categories for which water quality management oriented programs are being proposed are agriculture (erosion-sedimentation, drainage, irrigation), feedlots, roadside erosion, construction (general and roadside), urban runoff, pesticides, forestry, residual wates, highway deicing chemicals and mining.

Copies of the state draft play will be available by mid-November for public review. Contact Randy Johnson (218-1296) if a copy is desired. Written comments will be accepted until November 30, if an individual desires to comment but cannot attend the public meeting.

Public meeting represents the culmination of three years of effort by the Region 1 208 water quality management committee. Committee members wish to express their indebtedness and gratitude to the many persons who have contributed to the committee's decision-making process.

Musicale At NCC Planned For Sunday

Final rehearsals are being conducted at Northland community college by the community band and college choir for the annual "Autumn Musicale" in the college auditorium Sunday, November 18 at 2 and 4 p.m. Two performances are scheduled to accommodate the large attendance at this annual concert.

The 60 member Northland community band, directed by Doug Engstrom, will play selections by such famous composers as Richard Wagner, Warren Barker, Joseph Wilcox Jenkins, John Philip Sousa and others.

Northland choir, directed by Phyllis Dalager, will sing numbers by J. S. Bach, E. Butler and Irving Berlin as well as English folk songs and spirituals.

A feature of the concert program will be a jazz quartet playing "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano."

Invitations have been sent to 93 area high school music instructors to encourage their music students to attend this concert.

Public is invited to attend "Autumn Musicale VIII" free of charge and the reception following.

State To Open Traffic Signal Bids For City

Bids on 11 road and bridge projects, estimated at $8 million, in 12 counties will be received by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) at the state transportation building in St. Paul until 9:30 a.m., Friday, November 30.

Included among the projects are bridge construction, bridge deck repair and overlay, grading, bituminous resurfacing, concrete recycling, pavement widening, pavement striping, culvert, traffic signals and signs, fencing and lighting.

The projects for this area by county and road number, together with starting and completion dates, are:

Pennington county — Improvements call for traffic signals and signs on TH 1 at intersections with TH 32 and US 59, on TH 32 at intersections with First street and Second street, on US 59 at intersections with LaBree avenue and Atlantic avenue and on CSAH 17 (First street) at intersections with LaBree avenue and Horace avenue and Pennington avenue, in Thief River Falls. To begin May 12, 1980, work is to be completed within 75 days.

Open Houses For Education Week Planned

Under the theme "Teach All the Children", American Education week is being observed this week at Thief River Falls public schools with open house and visitation being planned.

In a Times article on education week Wednesday, announcement for the open house at St. Hilaire was inadvertently omitted. At the St. Hilaire elementary school there will be an open house Tuesday from 9 a.m. to noon with coffee and cookies to be served.

Applications For Fuel Aid To Be Accepted

Fuel applications for low-income residents will be taken in Thief River Falls city auditorium meeting room on November 16 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, and November 21 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

St. Hilaire residents can apply November 20 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the St. Hilaire council room.

Goodridge community meeting room will also be utilized on November 20 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and December 4 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Applicants are asked to bring proof of income to sign-up site. If transportation is a problem, contact Oklee office at 796-5144, and someone will assist you in your home.

AVTI Offers Health Care Workshop Here

"The Public Connection for Health Care Personnel" a six-hour seminar, will be held on Wednesday, November 21, at Lon's in Thief River Falls from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. A fee of $20 includes materials, coffee, rolls and lunch.

This seminar, designed for hospital and nursing home employees who deal with people, will be presented by Sandra J. Merwin, training consultant from Mound. She has been a featured speaker in seminars, available nationally, for management, sales and personal motivation.

This seminar deals with communications, listening skills, value reinforcement, co-workers, improving work situation and professionalism.

Approval for five clock hours toward license renewal was granted for nursing home administrators attending this seminar.

To pre-register or for a detailed brochure, contact adult education, area vocational-technical institute.

Land Classification Is Subject Of TRF Meeting

In an attempt to reach a decision on classification of state lands in Roseau and Marshall counties, members of the county boards of commissioners met with Minnesota department of natural resources personnel in Thief River Falls Thursday.

As a result of the meeting, it was determined that the DNR and county commissioners would individually review state land in question and state their reasons for beliefs that it should be classified either agricultural or wildlife land. This review will be done on the basis of 40-acre tracts and another meeting will be set up to review the opinions prior to January 1.

Sen. Marvin Hanson of Hallock, who arranged the meeting after about nine years of studies have failed to produce a settlement, insisted on a full discussion at the meeting and refused to let either side admit to a stalemate. State interests in the lands concern primarily water, wildlife and forestry while county commissioners are concerned with agriculture and an expanded economic base as well as tax revenue.

It is the contention of county boards that an undetermined number of acres of public lands in the two counties which have not been classified officially should be released for private sale. While the state has agreed that some lands may be considered agricultural, and the counties have agreed that a large proportion of the acreage is best suited for wildlife, no agreement has been reached on exactly which tracts should be classified for either use.

Lands in question are primarily lands which the state obtained through tax forfeiture approximately 50 years ago. Legislation permits the state commissioner of natural resources to classify the lands and for those lands designated agricultural to be sold. Since the lands first were ceded to the state, a large acreage has been released for public sale while other acreage has been designated wildlife management or refuge area.

Among those representing the department of natural resources at the meeting were Steve Thorne, deputy commissioner; Roger Holmes, chief of the section of wildlife; Ray Hitchcock, director of forestry; Jerry Paul, regional hydrologist; and Merlyn Wesloh, regional administrator from the Bemidji office. Deputy commissioner Thorne presided at the meeting.

Among those taking an active part in the discussion were Wayne Juhl, Greenbush, chairman of the Roseau county board of commissioners; Doran Horner, Warroad, member of the Roseau county board; and Arnold Stanley, Grygla, a member of the land classification committee which had inspected the parcels of land in Marshall county.

Juhl told the Times in a telephone interview following the meeting that he is pleased that the meeting did not come to an impasse and that he is

Texas Cowgirls Add Charms To T.R.Falls Events

Texas Cowgirl
Linda Kellum

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Dress Linda Kellum and Debbie Kepley in a blouse and pair of blue jeans and put them behind the check-out counter in a supermarket and they probably wouldn't get much more attention than the total on the cash register tape.

Dress them in the shimmering uniform and silver boots of the Texas Cowgirls and turn them loose to music and they become instant attractions, capable of drawing crowds and making such capability highly saleable.

Depict them in various degrees of undress and sell six and a half million copies of a magazine — as Playboy did last December. The January issue of that magazine is slated to carry more about the Cowgirls — one of the rare times that models reappear in the publication.

Debbie and Linda, along with other Cowgirls Susan Grissaffi, Debbie Wagener, Susan Pierson and Meg Rossi, were in Thief River Falls Tuesday through Thursday to participate in the annual dealer meeting of Hydra-Mac, Inc., and a new car showing by Thief River Falls auto dealers. Activities took place in the Thief River Falls auto dealers. Activities took place in the Thief River Falls sports arena, the ice being covered completely with green outdoor carpeting for the occasion.

The girls came to town to serve as cheerleaders for the Hydra-Mac Gear Drive team in a football theme promotion for the dealer meeting. All former Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders, they performed a pompon routine as well as leading special cheers prepared for the benefit of Hydra-Mac dealers and distributors They also visited several auto dealerships as part of the auto show and performed several times during the auto show at the arena.

Success of the Hydra-Mac sales meeting was indicated by the orders received by the company for the 1980 production year. Tally of the orders placed by dealers following the Skid Steer Loader Bowl Wednesday afternoon showed that 517 machines totaling $4.7 million had been ordered for the coming year.

The appearance was a success for the Cowgirls as well, who collected approximately $4,500 in appearance fees plus travel, lodging and meals for their work here. A percentage of that goes to their agent, former Cowboy cheerleader Tina Jimenez who is president and manager of the Texas Cowgirls, but it beats pounding a typewriter or ringing a cash register.

Both Debbie Kepley and Linda Kellum were check-out girls for a Dallas supermarket chain when they tried out for the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders in 1976 and were with the organization two years. They claim it was the most enjoyable and exciting time of their lives and maintain that the cheerleaders are the "same wholesome group of girls that their publicity says they are".

While the cheerleaders role was exciting, it wasn't profitable. The members did, and still do, receive $15 per game as their compensation for four nights of practice a week plus the game performance.

"And the Cowboys don't want their cheerleaders to be anything but cheerleaders," Debbie said "If they get the idea that someone is only using the organization as a means to move on to something else, they're done. It says so in their contract.

Moccasin Club Discusses Herbs Grown and Used

"What I did with herbs this summer," was the roll call at the meeting of the Moccasin Garden club held October 23 at the Wallace Tieman home. It was noted that a number of herbs were grown; and the various ways in which they were used were discussed. The most common herbs used were sage, parsley, lavender, mint and summer savory.

Alice Lendobeja, club president, presided at the meeting and led the reading of the Gardeners' Creed. The 1980 program books were discussed with Olga Nelson, vice-president, in charge of compiling the booklets, in charge. The yearly dues were also collected.

Correspondence included a letter and garden quiz from the State Horticultural office and a thank-you letter from Leanne Holen of Star 4-H club, winner of the annual Moccasin club trophy given for outstanding work in flower and vegetable gardening.

The program, featuring crafts, was led by Beatrice Wilson and Joan Nelson. Mrs. Wilson demonstrated a simple method of making candles and Mrs. Nelson assisted the members in braiding straw wreaths. Members also made wall decorations using miniature corn grown by Mrs. Nelson.

Members attending the meeting were Marianne Nelson, who won the door prize, Olga Nelson, Sophie Burstad, Joan Nelson, Alice Lendobeja, Eva Lendobeja, Christina Anenson, Beatrice Wilson, and Agnes Tieman, the hostess.

The next meeting of the Moccasin Garden club will be held November 27 at the Julian Lendobeja home. This will be the club's annual Christmas party.

Petty Officer Kruse Visits Relatives Here

Daniel M. Kruse, Petty officer 2nd class of the U.S. Navy, spent two weeks visiting here at the homes of his uncles, Art Hanson and William Kruse, and with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Kruse, and daughter, Jennifer of East Grand Forks.

Kruse is serving aboard the U.S.S. Holland in Holy Lick, Scotland, where he is assigned to the supervision of the computerized accounting office. He was enroute to Norfolk, Va., where he will attend a seminar in new procedures. This was his third return trip to the States to attend school in accounting.

Before re-entering the Navy, Kruse was a resident of Thief River Falls and manager of the Tradehome Shoe Store.

Margy Elaine Johnson Weds Wayne E. Smith

Miss Margy Elaine Johnson of Thief River Falls and Wayne Edward Smith of Newfolden exchanged marriage vows at a recent two o'clock wedding ceremony at Our Savior's Lutheran church at Warren.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Johnson of Warren and the late Theo. Johnson. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Newfolden.

Rev. David Christensen officiated at the double ring ceremony. Organist Mrs. Bev Karr played "Morning Has Broken," for the processional and "Nadia's Theme" as the recessional. During the ceremony, Larry Golightly played the guitar and sang "Through the Eyes of Love," "God, a Woman and a Man," and "Wedding Song."

Forming the backgroud for the wedding party were bouquets of white gladioli and peach colored carnations on either side of the altar flanked by candelabra with peach colored tapers. Centering the altar was the wedding candle which was lit during the ceremony by the bride and groom.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother William Johnson. She wore a gown designed and made for her by Mrs. Jennifer Springstep, a friend. It was fashioned in princess styling of polyester serenade satin with an overlay of pulled Onish Alencon lace on the bodice. Ruffled lace edged the high neckline, secured in back by pearl buttons. Seed pearls adorned the Victorian bib and accented the lace motifs appliqued on the front of the skirt. Her fitted lace sleeves with wide ruffled cuffs were closed at the wrists by pearl buttons. A detachable lace train, finished in a self scalloped edging was buttoned onto the empire waistline, accented with scalloped lace. Her wrist-length veil was caught to a Juliet styled headpiece of pulled Onish Alencon lace with beaded accents. She carried a dreamboat bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses and babies' breath. She also carried a white handkerchief embroidered by Mrs. Obert Lindland.

The bride's personal attendant was her sister, Mrs. Betty Veralrud of Oslo.

Mrs. Carol Wenzel of Grand Forks, N.D., another sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Louie Graham, Warren, Phyllis Olson, Thief River Falls, friends of the bride, and Jane Smith, Roseau, a sister of the groom. They wore identical, floor-length, sleeveless gowns of peach colored polyester satin with front attached belts that tied in back, gathering to form empire waistlines. At the shoulders were draw strings, tied in a bow. Worn at the V-neckline featuring a small collar were gold chains with a carved ivory pendant. All the attendants carried white lace covered fans topped with a cluster of white daisies, peach pixie carnations and babies' breath.

Wearing peach eyelet gowns with puffy sleeves and empire waistlines were the flower girls, Teresa Wenzel, Grand Forks, and Marilyn Veralrud, Oslo, nieces of the bride. They wore white gloves and carried white straw baskets filled with white daisies, peach pixie carnations and babies' breath.

Dennis Nikolayson, Erskine, a friend of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were David Johnson, Middle River, a friend of the groom; Mark Lundquist, Middle River, a cousin of the groom; and Donavan Erlandson, Thief River Falls, a friend. Serving as ushers were Travis Johnson, Oslo, a nephew of the bride, and Robert Lundquist, Middle River, a cousin of the groom. The groom wore an all-white tuxedo with a yellow rose boutonniere. His attendants were light tan tuxedos with dark brown lapels. Their boutonnieres were peach colored carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a sleeveless light green floral print gown topped by a matching sleeveless vest. Her jewelry featured mother-of-pearl earrings and necklace. The mother of the groom wore a long-sleeved gown with a gray and blue floral design. Their corsages were of yellow baby roses and white daisies.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother hosted a reception in the church parlors with Mr. and Mrs. Fraye Ranstrom, White Bear Lake, cousins of the bride, as host and hostess. Arlene and Annette Veralrud registered the guests as Leah Johnson and LaRayn Veralrud ladled the punch and Lynda Veralrud distributed the chocolate kisses. All are nieces of the bride and all reside at Oslo.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake, iced in pastel peach, and decorated in white trim and cascading daisies. Topping the cake was a miniature bride and groom, backed by an archway. The cake, baked and decorated by Mrs. Leon Pribula of Alvarado was cut and served by Mrs. Colleen Johnson, Oslo, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Kathlyn Leland, Detroit Lakes, sister of the groom. Coffee was poured by Mrs. Ethel Nordlund, Alvarado, godmother of the bride, and Mrs. Gladys Sorter, Middle River, cousin of the groom.

Waitresses were cousins of the bride, Terri Johnson, Kathy Johnson, and Erin Coulter, all of Alvarado. Inez Gunderson, Lengby, a friend of the bride, arranged the gifts.

Following a Harley Davidson motorcycle trip across Canada and British Columbia, to Washington, Oregon and back by way of Wyoming, the couple is now at home in Thief River Falls. The bride is a graduate of the Alvarado high school and the Thief River Falls AVTI school of practical nursing. She is employed in the Intensive Care Unit at Northwestern hospital. The groom, a graduate of Newfolden high school and the local AVTI, department of mechanics, is a self-employed mechanic. Photo, Lund Photography, Roseau.

Ross A. Cleven Baptized At Our Saviour's Church

Ross Adam Cleven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Cleven of Thief River Falls, was baptized Sunday, November 4, at Our Savior's Lutheran church in this city.

Rev. Eugene Enderlein administered the sacrament. Sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Larry Ness of Plummer and Mr. and Mrs. Leland Nelson of Thief River Falls.

Following the baptism, the Clevens hosted a dinner at their home. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ness, Lisa and Stacey, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, Dale and Dana; Gladys Olsen, Hilda Cleven, and Ross' grandfather, Alvin Nelson.

The child's paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cleven, were unable to attend.

Star Homemakers Tour Scheduled For Friday

Star Homemaker's tour will be held on Friday, November 16. Homemakers will meet at Grandma Lee's at 9 a.m., for morning coffee. At 10:00, they will tour Arctic, followed by luncheon and shopping at Thebothofus.

In the afternoon, Scandia House, Horseshoe Gardens, Falls Mall, and Pennington Square will be visited, with a stop at Floyd's Appliance for coffee.

Those wishing to share rides may contact Loretta Stucy or Elva Fiedler.

EFC Ladies Aid Will Meet at Newfolden

Ladies Aid of the Evangelical Free church, Newfolden, will meet Friday at 8 p.m., at the church.

Special music will be provided by Mr. and Mrs. James Olson and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Olson. Mrs. James Olson will speak.

Hostesses will be Mrs. Elmer Johnson, Mrs. Art Skadsem, Mrs. Elsie Berggren and Mrs. Marcella Tale.

The public is welcome to attend.

Marriage Vows Spoken By Mostrom And Ose

Arrangement of sunflowers and blooming potted plants in the seating area, provided a country western atmosphere for the wedding of LeRoy Benjamin Ose and Geraldean Kay Mostrom. The ceremony took place on Sunday, August 5, on the front lawn of the Ose farm north of Thief River Falls.

The bride is the daughter is the daughter of the late Victor and Doris Mostrom, who resided at Trail. Parents of the groom are Mrs. Elaine Ose, rural Thief River Falls, and the late Tarkel Ose.

Rev. Gaylen Ose, McIntosh, brother of the groom, officiated at the ceremony, reading Jer. 29:11-14; Eph. 3:14-21; and Math. 19:4-6. A prelude of guitar music was provided by Karen Good Brown, White Earth, a cousin of the bride. During the ceremony, she played the guitar and sang "The Wedding Song," and "Annie's Song." The processional, "A Time For Us," and the traditional recessional was played by pianist Mrs. Lee (Kathryn) Johnson, Minneapolis, a sister of the groom. Mrs. Johnson also accompanied Clark Dyrud, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the groom, as he played the flute solo, "Evergreen," and the violin solo, "Amazing Grace." The couple wrote their own wedding vows.

The bride was escorted by her son, Jared Mostrom-Borgen. She was attired in a gown of her own design, featuring her mother's light blue satin wedding dress, with a restyled sweetheart neckline fitted bodice and full skirt. Topping the gown was a white chiffon overdress fashioned with a mesh neckline and full bishop sleeves, both accented by hand beadwork. The full skirt, which flowed from a V-waistline, was complemented by a lace edged flounce and a three-tiered ruffled train. Completing the creation were English netting and Venice lace fleurets. Her fingertip veil was held by a chiffon covered derby which the bride had designed and trimmed with blue silk roses and babies' breath, similar to the ones in her hair. She carried a cascade of blue silk roses, light blue silk carnations, babies' breath, English ivy, ferns and rose leaves. In the old, new borrowed and blue tradition, she carried a lace handerkerchief, borrowed from the groom's mother.

Cindy Carpenter, Fargo, N.D., a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Leslie Ose, niece of the groom; Sue Hegtvedt, Thief River Falls, and Faith Rud, Warren. Their identical sundresses of a pale, dusty blue, were topped by long-sleeved floral print jackets of blue, aqua, tan and peach voile, featuring stand-up ruffle collars with a Western tie front. Each attendant carried a fan trimmed with fresh peach roses, blue silk roses and carnations, babies' breath and ferns, accented with peach ribbon streamers. Their gold bracelets were gifts from the bride.

Courtney and Nichoel Mostrom-Borgen, daughters of the bride, were junior bridesmaids. Their matching floor-length gowns were of the same floral print as the attendants' jackets. Western ties accented their necklines. To complete their attire, they wore derby hats and carried baskets of blue and peach carnations.

Serving the bride as her personal attendants were Debbie Butler, Linda Ness and Julie Dempsey, all of Thief River Falls.

Dennis Benson, Thief River Falls, a friend of the groom, was best man; Greg Berger, Thief River Falls; Iven Ose, St. Paul, a brother of the groom; and Clark Dyrud were groomsmen. The groom, his attendants, and the bride's son wore tan Squire tuxedos with satin trim accenting the Western cut, white shirts, tan Western ties, and peach colored boutonnieres. To accent the country-western theme, they also wore cowboy boots, as did the bride.

Serving as ushers were Joe Ose, brother of the groom, and Tom Ose, a nephew.

Mrs. Gladys Hanson, Trail, the grandmother of the bride, wore a belted pantsuit in a peach shade. For her youngest son's wedding, Mrs. Ose selected a cream-colored dress, gathered at the waist with a sash of peach floral print accented with pale blues and greens. Their corsages were of peach roses and blue carnations.

Special relatives and friends attending were from Santa Monica, Calif., Motello and Colfax, Wis.; Colleen Park, Md., Scottsdale, Ariz., St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fridley, Crystal, Silver Bay, Little Marlus, and the Thief River Falls surrounding area.

A picnic reception immediately followed the ceremony. Centering the table was a three-tiered wedding cake baked and decoarted by Debbie Butler. The cake, decorated with blue flowers and topped with a pair of doves, was cut and served by Mrs. Lee Johnson. Jennifer Ose, Thief River Falls, and Alan Grose, Santa Monica, Calif., attended the guest book as Douglas Grose, Santa Monica and Tim and Scott Ose arranged the gifts.

At the serving table were Mrs. J.O. (Betty) Valtinson, Minneapolis; Mrs. Chris (Julie) Grose, Santa Monica, Mrs. Roger (Jan) Ose, Minneapolis; Mrs. Gaylen (Phyllis) Ose, McIntosh and Mrs. Joe (Dawn) Ose, Thief River Falls, sisters and sisters-in-law of the groom.

Recorded music by the bride's father playing the accordion created background music for the reception.

For the wedding trip to Itasca State park, the bride wore an oriental styled green brocade pantsuit, a gift from the groom.

The bride is a graduate of Northland Community college and attended Moorhead state university. She is presently employed by Richard Harris and Associates of Minneapolis. The groom, a graduate of Lincoln high school, attended California Lutheran Bible institute in Los Angeles, the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Northland college and the Thief River Falls AVTI, where he studied agri-business. He is engaged in farming with his brother near Thief River Falls where the couple is now making their home.

Brunch Egg Casserole

4 cups of toasted bread cubes (about 6 slices)
8 oz. Natural Cheddar Cheese — shredded (2 cups)
8 slightly beaten eggs
4 cups of milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon onion powder
one-eighth teaspoon pepper

Method: Spread bread cubes in a greased 9x13 baking dish. Sprinkle cheese over the bread. Blend eggs, milk, salt, mustard, onion powder and pepper. Pour this over the bread-cheese mixture and bake at 325 degrees for 40-45 minutes or until egg mixture is set. Meanwhile, crisp cook and crumble ten slices of bacon. Sprinkle over casserole during the last ten minutes of baking. Makes ten servings.

Valley Home Events Reported By Ella Overum

Local and area pastors and laymen were in charge of devotional meditations at Valley Home during the month of October, according to the report received from Ella Overum, a resident of the home.

Included among them were Rev. Norheim, and the Liberation Singers from the Lutheran Brethren school in Fergus Falls; LeRoy Knutson and Mr. and Mrs. Percey Stokke, Newfolden; Irvin Schmitke, Rev. Raynard Huglen of Newfolden; Paul Abel, intern pastor at Our Savior's Free Lutheran church; Rev. Frank Armstrong and his wife of the First Baptist church; Rev. E. Dobkins of the Seventh Day Adventist church, Rev. Lloyd Heroff of the St. Hilaire Lutheran parish, Rev. George DeWall and family of the Bible Baptist church, and Rev. J.M. Hovland of Trinity Lutheran church, who has services every Wednesday afternoon and Holy Communion services the last Wednesday of the month.

Tuesday evening devotional services were held by Dean Paskewitz, assisted by Arlen Sandland and Delbert Erickson; the Don Johnson family, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Trochmann and Norris Trochmann. Mrs. Knute Jore was in charge of Bible study every Tuesday at 9 a.m.

Mass was offered every Saturday at 9 a.m., with priests of St. Bernard's parish, in charge. On Sunday, October 14, the Spirit Seekers of St. Bernard's, presented a program and served punch and cookies to the residents. Members of the Hannah unit of Redeemer church visited with the residents and served an assortment of sweet breads; and the Lydia circle members of Trinity served doughnuts when they visited the Home.

The resident's monthly birthday party was held in conjunction with the Halloween party. Wearing Halloween costumes were Blanche Protz, Mildred Fritzinger, Pauline Culmer, Tammy Rude, Jan Wahlbeck and Olive Lunke. Entertainment included a reading by Jan Wahlbeck, several selections by the band, and a number of contests. Cheryl Srnsky was in charge of distributing the birthday cards with cash gifts from the home. The birthday honorees also received birthday cards from the Catholic Daughters. Those honored and the dates of their birthdays were Estelle McClintok, October 11; Marie Larson, October 13; Einar Ness, October 15; Ethel M. Johnson and Clara Overum, both on October 16; Charles Bowman, October 21, and Betsy Pearson and Olga Christianson, October 22. Lunch featured ice cream served by Ella Overum, Marie Larson, Einar Ness, Ethel M. Johnson, Betsy Pearson and a number of employees, who observed their birthdays during that month.

Serving ice cream on the day of their birthdays were Charles Bowman and Olga Christianson.

Other Halloween activities included a program by the Jaycee Women and their children, who distributed treats; and a Halloween party hosted by the CAP students, who wore appropriate costumes. The CAP party included several contests, including the guessing of the weight of a large pumpkin. The correct weight of 10½ pounds was guessed by Adlyn Williams. Several residents guessed 10 pounds and were given smaller pumpkins for making jack-o-lanterns.

Several residents were guests at a coffee party on October 30 in the Royal Room. Hosting the party were Ruth Olson and Alma Elofson.

Another highlight of the month was the ribbon cutting ceremony for the covered bridge located in the park near Valley Home. Dignitaries at the ribbon cutting were Mayor Bob Carlson, Lowell Swenson, who donated the park, and the Stensgaard brothers, who constructed the bridge.

On October 25, Mrs. Lester Brekke, Dorothy Johnson, Gloria Cleven, Blanche Protz, Georgia Malberg and Mildred Fritzinger attended the all-day arthritis seminar held at the Best Western.

Other activities at the Home during October included an organ and piano concert by Dorothy Johnson and Cheryl Srnsky; a bowling game with the team from the Oakland Park Nursing home winning; a spelling bee with Maggie Van Tassel as champion; Sing-a-longs every Tuesday led by the CAP students, Julie Johnson, Susie Olson and Jeff Poole; bingo games every Monday with Tammy Rude in charge, and a display of books, cards and novelties from the Bethany Book store, which were for sale to the residents.

Inadvertently ommitted from the September activities were the birthday party of Selma Kortesmaki, who served ice cream and birthday cake to all the residents and staff on September 1st; the donation of sugar plums from Mrs. Benhard Wold; and the free pancake brunch at the Masonic lodge, sponsored by the Eastern Star and Masons with eight residents attending.

Adding interest to the bulletin boards at the Home are pictures of the residents taken by Mrs. Brekke and Tammy Rude.

Board members not pictured but who were recognized for more than five years of continuous service include: Caroline Drangstveit, 10-year pin, and Betty Olson, who earned a 15-year recognition pin. There are presently 26 employees with five or more years of continuous service at Oakland Park nursing home, resulting in a total of 322½ years of service.

Two Area Men Appointed To FmHA Boards

Curtis J. Swanson of rural Thief River Falls and Einar Kvasager of rural Oklee have been appointed to the Farmers Home administration Pennington county and Red Lake county committees, respectively. Appointments were announced recently by Francis J. Koehmstedt, FmHA county supervisor. Swanson and Kvasager are farmers in the area and are active in community affairs.

Pennington and Red Lake county FmHA committees are composed of three members, each appointed by the FmHA state director for a three-year term. One appointment to each committee expires each year. County committee persons must be knowledgeable of the types of farming operations in the area and have a good understanding of agricultural financing.

Other members of the Pennington county committee include Albert Kotrba and Cornelius Appelman of Goodridge. Other members of the Red Lake County committee include Darrell Glass of Red Lake Falls and Gilbert Genereux of Brooks.

Farmers Home administration, a rural development agency of the U.S. department of agriculture, provides financial assistance to family farm operators, homeowners, small towns and rural businesses.

Major functions of the county committee are to determine eligibility of individual applicants for loans; make recommendations with respect to loans to associations, soil and water districts, and partnerships; and to advise with the county supervisor concerning the servicing of loans with respect to borrowers who should be referred to other credit sources.

Area Angus Breeders Join In Field Day

Red River Valley Angus association field day and Calf sale offered a full afternoon of events recently at Ada.

Beth Gerhardson from Crookston walked away with first place honors in the women's division of the judging contest, followed by Peggy Solem, Thief River Falls in second place.

Top place in the men's division was taken by Leroy Stumpf from Plummer and second went to Roger Solem from Thief River Falls.

In a late afternoon heifer and steer sale the top heifer calf was consigned by Vernon Strommen, Twin Valley, and sold to Steve Vikers from Mahnomen for $825.

Type and fitting demonstration was given by Winfred Bauer from Ada and Leroy Stumpf.

Fuel Prices For Farm Use Continue Rise

Bulk farm fuel prices climbed last month at the lowest rate since last February but the impact on Minnesota agriculture busy with the fall harvest of field crops was still significant, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin said.

Average Minnesota farm delivered bulk fuel prices on October 15 were at new record levels of 96 cents a gallon for gasoline and 85 cents a gallon for diesel oil. Those prices represented increases of two cents for gasoline and one cent for diesel oil, per gallon, since mid-September.

But on an annual comparison Minnesota's mid-October farm fuel prices this year were higher by 85 per cent on diesel fuel and by over 52 per cent on gasoline.

Most of that annual fuel price increase has been experienced during this field crops production season. Last April Minnesota farmers paid an average of 73 cents a gallon for gasoline and 60 cents a gallon for diesel fuel.

Commissioner Seetin said that estimated fall harvest fuel costs this year for Minnesota's nearly 12.85 million acres of corn, soybeans, sunflowers, sugarbeets and potatoes increased by nearly $200,000 in just the past month.

Minnesota farmers also had a greater total acreage of fall crops to harvest this year than in 1978, higher by almost 1.6 million acres. That, plus the sharp increases in fuel prices means that this year's harvest and field cleanup farm fuel bill may total $68.9 million, or 94 per cent higher than Minnesota's fall farm fuel bill in 1978 of about $35.6 million.

The first states to have equal pay legislation for women were Michigan and Montana in 1919, according to the U.S. Labor Department booklet "Labor Firsts In America".

Push Button Weather Data Aids Travelers

Travelers can now push a button at any of the five Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) travel information centers and get the latest weather conditions and forecasts, according to Sam Gargaro, director of electronic communications for Mn-DOT. These weather information stations have a direct hookup to the national weather service (NWS).

Information stations are located in the staffed travel information centers near Albert Lea, off northbound I-35, one mile north of the Minnesota-Iowa line; near Beaver Creek, off eastbound I-90, 4.5 miles west of the city of Beaver Creek; near Dresback, off west-bound I-90, 2.5 miles north of La Crescent; near Moorhead, off eastbound I-94, 1.5 miles east of Moorhead; and at Thompson Hill, I-35 and US 2 junction, west limits of Duluth.

Last year Mn-DOT, in cooperation with NWS, designed and installed eight U.S. national weather service broadcast stations that provide Minnesotans with severe weather warnings and the latest forecasts. Mn-DOT also maintains the broadcast stations which are strategically located at department radio transmitting sites.

The broadcast stations supply weather data to the push-button receivers in Mn-DOT's travel information centers.

MCCL Meet Attracts Seven From TR Falls

Attending the eighth annual convention of Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life (MCCL) at the Holiday Inn in St. Cloud recently were Jim and Kris Kremer, Zonie Easton, Mary Evans, Pat Krystosek and Ron and Jackie Schwietz, all of Thief River Falls.

"There is something grotesque about extending the law's protection to microscopic fish such as the snail darter, but withdrawing legal protection from an unborn child," stated U.S. Congressman Henry Hyde in a speech during the convention.

Congressman Hyde, namesake of the Hyde amendment to limit federal abortion funding, said that more human life is killed by abortion in one year than we have lost in all our wars and "all in the blessed name of humanity."

"The question is: Is human life something special to our civilization, to our country, or are we to be guided by the precepts of animal husbandry?" he asked.

Patrick Trueman, executive director of the Chicago-based Americans united for life legal defense fund, stated: "Since the 1973 supreme court decision, neither Congress nor any of the state legislatures have passed a single pro-abortion piece of legislation. Yet the courts have continued to legislate to expand and protect the "right" to abortion," he said, "by handing down decisions such as those preventing husbands from knowing that their wives are planning to have abortions and preventing parents from knowing their minor daughters are planning abortions."

Also speaking at the convention was Connecticut Senator Regina Smith, who is active in numerous civic and community affairs and is cofounder of the pro-life council of Connecticut.

Over 400 people from across the state attended the convention.

Noting one advantage to be gained by participants enrolling in the workshop, a hotel, restaurant and institutional management (HRI) division spokesman pointed out that HRI instructor Sharon Stewart has just returned from the national restaurant show in Chicago, where she learned much about new methods and equipment. Other workshop instructors include Joseph Behm, also an HRI instructor, and Thomas Bloom, chairman of the HRI division.

600 Small MN. Cities Unite And Organize

More than 600 Minnesota cities with populations of under 5000 are in the process of forming a representative organization called the Minnesota League of small cities (MLOSC).

This organization has sprung into being in response to the many needs, problems and opportunities unique to the small cities of the state which are not being addressed by the state legislature or any other governmental group.

Originated as part of the coalition of outstate cities, the MLOSC was encouraged to become a separate organization as its rapid growth threatened to dominate the coalition and its different interests become apparent.

Statewide organizational membership meeting will be held December 1 at the Holiday Inn in St. Cloud. At that time the present officers pro tem will be confirmed and the bylaws will be ratified. Willard O. Vetter, mayor of Skyline, has been serving as president of the MLOSC.

Two of the problems that have stimulated interest in the MLOSC have been the inequitable "Aid to Local government" formula, and the new law regarding police officers' training, which many believe will put certified policement beyond the means of many small communities.

The MLOSC will soon apply for affiation to the League of Minnesota cities. With such affiliation it will gain the same status and privileges as the coalition of outstate cities and the association of metropolitan municipalities.

It is felt by officials of many small communities in the state that the Minnesota legislature is not tuned in to their special needs and interests. By presenting a united voice to the legislators, the MLOSC is confiecent of gaining positive input on legislation affecting small cities.

The first woman secretary of Labor and the first woman cabinet officer was Frances Perkins who was appointed in 1933, according to the Department of Labor booklet "Labor Firsts In America". She was also the first Secretary of Labor not to belong to a union and the first to have a college education.

ARE OUR TEACHERS AS GOOD AS THEIRS?
Our school board apparently doesn't think so. According to their last proposal, this is how much LESS money they offered a Thief River Falls teacher with a M.A. degree and 10 years experience than the same teacher is currently making in the following schools:
TRF Teacher .... $2039 Less Than ..... Alexandria
TRF Teacher .... $2472 Less Than .... Bemidji
TRF Teacher .... $ 632 Less Than ... Detroit Lakes
TRF Teacher .... $1859 Less Than ..... Moorhead
TRF Teacher .... $ 887 Less Than .... Morris
TRF Teacher .... $ 451 Less Than .... Roseau
TRF Teacher .... $4804 Less Than ... Grand Rapids
• TRF Teachers are working without a contract.
• TRF Teachers are willing to settle for less than the cost of living.
• TRF has enough money in its budget to meet teacher requests without any tax increase.

Senior Citizen Plans Approved For Funding

Two senior citizen projects were approved for funding by the Northwest regional development commission under Title III-B of the older Americans act.

Middle River will receive $3,085.95. This will enable them to pay for commercial kitchen equipment which is intended to be used for a senior meal program (if expansion funds and approval of the Middle River site becomes a reality). Middle River senior citizens club, Spruce Valley township, city of Middle River, Marshall county, and Northwest community action agency, all worked on the application.

City of Newfolden will receive $750 Title III-B money. This money will enable the Newfolden senior center to make their restrooms accessible to the handicapped. Newfolden senior center, which has a senior meal program, has to comply with the handicap accessibility "504" code by June 30, 1980. This grant will enable Newfolden to meet the necessary regulation.

Home Council Seminar Here On Tuesday

Extension home council members from the Northwest district are invited to participate in a home councilor seminar on Tuesday at the Elks club in Thief River Falls.

The seminar will begin with registration from 9:30 to 10 a.m. A welcome will be given by Deborah Matero, Pennington county extension agent, followed by a presentation on extension homemaker clubs given by Arleen Barkeim, northwest district director. Cindy Woodall from Ottertail power company will discuss home lighting in the afternoon. Cost for the day, which includes noon luncheon, is $4.50.

Any home councilor who plans to attend the seminar should contact the Pennington dounty extension office at 681-2116.

Sheep Producer Meet Set For November 15

Efforts are under way by the Pennington county extension service to begin a county sheep producers association. An organizational meeting has been set for Thursday, November 15, at 8 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse meeting room.

Object of the association is to increase sheep production by the exchange of ideas and suggestions among producers and to use the resources of the University of Minnesota extension service as a vehicle to solving production problems in the area.

All area sheep producers are invited to attend.

Newly-discharged military members receive a letter from the Veterans Administration advising them of their eligibility for benefits.

Texas Cowgirls Add Charms To TRF Events

But it wasn't that way when we were with the group."

Contrary to some stories that have been circulated, Debbie and Linda weren't released from the Cowboys cheerleading corps as a result of their Playboy appearance. They had already left the organization and were part of the newly-formed Texas Cowgirls at that time. Half a dozen other cheerleaders for professional football teams who posed for the magazine were fired, however.

The girls have no hesitation in crediting the exposure in Playboy as being the catalyst to their rise in the entertainment field. And neither has any plans to stay with the Cowgirls for any extended period of time. They are looking to movie and modeling careers and feel that the contacts they have established will stand them in good stead as they seek those goals.

"We know a lot of people now," Linda added. "We've toured in Japan and we have performed with Gabe Kaplan in Las Vegas, putting on a 30-minute show. We got that job because Gabe saw us in Playboy."

During Tuesday evening's "pep rally" at the sports arena prior to Wednesday's football game here, the girls posed on a Hydra-Mac loader with dealers from throughout the country while photographs were taken. They instinctively reacted to the cameras and struck and held poses and smiles in unison.

"We can hear a shutter click a mile away," Debbie said. She has done quite a bit of photographer's modeling and her resume lists her face, eyes and mouth as outstanding features. But she has modeled in the nude for a jewelry company ("...they draped hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewels all over me") as well as for Playboy and looks on it as just another job.

The girls state that Playboy photographers are very professional, shooting 600 or more pictures during a six-hour photo session. "They never touch you," Linda said. "They use lots of lights when shooting indoors but use mostly natural light outdoors. It's just a job."

Both Kepley and Kellum are single. The only presently married member of the group that appeared here is Susan Grissaffi. Kepley was married at one time; it was her husband who encouraged her to try out for the cheerleaders.

"The real problems started when he realized that once a week 65,000 people, mostly men, were watching his wife," she told a Washington Star staff writer during an interview. "Needless to say, the second year I tried out, I wasn't married."

Both girls look forward to marriage and families, however. They know that their youth won't last forever and they're reaching for whatever success they can attain now.

Neither had any serious parental objections to their Playboy posing. When someone mentioned it to their parents in an uncomplimentary way, their parents met the thrust by simply stating, "Oh, I didn't know YOU read THAT magazine!"

And both say they will show their Playboy photos to their own children in the future. "Sure, I'll show them when they're ready," Debbie said. "After all, it's a part of our life and we live with it. I'm proud that they asked me to pose."

DNR, County Officials Meet On State Land

hopeful a settlement can be reached. He expressed the personal opinion that some purchases and land exchanges supported by the DNR could receive board approval as part of a settlement although the board has not approved any DNR land acquisition in the county for a number of years.

"When we reviewed the lands in question in Roseau county," he said, "we determined in our own opinion that two-thirds are unquestionably best suited for wildlife. If other acreage should be classified agricultural, I believe the board would not hurry into any immediate sale. I would say that the board would be very cautious and that any sales to private parties would be scattered over a period of years."

Deputy Commissioner Thorne also expressed his resolve to reach a final decision on the lands in question. "We will negotiate some more and meet again before the first of the year," he said.

Seminar For Secretaries

Thief River Falls AVTI is offering a one-day seminar for secretaries and executive assistants who wish to use their time more effectively. This seminar will be held on Tuesday, November 20, at Lon's restaurant in Thief River Falls.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. with the workshop running from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A fee of $20 covers materials, coffee, rolls and lunch.

Sandra Merwin, training consultant from Mound, will conduct the seminar. Some objectives of this seminar are to develop an understanding of office priorities, manage interruptions, increase effective delegation communication, discover and implement change for time wasters, and to increase the employer's time effectiveness with office systems.

To pre-register or for a detailed brochure, contact adult education, area vocational-technical institute, highway 1 east, Thief River Falls, phone 681-5424.

Serving as active pallbearers were Dale Hanson, Roger Wojciechowski, Robert Bentow and Delray Beito.

Jason Roger Hanson was born in Thief River Falls on April 15, 1975 to Roger and Barbara Hanson.

Surviving are his parents, a sister, Dârci, at home; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beito, Strathcona; his maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Joyce Price, Springfield, Mo., and several aunts, uncles and cousins.

He was preceded in death by his paternal grandparents.

C. Stoskopf Services Set

Charles Stoskopf, 82, of this city and formerly of Warroad, died this morning (Monday) at his home at 1508 Northland Village.

Funeral services for Charles Stoskopf will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m., at St. Mary's Catholic church at Warroad.

Recitation of the Rosary will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Helgeson Funeral chapel at Warroad.

A complete obituary will be published in a later edition of the Times.

Harry Storeby Dies Saturday; Rites Tuesday

Harry Storeby, 74, of Thief River Falls and formerly of the Strandquist community, died Saturday at Northwestern hospital.

Funeral services for Harry Storeby will be held Tuesday at 10:30 a.m., at the Green Funeral chapel with Rev. J.A. Riveness of Karlstad officiating. Mrs. Arnold Hammer will serve as organist and soloist. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

The body is reposing at the Green Funeral home where it will repose until time of services.

Harry Theodore Storeby as born July 10, 1903 at Yellow Medicine county to Peder and Martha Storebo. He moved with the family to the Strandquist community in 1908 and attended school there. He was confirmed in 1916 at the Hegland Lutheran church.

In December of 1926, he was married to Ellen Holmstrom. They lived and farmed in the Strandquist area for many years. Since 1961, Storeby had made his home in Thief River Falls.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Larry (Joyce) Brunow, Kansas City, Kans.; three sons: E.W. Storeby, St. Paul; Palmer, Inver Grove Heights; and Vernon, Strandquist; 13 grandchildren, two great-grandchildren; and two brothers: Conrad Storeby, North St. Paul, and Oscar, St. Paul.

He was preceded in death by his parents, four brothers and two sisters.

Ole Easthouse Services Held At Goodridge

Funeral services for Ole Easthouse, 85, of Goodridge, were held Friday at 2 p.m., at the Faith Lutheran church, Goodridge. Easthouse died Tuesday at Northwestern hospital.

Rev. Gene Broughton officiated at the services. Mrs. Alice Skreland was the organist and Mrs. Grace Hammer, the soloist. Interment was in the Goodridge cemetery. The Green Funeral home was in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Albert Johnson, Elmer Johnson, Joe Belange, Donald Johnson, Eldon Johnson and Leon Johnson.

Ole Easthouse, a son of the late Ole and Ingeborg Klepp Easthouse, was born June 17, 1894 at Thompson, N.D. As a child, he moved with his parents to Thief River Falls where they settled in the Silver Creek area. There he attended school and grew to manhood. He was baptized in North Dakota and confirmed at the Silver Creek Lutheran church.

On Aug. 17, 1922, he was united in marriage to Anne Tollefson in Thief River Falls. Following their marriage, the couple lived in Duluth and Gonvick before moving to the Goodridge area in 1926. Since then, they have made their home there.

He was a member of the Faith Lutheran church.

Surviving are his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Ted (Carole) Larson, Plymouth; two sons: Irving Easthouse, Goodridge, and Howard, Coon Rapids; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Also surviving are two sisters: Mrs. Sarah Hagen, Devils Lake, N.D., and Mrs. Alice Horstmann, Denver, Colo; and one brother, Joe Easthouse of Salinas, Calif.

He was preceded in death by a son, Roger; one grandson, two brothers: Tom and Andrew, and three sisters: Anna, Martha and Julia.

Rites Held For Henry Buen, 88, Once Soo-Liner

Funeral services for Henry Buen, 88, of Thief River Falls, a retired engineer for the Soo Line Railroad, were held Saturday at 2 p.m., at the Belmont Funeral home. Buen died Wednesday morning at Northwestern hospital.

Rev. Paul Bortnem, chaplain at Northwestern hospital, officiated at the service. Music was provided by Mrs. Arnold Hammer.

Pallbearers were Ole Engelstad, Charles Rodekuhr, Larry Nelson and Robert J. Anderson.

Graveside services and interment are being held today (Monday) at 3 p.m., at the Sunset Memorial Park in Minneapolis.

Henry Buen was born in Minneapolis on Jan. 11, 1893 to John and Marie Buen. He attended school and grew to manhood in Minneapolis.

In 1912, Buen began his employment with the Soo Line Railroad, working as a wiper in the roundhouse at Shoreham. He became a fireman in 1915, and in 1929, he became an engineer. He continued as an engineer until his retirement in 1961.

On Dec. 7, 1929, he was married in Minneapolis to Jane Martha Grams. The couple moved to Thief River Falls in 1935 and since have made their home here.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Ronald H. Buen, Denver, Colo; three grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Bertha Cimon of Minneapolis.

He was preceded in death by his parents and one brother.

When is a funeral well conducted? We would say that when those in attendance are not conscious that it is being conducted at all. When the details of direction are unnoticed, when the program moves quietly and smoothly.

We try always to make our own presence as inconspicuous as possible.

Respectfully,
Belmont Funeral Home
LARRY R. BELMONT
THIEF RIVER FALLS

LeRoy Rustad Rites Set At Dickson, Ill.

Le Roy C. Rustad, 68, of Dickson, Ill., brother of Mrs. Olaf Hagen and Mrs. Willie Hagen, both of Thief River Falls, died Friday morning at the Dickson Public hospital.

25 Named To Power Plant Siting Group

Arthur Sidner, chairman of the Minnesota environmental quality board and Allen Mulligan, vice-chairman of the MEQB and chairman of the citizen's advisory committee to the board, appointed 25 members to the general 1979-80 power plant siting advisory committee November 5.

Jeanne Crampton, a resident of St. Louis Park, was named chairperson of the committee. She is a member of the Minnesota board of the league of women voters and has been actively involved in energy related issues through the league.

Board solicited nominations for the statewide committee from legislators, regional development commissions, county boards and interest groups. More than 80 men and women from all parts of the state were nominated. Members were chosen to represent various interests and geographical areas of the state.

The committee will make recommendations to the EQB on the comparative economic and technical feasibility of various power plant capacities greater than 50 megawatts and the total effects of various combinations of plant sizes; the opportunities for local and regional community and economic development associated with the co-location of power plants and industry; the siting opportunities and impacts associated with various alternative electric energy generation systems that are greater than 50 megawatts; and other subjects the Board may request advise on.

Members of the committee include: Mary Sonnen, St. Paul; Rex Sala, Austin; Mike Philipp, Minneapolis; Ricardo Morales, Minneapolis; Kenneth Narr, Arlington; Richard Annear, Virginia; Jerry Kigin, St. Cloud; Ted Horwitz, Minneapolis; Harold Hagen, Starbuck; Sig Svendsen, Lake Crystal; Lance Provencher, Litchfield; Phillip Parsons, Northfield; Bill Richardson, Minneapolis; Timothy Kelly, Minneapolis; Wallace Fjone, Hartland; Ted Dosdall, Hancock; David Stevens, Mankato; Gus Shroeder, Hill City; Nick Schmitz, Wadena; Gary Velde, Granite Falls; Cecelia Lewis, Bemidji; David Dahl, Minneapolis; Byron Harris, Minneapolis; and Loren Rutter, Kinney.

First meeting of the committee is scheduled for 9 a.m., December 1, at the veterans service building in St. Paul.

ST. OLAF COLLEGE orchestra, conducted by David O'Dell, will be in Thief River Falls Tuesday at the Lincoln high school auditorium at 8 p.m. Performance is part of a 10-concert tour in Iowa, North Dakota, Montana and Minnesota. Orchestra is made up entirely of students from St. Olaf college, a four-year, coeducational, liberal arts college of 2,950 students in Northfield. The concert is the second in the current series of the Thief River Falls concert association and admission will be by season membership only.

Payroll Savings A Foolproof Way To Save

Suppose you want to buy a house, a car, or a large appliance. When should you start saving the money needed to get it? Long before the need arises is the obvious answer. But many people don't, or can't, save and have to borrow to meet their financial needs.

Any wage earner can start saving now, no matter what their financial status, by purchasing U.S. savings bonds through the payroll savings plan where they work. With payroll savings, bonds are purchased in small installments allotted directly from the paycheck. It's a foolproof way to save, because money not seen can't be spent.

The Series EE bonds that result from this saving have a lot to offer. They receive an average of 6.5 per cent interest per annum if held five years or more, a very good rate for small savers. In addition, bonds are exempt from state or local income taxes and can be replaced free if lost, stolen, mutilated, or destroyed.

Money mounts up fast. Savings of just $7.50 every two weeks will give you more than $1,100 in five years. Best of all, it's money you'll never miss while it's accumulating, but be glad you have when it's needed.

You and your family's future may well depend on the financial decisions you make today. By joining the payroll savings plan you will help assure that money will be available in time of need. That's the kind of financial security everyone needs and should have.

Haney To Head AP Broadcast Group In 1980

Don Haney, son of Thomas Haney of Thief River Falls, was recently chosen president-elect of the North Dakota Associated Press broadcasters association at the group's fall meeting in Minot.

Haney, a 1974 graduate of the AVTI audio communications division and a 1973 graduate of Northland community college, is presently a news director of Grafton's KXPO radio station.

Haney will now assume the duties from current president Norm Shrader, news director at WDAY in Fargo, in October of 1980. KXPO was also presented one of five awards given by the Associated Press recognizing outstanding news coverage in the past year. Haney has been with KXPO since March of 1975 and assumed the news director position in 1977.

Production Of Geese High, Prices Low

Consumers hungry for a traditional holiday season feast of roast goose have the best opportunity in 15 years to enjoy that entree feature at a family meal this winter, thanks to increased production of geese by Minnesota and South Dakota farmers, reports agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

Minnesota and South Dakota lead the nation in the production, processing and distribution of geese. There are only four goose processing plants in the nation under federal inspection, three in South Dakota and one in Minnesota.

Minnesota processor, Pietrus Foods, Inc., of Sleepy Eye, estimates that it will dress 185,000 geese for consumer markets this season. That will represent over 30 per cent of the national supply, estimated by the National Goose council at over 600,000 geese.

This year's production of geese in Minnesota commercial flocks not only is at the highest level since 1964, but it is more than five times the volume of geese raised and marketed for the holiday season just five years ago, according to L. Ben Kropp, president of the Pietrus Foods, Inc., at Sleepy Eye.

Increased supplies this year have stabilized retail prices of geese, and some consumers may find this year's goose the lowest priced in several years, with the National Goose council reporting market prices as much as 20 cents a pound below last year.

Despite increased supplies, and stable to lower prices, the goose industry spokespersons suggest that consumers place early orders for their holiday geese at the local retail food store, because there is only one goose available for each 307 Americans this year.

DOE Sponsoring Solar Workshop November 27

Department of energy will sponsor a solar workshop in Minneapolis November 27 at the Thunderbird motel. Coordinated by the national solar heating and cooling information center, the workshop is designed to enable lenders, appraisers, insurers, real estate agents; attorneys and tax consultants to better assess solar energy systems.

National solar heating and cooling information center is operated by the Franklin research center for the department of housing and urban development (HUD) in cooperation with DOE. Registration and other information is available by calling toll free the national solar information center at (800) 523-2929.

"This potentially enormous market will be stimulated by the President's goal of 2.5 million solar-equipped homes by 1985 and his goal of a 20 per cent solar contribution to the nation's energy supply by the year 2000," said Omi Walden, DOE assistant secretary for conservation and solar energy.

US Recognizes Medical Effort Of Adventists

United States government recently recognized the medical work being done in overseas countries by the Seventh-day Adventist, according to Rev. Ernest Dobkins, local SDA pastor.

USAID, a United States agency for International development has supplied one million dollars for the Adventist Kanye hospital in Botswana, $550,000 for the Malamulo hospital and leprosarium in Malawi, and $235,000 for the Adventist hospital of Haiti, Rev. Dobkins said.

Thief River Falls Seventh-day Adventist church is calling upon its members to answer President Carter's challenge to U.S. churches to match the government's seventy million dollars in aid to the starving of Cambodia.

Funds may be channeled to the Seventh-day Adventist world services through the local church.

Dahlstrom Has Scholarship

Ten students at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks were awarded scholarships for the 1979-80 school year through a program supported by the Lakehead pipeline company. Among them was Timothy Dahlstrom of Thief River Falls.

Lakehead pipeline, part of the Interprovincial-Lakehead pipeline system, contributed $2,500 to UND for scholarships this year.

National Epilepsy Month Observed

November is national epilepsy month and marks the 25th anniversary of the Minnesota Epilepsy league, a voluntary health agency that serves the needs of people with epilepsy, their familes and concerned individuals.

Epilepsy is a disorder of the central nervous system characterized by recurring seizures caused by abnormal electrical discharges in the brain. Epilepsy comes from the Greek word meaning "to be seized." A seizure is a symptom, like a fever is for infection.

While epilepsy is not contagious, it can happen to anyone at any time during his or her life. Some known causes include problems before and during birth, such as infections, lack of oxygen to the brain, and injury; head injuries, such as in automobile or motorcycle accidents; infectious diseases (meningitis, encephalitis or brain abscess); toxic factors, such as lead or mercury poisoning; tumors of the brain; and strokes. The cause of epilepsy is unknown in approximately half of the cases.

There are an estimated 40,000 to 60,000 Minnesotans and 2.1 million Americans with some form of epilepsy, according to figures compiled by the Epilepsy Foundation of America. About 100,000 new cases develop every year. Epilepsy affects more Americans than cancer, tuberculosis, cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, and multiple sclerosis combined.

The most common types of seizures are grand mal, petit mal and psychomotor.

Grand mal is a generalized convulsive seizure affecting the entire body. The person falls and loses consciousness; stiffens and makes jerking movements. He may bite the tongue and pass urine. Breathing is labored and may stop completely for a time. The person finally regains consciousness, but is usually dazed or sleepy. The entire seizure usually lasts one to three minutes.

Petit mal seizures consist of loss of consciousness for a few seconds, during which there may be staring, eye blinking or mild facial twitching. The person usually does not fall. This type of siezure is most common in children and is frequently mistaken for daydreaming or inattentiveness.

Psychomotor seizures are often characterized by pointless activity. The person may have a glassy stare; give no response or an inappropriate response when addressed; move about aimlessly; make lip-smacking or chewing motions; and fidget with clothing. People experiencing psychomotor seizures are often mistaken for being drunk, drugged or even psychotic.

What should you do if you are present when someone has a grand mal seizure:

Do not try to restrain the person; the seizure has to run its course. Help the person to lie down and put something soft, like a pillow or rolled-up coat, under the head. Remove glasses and loosen tight clothing. Do not force anything into the mouth. Clear the area of hard or sharp objects.

After the seizure turn the person to one side to allow saliva to drain from the mouth. Stay nearby until the person is fully alert.

There is no need to call an ambulance unless the person continues to pass from one grand mal seizure to another without regaining consciousness.

This rare occurence is known as "status epilepticus" and is a medical emergency requiring a doctor's care.

During a psychomotor seizure do not try to stop or restrain the person unless absolutely necessary for his or her safety. Remove harmful objects from the person's path and try to coax the person away from danger. Speak softly and calmly to the person. After the seizure, stay nearby until the person is fully alert.

Epilepsy can be treated with anti-epileptic drugs, the ketogenic diet and brain surgery. The last two are only used in a small number of cases.

There are currently 16 anti-epileptic drugs approved for use in the United States. These drugs control seizures completely in 50 per cent of the patients and give partial control in 30 per cent. The remaining 20 per cent are unaffected by the drugs.

The ketogenic diet features a high intake of fats. It is used as a treatment for petit mal seizures in a small number of children.

Only a few patients are candidates for surgery. The seizure disorder must arise from a single focus that can be moved without serious side effects.

Prepare yourself for another big jump in the price of energy.

Build with Stran now.

You might as well get ready for it. Energy costs continue to go up. And most forecasters don't see them ever coming back down to earth.

All that stands between you and a small fortune in energy costs is a well insulated building that holds utility costs to a minimum. A building like Stran builds.

You see, Stran has factory-insulated wall and roof systems, including our famous Stranwall 70 system, that can cut heating and cooling costs in half as compared to other methods.

Which is why some Stran wall and roof building products are specified for constructing refrigerated warehouses with temperatures held at −20 F or more. So we know how to keep you cool. Or warm, very efficiently.

As long as you're planning a new building, you might as well be prepared for the future. Give us a call. We'll show you why Stran buildings are looking better all the time.

Energy Shortage

Following editorial is from the Granite Falls Tribune:

Back in the 1930s the average size farm in Yellow Medicine county was 180 acres. Most farms were quarter sections and it took the man of the family, his young sons and probably a hired man at least seasonally to make the land produce. Few of these quarter sections were without a slough or two and it is doubtful if more than 140 acres of land was tilled when the pasture land, farmstead and portions too wet to farm were subtracted from the acres worked.

Farming was largely done with horsepower with perhaps a gasoline engine for pumping water into the stock tank. Corn was picked and shelled all winter by the sweat of the farmer and his helpers. The farmer's wife canned her garden produce and her refrigeration or cooling was by storing perishables deep in the well. Trips to town for supplies were once a week — Saturday night. Such farming required little in the line of energy other than what the farmer himself produced.

Farming is different today. Modern farms are many times larger and everything is done by outside energy. The crops are huge and the schedule for harvesting is tight with corn and beans coming out of the field and going directly to the dryer to reduce the moisture content for safe storage. One farmer friend told me that so far this year he had spent $10,000 for fuel for his grain dryer. He wasn't finished yet.

This year the corn crop is a "bin buster." The moisture content of the corn (many fields over 30 per cent) is running about 10 per cent greater than an average year. Current corn prices are the lowest in years while the energy cost of drying has gone up drastically. Some farmers are leaving their corn in the fields in hopes of it drying naturally with a later harvest.

The cost of drying and the shortage of energy may change farming practices in the years to come. We will be waiting to see what technology and the future means to rural Minnesota as we have known it.

Honesty Best Policy

Following editorial is from the St. Cloud Times:

Contrary to what many of us have come to suspect about the business world, honesty is still the best policy. It's also the only policy which works for the business community over the long haul. Few businesses which continually cheat their customers are ultimately successful. And this includes what we think of as "big" business.

Keeping this in mind, it is often difficult to understand the role of our federal government in its efforts to protect us from many business practices through its vehicle of federal regulation. The recent Federal Trade Commission (FTC) report on the insurance industry is a prime example.

The FTC is coming down hard on the insurance industry for "ill-informed and inappropriate life insurance choices." It is not our purpose to defend insurance companies against such charges, as they may have validity in some cases. However, each of us has had enough experience with the federal government to understand its house is not in sufficient order to attack any sector of private industry. We only have to take a close look at the General Services administration to realize most waste and financial misappropriation in America stems straight from the federal bureaucracy.

But hypocrisy aside, the worst discovery of federal meddling and federal regulation is not the sins of American industry, but the end result of government pressure on private business. Reputable business people have always sought to create quality products in an effort to be number one in the marketplace. When such reputable people are hampered to the point of exasperation by needless federal regulations they become frustrated and cynical. And in the end we all pay the price for their frustration.

When the federal government legislates Ralph Nader-type regulations for the automobile industry, we foot the bill in higher sticker prices on our cars. When the federal government descends on the insurance industry, we pay high premiums. When the federal government passes a "Wholesome Meat Act," we pay more for a pound of hamburger. And that's fine, if we could see an appreciable difference in the products we buy and the service we get but in most cases we cannot.

Most federal regulations could be removed from private industry tomorrow and the chances of us driving dangerous cars, eating poisoned meat and buying "inappropriate" insurance would not be much greater than they are today. Most people are smart enough to look out for themselves in their everyday transactions and those who are not, no regulation can protect.

This is not to say all federal regulation is bad or that all federal regulations should be immediately scrapped. But we could do with a lot less. A few well-conceived and strictly enforced federal regulations are preferable to the thousands we now have, a few of which do little more than frustrate the honest business person and drive up the price of all goods and services.

"Honesty is the best policy" is not a piece of original legislation, it is an old cliche which has proven true time after time, throughout history. It won't be complimented by blanket government attacks on the insurance industry or any other segment of private industry. We urge our senators and representatives to keep that in mind as they consider suggestions of more and more regulations.

Excessive federal regulation could drive the honest business to bankruptcy trying to comply with regulations designed to prevent the dishonest. It would be an ironic twist, leaving consumers with only the dishonest survivors.

Can't Please Everyone

Following editorial is from the Clark County Courier:

Pope John Paul made many profound statements on his recent tour. In his special way he promoted love, peace, fellowship, consideration for our fellow man, concern for the downtrodden, and indicated that we have a duty to those less fortunate than ourselves.

And he taught the writer a special lesson — it is impossible to please everyone. The crowds that gathered in Ireland and the U.S. would certainly indicate that Pope John Paul is undoubtedly the most popular man at the present, and possibly for several previous decades. He is a people's man, and all members of all faiths were eager to see and hear the man from Rome. Even in rural America where the population is sparse, 340,000 people gathered for a glimpse of the Catholic leader.

But in spite of his popularity, Pope John Paul left the American soil with dissention in his own ranks. Faithful followers spoke out against his stand on birth control. Some priests were unhappy with his stand on celibacy. He has opposition for his position on women being ordained to priesthood.

And therein lies the lesson for us all — and perhaps this is as it should be, but no individual can please every individual or segment of the populace. Even Jesus of Nazareth, the perfect man, was despised.

So for merchants, farmers, professional people, everyone — the top leader of the world has proven that he has opposition. The merchant may not have the right colored shirt for his customer, the item wanted isn't on the shelf of the grocery store, the newspaper should have pictured someone else with the story, the teacher isn't doing right by little Johnny, the farmer should have devoted more acres to sunflowers and corn — and the list could go on and on. We can't always please ourselves, and no way are we going to please all of the general public.

Like Pope John Paul we are going to have to let our conscience be our guide and let the chips fall where they may. And thanks to our visitor from Rome for the lesson.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Last night I found out there was no hot water at my house," the man complained. "So I really raised the roof! Believe me, I got hot water in a hurry." After a pause he added, "I just hate to wash dishes in cold water, don't you?"

At least one lady has ventured the opinion that women should never have been given the right to vote. "How can they choose the right representative," she asks, "when most of them can't even pick a good husband?"

"Do you-all serve Republicans:" asked the lanky southerner who entered a restaurant with a seven-foot alligator on a leash. "Of course, sir!" gulped the waitress. "Then bring a plate of fried chicken," he said, "and serve my friend here a Republican."

Son: "Dad, can we paint the car green?"
Dad: "You most certainly can not!"
Son to Brother: "See, I told you we should have asked."

Conserving Energy In The Home

The role of energy conservation in solving our nation's energy problems have become increasingly important. Among the various programs recently proposed to reduce our reliance on oil imports, energy conservation must receive top priority. It is the cheapest, quickest, safest and most environmentally sound method to reduce our nation's energy consumption.

The residential sector, which consumes the equivalent of 8 million barrels of oil a day, offers a vast potential of energy savings. Much of the nation's housing was built during times when energy was relatively cheap, and energy conservation techniques in design and construction were not considered. Many Americans now lack the financial resources needed to install conservation devices to correct these costly and wasteful energy problems.

As a result, the Environment, Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee of the Committee on Government Operations, of which I am a member, conducted an investigation and established a package of easily installed low cost-no cost conservation measures costing less than $100 that can save an average of 25 to 30 per cent on annual fuel bills.

1. Install a water flow controller. This is a small plastic device inserted in a shower head to reduce the flow of water. It conserves both water and energy necessary to heat it. An average home would save 4,000 gallons of hot water a year and $15-$50 per year in fuel bills.

2. Reduce temperatures on hot water heater. Most hot water heaters are set at 140 degrees to 160 degrees F. This setting can be reduced to 110 degrees to 120 degrees F and save $10-$20 per year. Cost of this improvement if five minutes of one's time.

3. Added water tank insulation. This reduces the heat loss from the tank and can save $10-$20 per year. Cost of this improvement is under $5.

4. Cold water laundry. Rinsing laundry in cold water and setting the wash on warm will still produce good results. Savings range from $20-$50 per year. Cost of the improvement is zero.

5. Plugging the fireplace damper. These dampers are often not tightly shut and may be a major cause of leakage. Savings may vary depending on the size of the gap but could range as high as $45 per year. Cost of the improvement is minimal.

6. Plugging attic "bypasses". It is common to find large openings where pipes and ducts are cut through the attic floor. Stopping attic-bypasses can save from $25-$80 per year. Cost of the improvement is less than $10.

7. Seal and insulate ducts. These are often a major source of hidden leaks. Covering ducts can save up to $100 a year in heating costs and $35 in central air conditioning costs. Cost of the improvement is minimal.

8. Furnace adjustments. Such adjustments are often at the top of any list of cost-effective energy-saving measures. Savings and costs will vary depending on the condition and efficiency of the furnace.

9. Thermostat setbacks. A 10 degree night setback can save 10-25 per cent on heating bills. Cost of the improvement is zero. If every household in the United States lowered its average heating temperature 6 degrees over a 24 hour period, we would save more than 570,000 barrels of oil per day.

10. Effective use of shades and drapes. If a homeowner uses air conditioning, a savings of $15-$30 can be achieved each cooling season. Assuming shades and drapes are in the house, the cost is zero.

Conservation is an important part of our energy future, and even though it is not possible for all of us to follow all of these suggestions, it is necessary for each and every one of us to do what we can to conserve energy.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Mr. Lundin, I wish to respond to an editorial which appeared in your paper on October 29, 1979, titled "Smile — You're Fluoridated!" Around the first of the year my family and I will be moving to Thief River Falls to open a dental practice. We have been most impressed with the entire community and while we certainly want to start off on the right foot the opinions expressed in this editorial should not be allowed to pass without comment.

The editorial applaudes Brainerd's 10 year long attempt to avoid adding fluoride to their water supply. The editorial points out how this is just another example of "big brotherism" shoving something down a throat of a helpless community.

Judge Herald Schultz of Ramsey County who ordered the Brainerd City Council to get on with the fluoridation did not strike a blow against my liberty, he rather struck a blow for the elimination of disease, the overburdening of health manpower and facilities, and the dependence directly attributable to avoidable dental disease.

With spiraling health costs in this nation, the pursuit of health individually and on a community-wide basis should, if for no other reason than economic, be considered both a right and a duty just as much as the pursuit of education has so long been considered.

Individuals need to expand their understanding of just what does constitute true liberty so that narrow prejudices do not prevent the full benefits to be derived from reason. I suggest that the applauding and commending be rather directed to those leaders of the Thief River Falls community who recognized many years ago the importance of adjusting fluoride levels in the water supply so that today everyone in Thief River Falls enjoys the benefits.

New Savings Bond Program Meets Old Need

United States savings bonds program has been with us nearly 40 years, helping millions of individuals to save with greater ease and helping the government finance the debt in a noninflationary manner. At the beginning of 1980, more than $80 billion worth of bonds were held by Americans, accounting for about one-sixth of the publicly-held portion of the debt.

Also at the beginning of 1980, the bond program changed. After 39 years, the Series E Bond was retired from issue and replaced by the Series EE Bond. Replaced, too, was the H Bond, 28 years old, with the HH Bond. The replacement did not affect the earnings of outstanding bonds, almost all of which will be earning interest for upwards of 10 to 20 years.

New series, though incorporating some changes, serve basically the same needs as their predecessors. EE Bonds, drawing an average interest rate of 6.5 per cent when held five years or more, are intended for small savers (the minimum denomination, $50, is purchased for $25). They can be bought regularly in small installments through the payroll savings plan offered by thousands of firms. Over the years, this has been a popular route to increased personal and family financial security for people who had difficulty saving. EE Bonds are the only way a small saver can buy a security that is exempt from state and local income taxes, is federal tax deferred, and is completely guaranteed against loss of any kind.

Series HH Bonds, like H Bonds, will be used by many for additional retirement income. E or EE Bonds can be exchanged for HH Bonds with a continuation of federal tax deferral so that interest is paid on the total, untaxed interest and principal. This improves the effective yield of HH Bonds — 6.5 per cent per annum, paid semiannually by treasury check — tremendously. Although the interest earned on HH Bonds must be reported yearly for federal tax purposes, the accrued E or EE Bond interest has to be reported only when the HH Bonds are cashed or reach final manturity.

So the new series, like the old, will help fill the savings needs of millions of Americans, helping them reach a higher level of financial security. Savings bonds continue to deserve the consideration of everybody who wants to increase the amount they save.

Savings Bonds Aid In Paying Holiday Bills

Christmas is a traditional time for giving. Families gather and exchange gifts and emotional support. It is the one time of year that friends are sure to be in contact, renewing old ties.

Unfortunately, it is also a time of running up bills — bills that will come due all too soon. You can be ready for those bills and solve some of your gift-giving problems by using the same medium, United States savings bonds.

Purchasing bonds regularly, either through the payroll savings plan at thousands of companies or through the payroll savings plan at thousands of companies or through the bond-a-month plan at banks, can insure a ready source of savings to meet any need. Either method gives participants an automatic way to take the work out of saving.

Bonds purchased earn an average of 6.5 per cent interest when held five years or more, have tax advantages not available on other forms of saving, and have the backing of the full faith and credit of the United States. Plans can build a substantial savings nestegg in a surprisingly short period of time.

Bonds are also great as gifts. Besides the interest and other advantages already mentioned, each bond can be personalized and given in the size that's right for anyone on your gift list. One stop at the bank can take care of many of your gift-giving problems.

Best of all, savings bonds are always available. You can give them anytime or buy them for yourself anytime. And Bonds can be cashed anytime after a six-month holding period, so you can celebrate Christmas in December or declare a holiday for yourself any time of year. Your bonds will always be ready to work for you, and for America's economy, at Christmas and throughout the year.

Winter Shows Board Holds Fall Meeting

Nearly all of the full Red River valley winter shows board met October 30, at Crookston for their fall meeting. Business meeting followed dinner with a discussion about the winter shows program for 1980.

Several board members pointed out the need for a schedule of events in the daily and weekly newspapers in the region. Plans were organized to complete the fund drive for the north arena. Fund drive has gone reasonably well, yet the final thrust must be completed by April of 1980, according to treasurer James Lofgren.

Two special ad hoc committees were put to work. A committee, chaired by Leonard Yuirzenka of Argyle, will study the presidency of the Red River valley winter shows and make a report by the annual meeting in June of 1980.

A "long-range planning committee" was appointed to review the mission of the Red River Valley winter shows. "How is that mission accomplished, and how does it fit into today's production agriculture and related industry in the Red River Basin?" are the questions to be considered. Long-range planning committee will report findings and recommendations at the fall meeting in November of 1980.

Last item was consideration and adoption of the operations budget for 1979-80.

Show dates for 1980 are February 22 through March 2. Booth space is filling up fast, according to Larry Brekken, manager.

3M Company Is MN. Business Award Winner

Minnesota's department of economic development hosted a first time ever luncheon in the state capitol rotunda in St. Paul Monday, November 5, to honor the first occasion of the presentation of the governor's business leadership award, which went to 3M of St. Paul.

Governor's award was commemorated by the unveiling of a cast bronze statue, which was presented to 3M vice chairman and chief executive officer, Lewis Lehr, by Governor Al Quie and by the commissioner of economic development, David Printy.

In his remarks Quie noted that 3M has been both an innovator and a leader in community service. "3M's van pooling program has pioneered national efforts in ride sharing. At one plant alone, this program has saved the country 220,000 gallons of gas a year," he said. Governor Quie added that the company has been a dedicated and active contributor to arts programs at both the local and national level. He also stated that the company's $450 million payroll is the largest industrial payroll in Minnesota, providing jobs for 22,200 of the state's residents.

4H CLUB

City View

City View 4-H club held its monthly meeting on November 6 at the city auditorium. Vice president Michelle Solseng brought the meeting to order. Secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved. Roll call was taken by naming your favorite "turkey". There was no old business.

New business: We discussed the Holiday Craft Fair on November 17. Each club is to contribute to it. We decided for our Christmas party we will go caroling at Valley Home and we will have a sledding party. Mrs. Roger Solem and the Creative Arts members will be making special projects for December.

For recreation we had our Halloween party. Everyone dressed up in costumes. We also played games. Nanci Kezar will show slides on Alaska at the next meeting. Lunch was served by the Lester Larson family.

Demonstrations were given by Cindi Solem on "Reaching Goals" and Stephanie Dagen on "Cutting Out a Pattern."

Present at the meeting were 26 4-H'ers, eight 4-H parents and one visitor.

STARTING LINE-UP for the Hydra-Mac Gear Drive in the Skid Steer Loader Bowl Wednesday afternoon in the Thief River Falls sports arena included the players pictured above. The team was comprised of the company's sales representatives who came to the annual dealer sales meeting from all parts of the United States. In a game designed to show Hydra-Mac superiority over competitive brands, this team beat the Chain Gang 28-0.

THE CHAIN GANG'S ANSWER to the Texas Cowgirls cheerleaders at Hydra-Mac's Skid Steer Loader Bowl Wednesday afternoon in the sports arena was this bevy of beauties. Shouting through megaphones created from plastic bleach bottles with the bottoms removed and waving pompons cut from newspaper, they led cheers for the Chain Gang in a losing effort.

COLD WEATHER greated the Texas Cowgirls during their three-day visit to Thief River Falls last week. Arctic Enterprises' general products and services division made the stay a little warmer by presenting the six visitors with insulated Arcticweat jackets. LaVonne Swanson, merchandising coordinator, made the presentation to (left to right) Debbie Kepley, Susan Pierson and Linda Kellum.

THE REAL ACTION and point of the entire football promotion for the Hydra-Mac dealer convention in Thief River Falls last week took place in this area of the sports arena following the Skid Steer Loader Bowl Wednesday. Dealers were encouraged to stop at the booth and place their orders for 1980 delivery. Success of the promotion was above expectations as the goal of $3 million in orders was surpassed by a large amount.

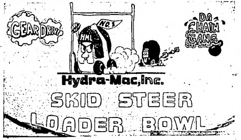
HYDRA-MAC TEAM in the Skid Steer Loader Bowl played Wednesday afternoon in the Thief River Falls sports arena was introduced to the fans as members burst through the hoop held by members of the Texas Cowgirls cheerleaders. The game was won by the Hydra-Mac Gear Drive team 28-0 over the Chain Gang, a group of players representing Hydra-Mac's competition in the skid steer loader industry. It was part of the football theme for the annual dealer meeting of the Thief River Falls corporation.

ACTION ON THE FIELD wasn't as fast as on the sidelines as the Hydra-Mac Gear Drive and the Chain Gang squared off in the Skid Steer Loader Bowl Wednesday afternoon. The entire ice arena of the sports arena was covered with green outdoor carpeting for the event and the Texas Cowgirls did the cheering for the successful Hydra-Mac team.



DEALER SALES MEETING of Hydra-Mac, Inc., of Thief River Falls featured a football theme this year when approximately 300 dealers, sales representatives and other guests came to Thief River Falls for the meeting. The sports arena was transformed into the Skid Steer Loader Bowl setting and this large poster inside the door of the arena proclaimed the big game held Wednesday afternoon. Hydra-Mac surpassed its sales goal at the meeting, signing orders for 517 machines to be delivered in 1980 with a total value of $4.7 million.

Policy Makers Want Views On Land Use

Policy-makers want to hear the public's views on land use and conservation during an agricultural land study workshop scheduled for November 13-15 at Moorhead's Ramada Inn.

"It's your turn to say what you want for Minnesota's land," says Robert Snyder, University of Minnesota extension land economist. "Land is a vital resource in America for both rural and urban people. Anyone with interests in using and caring for this resource should attend this workshop."

Goal of the workshop is to obtain views of all land users regarding land use, ownership, conservation, entry into agriculture and water rights.

There will be just one presentation to the group to provide an overview of agricultural land concerns. The rest of the workship will allow participants to discuss their views on issues, concerns, what needs to be done, who should handle problems and techniques and policies that have worked.

With a broad perspective being sought, real estate people, builders, developers, farmers, environmentalists, recreationists, consumer groups, users of natural resources, government representatives and business people are urged to attend.

"We want varying views. We want to know where users agree, disagree and what solutions have been developed locally to meet land use concerns," Snyder adds. "We want to examine the effect of industrial, urban, transportation and energy development and other land uses competing with agriculture. Views on the effects of federal and state programs on land use also are welcome."

The Moorhead workshop is part of a national agricultural lands study initiated by the council on environmental quality and the U.S. department of agriculture. Persons interested in attending can obtain additional details and registration materials from Ronald C. Powers, director, North Central Regional Center for Rural Development, 108 Curtiss Hall, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011.

Lambert Joins Stage Band At Wahpeton

Randy Lambert of Thief River Falls is a member of stage band at the North Dakota state school of science, Wahpeton, for the 1979-80 college year, according to Tilford Kroshus, music department chairman. Randy is a first-year student enrolled in civil engineering technology.

The stage band will be among eight groups selected to play in the fall concert slated for Thursday, November 15, at the college's Bute gym. During the year, the group plays at college concerts and area high schools and performs at high schools in a three-state area on its annual spring concert tour.

It plays a variety of popular, jazz and big band music

55 Companies Receive SBA October Loans

Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Minneapolis district office of the Small Business administration, announced recently that $6,703,400 in SBA loans had been approved for 55 Minnesota companies in the month of October. The projected additional employment created as a result of these loans is 546 jobs.

Direct management assistance counseling was provided to 733 Minnesota firms through the Small Business administration's in house counselors or through support groups like the service corps of retired executives and the 10 colleges participating in the small business institute program.

Six loans, amounting to $219,000, were made to minority owned firms; making the minority component of the October loan portfolio 11 per cent of the total loans and three per cent of the total loan dollars.

RDC Approves Proposals For HUD Funding

Six HUD pre-applications were reviewed by the Northwest regional development commission (NWRDC) clearinghouse and recommended to HUD for funding. Proposals reviewed in this area include Plummer street improvements and St. Hilaire water systems improvements.

Applications from Region I will compete with all other non-metropolitan areas of the state and will be judged on a point system designed by HUD, in writing, as to this final ranking as well as those communities invited to submit a full application.

MSU External Studies Class To Be Offered

Two sections of a required two-credit class in educational planning for all people entering Moorhead state university's external studies program will be offered on campus this winter.

External studies program is designed to help adults earn a college degree through part-time study. It also offers some credits for competencies acquired through work, personal experience or community service.

One section of the course will meet Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning December 4 in MacLean hall 103. Second section meets Saturdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. beginning Dec. 1, also in MacLean hall 103.

Besides the classes, students will have two individual counseling sessions with the course instructor. Planning class is designed to help external studies students develop a program leading to a bachelor's degree.

Registrations and payments will be accepted the first class session. Cost is $27.80.

For more information, call or write Audrey Jones, director of the Moorhead state external studies program, (218) 236-2181.

Smith Begins Recruiting Efforts

According to Northland community college football coach Irv Smith, the Northmen have a different game plan this year heading into recruiting efforts. Smith, who brought in some 60 freshmen this fall, figures to go after quality instead of quantity this time around.

"We're past the numbers game," reported Smith. "Now we have to concentrate on finding the real good kids."

Smith said 20 of this year's freshmen have indicated they will definitely be back in 1980, with 10 others undecided at this point and 10 more who say they will not be here to play as sophomores.

"We're super pleased with what's coming back," mentioned Smith who had only six sophomores on this year's team. "Those 20 who have indicated they will definitely be back are quality ball players."

He figures to add about 40 freshman candidates to the 1980 roster, with greater emphasis put on landing northwestern Minnesota area players. "We're probably looking to recruit 35 to 40 freshmen," explained Smith. "And if we get 30 kids from the area we'd be really happy."

Northland's four-year-old football program enjoyed its best season in 1979, although the record still lagged at 3-6. Northland's first season of intercollegiate football in 1976 produced a 2-6 record, followed by an 0-8 campaign in 1977 and 2-6 in Smith's first year here in 1978.

Winter Sports Start Here Nov. 30

Lincoln high school girls swimming team is the only Thief River Falls athletic team in action at this point of the year. The John Hustad-coached Prowlers close out their 1979 regular season Tuesday at Bemidji. They'll compete in the Section 3 swimming and diving championship at Bemidji State University Nov. 20-21.

Thief River Falls' 1979-80 winter sports season will not get underway until Fri., Nov. 30, when the Lincoln boys basketball team hosts Roseau.

Other openers will find the Northland community college men's basketball team at the Red River tournament in Winnipeg Dec. 7-8; Lincoln hockey team hosting Crookston Mount St. Benedict Sat., Dec. 8; Northland women's basketball team at Bottineau, N.D. Sat., Dec. 8; Lincoln girls basketball team entertaining Fisher Tues., Dec. 11; Northland hockey team hosting Hibbing in a Dec. 14-15 weekend series; and the Lincoln boys swimming team opening with their Prowler relays Sat., Dec. 15.

Miscellaneous

+Nelson Rotto was named the most valuable player on the 1979 Bemidji high school football team by his teammates who selected Tim Kelm offensive lineman of the year, Jeff Beaulieu defensive lineman of the year and Craig Erhart defensive back of the year. Jim Cleveland, Pat Erhart and John Herath were named Bemidji tri-captains for 1980.

+Dick Lawrence has retired as Eveleth high school football coach, a position he'd held for 24 years. Thief River Falls tangled with Lawrence-coached Eveleth teams in 1976 when the Prowlers surprised the highly regarded Golden Bears here 14-0 and in 1977 when Bill Kangas of the Bears did a real number on the Prowlers for a 20-8 victory at Eveleth.

+Tom Campbell, Bemidji high school three-sport athlete, will miss the entire 1979-80 basketball season after undergoing knee surgery to repair an injury suffered in an Oct. 19 football game against Crookston. A 6-3, 180-pound senior, Campbell was a starter at center for the Lumberjacks basketball team last winter and he set a new Bemidji school record in track last spring with a Region 8AA-winning 6-8 high jump.

BUTTERFLY LEG of the Thief River Falls 200-yard medley relay race was handled by Joan Giauque Thursday as the Prowlers closed out their 1979 home meet schedule with a dual meet against Brainerd. Giauque, Sarah Green, Frankl Kuyath and Betsie Hallstrom combined for a winning 2:02.9 in the meet-opening race. Brainerd won the high school swimming meet 89-83.

Prowlers Find Spirit In 89-83 Loss To Brainerd

ONLY SENIOR on the 1979 Lincoln high school swimming team, Johanna Desrocher closed out her Franklin middle school pool career with a win in the 200-yard individual medley Thursday as the Prowlers ended their home season schedule with an 89-83 dual meet loss to Brainerd. Desrocher swam a 2:32.7 to win the I.M.

John Hustad turned philosopher Thursday when the Lincoln high school girls swim team coach was well-pleased with the effort of the Prowlers in spite of an 89-83 dual meet loss to Brainerd in their final home meet of the 1979 season.

"We didn't lose the meet," philosophized Hustad. "We found something much more important than points. We found team spirit today. For the first time all year we worked as a team today. It took a long time; part of the rebuilding process, I guess."

Hustad, in matching times, anticipated an 87-85 Brainerd victory if everything went according to the book, wasn't very far off on his prediction. The loss dropped Thief River Falls to 5-6 in dual meet competition heading into a season-ending 4 p.m. meet at Bemidji Tuesday.

Brainerd won seven of the 11 events Thursday. Thief River Falls had only two individual winners as Brenda Lund took top diving honors with a spectator-pleasing 226.05-point performance and Johanna Desrocher, the only senior on the Thief River Falls team, closed out her Franklin middle school pool career with a victory in the 200-yard medley relay by swimming a 2:32.7.

Thief River Falls also won both relay events. In the meet-opening 200-yard medley relay, Sarah Green, Frankl Kuyath, Joan Giauque and Betsie Hallstrom swam a 2:02.9. In the meet-ending 400-yard freestyle relay, Hallstrom, Kathy Dillon, Giauque and Lund swam a 4:02.5.

"Times aside, it was a good meet for us," said Hustad. "The girls cared for each other. They shared their wins and they shared their losses. That's a big lesson they learned; much bigger than learning how to swim the 100-yard freestyle under one-minute."

Post-season competition is scheduled next week when Thief River Falls will try to defend its Section 3 swimming and diving championship at Bemidji State University Nov. 20-21.

MSHSL Acts On Amendments

Representative assembly of the Minnesota State High School League took action on eight amendments and ratified its mail ballot decision of last summer on another amendment at its November 2 meeting held in Anoka. Action on the amendments includes the following:

Emergency amendment — proposed to create two seasons for boys and girls tennis and swimming teams. The seasons for tennis would have been scheduled in the fall and spring and the seasons for swimming would be in the fall and winter. Schools would have determined seasons by local choice. The amendment failed by an 88-0 vote, with two absent votes.

Amendment No. 1 would increase the number of basketball games exclusive of tournament play, from 18 to 20 games. The amendment failed by a 62-25 vote, with three absent votes.

Amendment No. 2 would restrict all member schools of the MSHSL to one contest per week in each activity during the school year. The amendment failed by an 81-6 vote, with three absent votes.

Amendment No. 3 would provide for boys baseball and girls softball practice to begin approximately one month later, the Monday preceding April 1 of each year and continue for 12 weeks, including league sponsored tournaments. The amendment failed by a 57-20 vote, with four absent votes.

Amendment No. 4 would move the Class A girls gymnastics season from the winter season to the fall season. The amendment failed by an 84-2 vote, with four absent votes.

Amendment No. 5 would move the golf seasons for boys and girls from the spring season to the fall season. The amendment failed by a 69-17 vote, with four votes absent.

Amendment No. 6 called for no senior under twenty (20) years of age who has matriculated in only her-his twelfth year of total schooling (grades 1-12) shall be declared ineligible under any technical application of the four year eligibility rule (grades 9-12). The amendment failed by a unanimous voice vote.

Amendment No. 7 called for the cooperative sponsorship of a MSHSL activity by two or more member schools. This amendment extends opportunities to students in schools where a specific activity is not sponsored and further provides continuing opportunities for youngsters in schools where programs are being affected by declining enrollments, financial limitations and availability of coaches.

The amendment passed by a 73-13 vote, with four absent votes. This amendment will become effective for the 1980-81 school year. The deadline for applications for 1980-81 only shall be December 15, 1979. Board of directors decisions on applications for 1980-81 only shall be February 15, 1980. Schools planning on submitting applications should contact the league's executive director.

Emergency amendment for "team membership." The assembly ratified its mail ballot decision of last summer to delete the league's team membership rule. It was a unanimous voice vote. The assembly believes that the goals of equal opportunity can be reached through the joint efforts of the State Department of Education and the State Department of Human Rights. These agencies are now working together.

North Half 8AA Tournament . . .

Lincoln Volleyball Team Is Beaten In Semifinals

An ankle injury suffered in practice by sophomore starter LeAnn Paetznick cost the Prowlers dearly Thursday as the Lincoln high school volleyball team absorbed a 2-1 loss at the hands of East Grand Forks in the semifinals of the 1979 North Half Region 8AA tournament played at Moorhead.

Moorhead, as expected, waltzed to the tournament title with 2-0 wins over Crookston and East Grand Forks in the Thursday semifinals and finals.

But it was Thief River Falls, not East Grand Forks, that was expected to be Moorhead's championship match opposition. And with serving success at a 97 per cent clip in the first game of the Thief River Falls-East Grand Forks semifinal match, the Prowlers were 18-10 winners and apparently headed for an easy victory.

However, East Grand Forks turned things around for an 18-10 second game win and then outlasted Thief River Falls 19-17 match-deciding overtime game.

"It was a real good match," explained Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss who was confident the Prowlers would reach the finals later that same night. "It was tough to take," she said of the loss. "I guess we didn't give East Grand Forks enough credit. I think my kids were looking ahead to Moorhead. I still think we have a better offensive-orientated team than East Grand Forks, but their defense pulled it out for them."

With Paetznick out of the line-up, half of Thief River Falls' front line spiking power was missing. Junior Stacy Ehrenstrom was there with her hard hits, but East Grand Forks defended them well.

Junior Barb Pfeifer and sophomore Sheryl Stimac were rotated in Paetznick's place. "They did a really fine job," mentioned Stauss, "but we still missed some of LeAnn's qualities."

And Paetznick's absence cost the Prowlers when Stauss was charged with illegal substitution late in the third game. Thief River Falls led 17-16 when the Thief River Falls coach sent Pfeifer into the game for the fourth time — illegal in volleyball where it's three times and you're out. The infraction cost Thief River Falls service.

East Grand Forks failed to score when given the chance, but Thief River Falls committed another faux pas when they failed to rotate before the Prowlers' next serve, losing service for the second straight time on a rules infraction. This time it cost them the game, match and season.

Thief River Falls finished the year with a 10-8 overall won-lost mark.

Dave Kays Is WCCO Radio All-State Pick

Lincoln high school football team closed out its 1979 season Oct. 26, but Thief River Falls junior Dave Kays was named to the WCCO radio all-state team of the week Thursday.

Kays, a 6-2, 215-pound center, was among 49 high school football players named to the team of the week honor squad on the WCCO Prep Parade program, aired twice weekly on Tuesday and Thursday nights, devoted exclusively to coverage of high school sports activities throughout Minnesota.

Other northwestern Minnesota players named to the most recent WCCO squad were tackles Tim Kelm of Bemidji and Bob Caluson of Crookston, along with end Kevin Fischer of Gonvick.

Kays is the second member of the Prowlers to earn WCCO recognition this year. Earlier Thief River Falls captain Bill Jury was selected to the weekly all-state squad.

Each member of the state-state team received a parchment certificate suitable for framing.

NCC Feels 3-5 Could Have Been 5-3

A still modest 3-6 finish represented the best season ever for the four-year-old Northland community college football program in 1979. But with a little luck the Northmen, who were 3-5 in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division, figure they could have turned that record around.

"A fumble here and a fumble there meant we were 3-5 in the conference instead of 5-3," noted Northland head coach Irv Smith. "And conceivably we could have been 6-2."

"With the right bounce of the football," according to Smith, the Northmen could have turned losses to Itasca (14-13) and Brainerd (32-28) into wins. "We'll pass off Mesabi and Vermilion (20-6 and 10-0 losses, respectively), although we were certainly capable of playing with them," added Smith who also watched his team fumble away a 34-3 decision to Northern Division champion Golden Valley Lutheran. Northland lost to Bismarck 29-12 in nonconference play.

Northland picked up back-to-back wins over Hibbing 7-0 and Fergus Falls 6-3 before ending the year with a satisfying 27-7 triumph over northwestern Minnesota college rival Crookston.

Noticeable improvement was made, said Smith, but he was still disappointed with the final record. "We're far from satisfied. We improved a lot, but the entire conference was vastly improved."

A big part of the Northland improvement came in the offensive line play and on defense. "Our offensive line play improved 250 per cent and our defense was vastly improved," confirmed Smith who watched the Northmen set team season records for most wins, most points, most yardage and fewest points on defense.

In addition to the team marks, freshman runningback Mike Cowart set a pair of standards by rushing 186 times for 795 yards.

Smith blamed part of the Northland losses on the mental approach of the Northmen. "I think we had some problems with our mental preparedness," he admitted. "We were ready physically, but we had some mental mistakes that cost us some games — kinds of mistakes that lose football games."

And part of that problem was traced to the large number of freshmen playing for the Northmen who had only six sophomores who played — Joe Kraska (Lancaster), Brian Thomas (Inkster, Mich.), Morice Hendricks (Inkster), Jon Sipe (Baudette), Joe Ranum (TRF) and Chris Kneen (White Bear Lake).

"With just six sophomores, we had very little leadership and stability," mentioned Smith. "I think we played better as the year went along and our young kids got some experience. I thought we played better every game."

Smith's coaching staff this fall included Tim Olson, John Helley, Jay Kverno, Scott Kays and Kevin Sethre.

Top Snow Pro Snowmobile Money Offered

With a purse of $20,000 the snowmobile racing at the Tri-State speedway in Superior, Wis. can well be called the World Series of snowmobile racing. The $20,000 up for grabs by the world snowmobile racing federation's top professional drivers is some $8,000 more than the next largest purse offered on the Sno-Pro circuit.

The WSRF sanctioned Sno-Pro snowmobile race will take place on February 9-10 with two full days of racing to be presented, it was announced recently by Ray C. Paulson, executive manager of the Superior Chamber of Commerce. The Superior Tri-State speedway is located in the heart of the city and is an excellent ⅝ mile banked oval track.

Race site in Superior is excellent both for the participants and spectators. The large garage building will have a hard-surfaced area for technical inspections, there will be a large exhibit building with no charge to the exhibitors or viewers complete with closed circuit television, another heated building will house the media lounge equipped with phones, telecopier and closed circuit television, a driver and crew lounge with free refreshments and television, plus an administration building.

Tri-State speedway features a covered grandstand in which there are no bad seats and new bleachers to accommodate another 2,500 spectators are now being constructed. Plenty of free automobile parking will be available on the grounds and a special parking area will be provided for mobile homes with a charge of $3 for the two day event. Adult tickets will be $5 per day or $9 for a two day ticket, children 12 to 16 $3 per day and kids under 12 free when accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Lowly Goose May Be Man's Best Friend

Although most people regard the dog as man's best friend, the lowly goose should also be considered as a contender for that title, according to a new book for bird lovers published by the National Wildlife Federation. This noisy but versatile bird once saved an ancient civilization, helped settle America and is a shrewd, courageous, valuable addition to any barnyard, the book says.

The goose's story is told in "The Gift of Birds," a 176-page anthology of bird legends, poetry, facts, color photographs and paintings.

As one of our oldest domesticated birds, the goose has a place in ancient Roman history. Legend has it that in the 2nd century, A.D., the Gauls swept through Italy, driving back the Roman armies until only a single garrison was left to guard Capitoline Hill in Rome.

Late one night, the Gauls, planning a surprise attack, noiselessly climbed the steep cliff heading to the Capitoline. At the summit, they fed the starving watchdogs to keep them quiet, then crept toward the sleeping Roman garrison, unaware that a gaggle of wide-awake graylag geese were also guarding the Hill. Suddenly, the night filled with shrill calls and honkings, alerting the Romans who sprang to action and routed the Gauls from Rome.

American civilization owes much to this domestic bird, too, according to "The Gift of Birds". Many a Conestoga wagon moving west had on board at least two of the birds, which provided feathers for beds and comforters, and fat for butter, lard and a soothing ointment for the aching bones of pioneers. One goose egg could feed two people and the delicious, dark meat was nutritious. The loud honkers also warned of the approach of Indians, wolves and coyotes.

Geese are still used as watchdogs. In Dumbarton, Scotland, 70 or so white geese guard about 30 million gallons of whiskey, valued at over $900 million. Any intruder would be greeted with a fanfare of hissing and honking. This web-footed security force has been found to be more effective than dogs, people, or mechanical devices. They work for free, don't drink the scotch and even lay eggs.

Geese are good farm workers, too, reports "The Gift of Birds." About a million of them weed fields of cotton, potatoes, corn, asparagus, strawberries and other crops grown across the U.S. A pair of geese can clear an entire acre, eating only grass and weeds. A dozen or so do the work of one skilled person with a hoe, and are much more economical.

Although there are 40 different kinds of geese, the most common are the wild Canada goose and six domestic breeds which developed from the wild graylag. Many naturalists believe that the goose has lost fewer of its original characteristics in more than 4,000 years of domestication than any other bird or mammal.

The goose is a hardy animal, with powerful senses of hearing and sight, and often lives to the age of 40 or so. And while chickens stop laying eggs at about age three, the goose is still going strong at age ten or more. It is also a plucky bird, attacking with its sharp bill any creature that threatens its goslings.

Silly as a goose? Whoever coined that phrase obviously never spent any time with geese, according to "The Gift of Birds," which notes that the animal is a "loyal helper and friend." For example, the book cites the case of one gander which led his aged, blind mistress to church every Sunday, "taking the hem of her dress to direct her." He clipped the grass in the nearby cemetery during services, then guided her home again.

"The Gift of Birds" also recounts the natural history of a variety of other birds, examining courtship rituals, migration, and other bird habits. The anthology contains more than 220 full-color photographs and illustrations, with poetry by Emily Dickinson, Thomas Hardy and others, and remembrances from such bird admirers as Henry David Thoreau, Mark Twain, Theodore Roosevelt and Rachel Carson.

Copies of "The Gift of Birds", suggested by NWF as a Christmas gift for nature lovers, are available for $10.95 each, plus 95 cents in handling charges, from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. After January 1, 1980, the price will be $12.95.

Ninety-five per cent of all species in the animal kingdom are invertebrates — spineless creatures such as insects, worms, and crustaceans — according to the National Wildlife Federation. Among vertebrates, there are about 12,000 species of fish, 8,500 species of birds, 4,000 species of mammals and 3,000 of amphibians.

FISHIN' TIPS

from . . . Tom Mann

You read a lot about the need to take youngsters fishing to teach them a sport that will last throughout a lifetime. Great, do it. But, I recommend that you also take an oldster fishing.

In neighborhoods, retiree areas, old folks homes, hospitals, maybe near where you live, there are senior citizens who would love to know how to fish. Seek them out and teach them simple ways to catch fish. It can be one of the most rewarding experiences imaginable.

Some of these fine folks have spent a lifetime working and never had time to fish. Now that they do have the time, there just isn't a more enjoyable or rewarding activity than catching and eating fish.

If they can't afford fishing tackle, get together a few fishing buddies and each put a few bucks in a kitty. Talk to the local tackle dealer and few won't give you a break on prices for such a worthy cause. Cane poles are a good starter outfit for the less active. Observe their joy as they catch fish, teach them how to clean and cook fish, and you'll know the warmth of sharing.

If you've been reading these columns and trying Brer Tom's fishing tips, by now you should be catching enough fish to eat. Now let me tell you how to get the most enjoyment out of the eating.

First, you've got to take proper care of the fish from the moment you catch them. Handle them improperly and the flavor can be adversely affected, like dragging them around on a stringer in warm surface waters.

Here's the best procedure I know: Kill the fish quickly by hitting it on the head. Place them in a plastic bag and keep on ice. Never place fish in direct contact with ice or allow them to soak in water, this softens the flesh.

If you have no ice, then place in a burlap bag and keep it wet so that evaporation will keep the fish cool. If you have no burlap bag, then cover the fish with grass, or moss, and keep that damp in the shade.

My favorite way to cook fish is the simplest. Just salt lightly, dip in buttermilk then flour, deep fry until brown, then holler over the back fence and I'll come "field test" them.

BRER TOM: "How many years have you been catching bass on a plastic worm?" WANTSTA KNOW

HELLO WANTSTA: Well, I've been fishing jelly worms about 20 years, waited about four of these years for them to reach bottom, spent nearly 16 years retrieving them, and maybe I've been catching bass on them three or four days.

DEAR TOM: "Does freezing fish without cleaning them detract from the flavor?" PROCRASTINATOR

HELLO PRO: Not if the flavor was okay when you froze them. But, I like to clean them, freeze them in water, then when thawed they're skillet ready.

HEY MISTER MANN: "I heard Homer Circle, angling editor of Sports Afield magazine, say you were the first pro to use a big spinning reel in tournaments and now most of the pros use one. True?" DUKE OF DECATER

HELLO DUKE: Uncle Homer tells it like it is. I needed a faster retrieve to rip a little george spinner and a big spinning reel is the answer. Most pros carry one today.

OH TOM: "How do catfish sting you?" LITTLE ONEY

HELLO ONEY: Catfish can't sting like a bee or hornet. Their pectoral and dorsal fins are sharp and can wound you if you handle them improperly. Poison on these fins can make the wound very painful, so be careful, hear?

BRER TOM'S CLOSING TIP: If you find your fish tasting strong, muddy, or too fishy, try these two things. Remove the skin from the fillets, and soak in saltwater for an hour. If this doesn't do it, then find a different fishin' hole.

Christ so loved fishermen that He chose four among his Twelve Apostles. That's a good enough recommendation for me. I'm goin' fishin' right now!

A study by Pennsylvania State University in 1979 indicated that nuclear power plants do not adversely affect residential property values or community growth; in fact the facilities seem to have stimulated growth in the immediate vicinity, due partly to lower taxes.

STATE-OWNED LANDS in Marshall and Roseau counties were the subject of discussion at a meeting of commissioners from the two counties and representatives of the Minnesota department of natural resources in Thief River Falls Thursday. Roger Holmes, director of the section of game for the department, points out some of the area in question during the discussion. The meeting had been called by Sen. Marvin Hanson of Hallock in an attempt to resolve controversy over disposition of the lands which have been in question for a number of years.

Area Service On Epilepsy Is Developed

There are an estimated 80,000 persons in Minnesota and 4,000,000 persons in the United States with some form of epilepsy, according to figures compiled by the Epilepsy Foundation of America.

"Epilepsy affects More Americans then cancer, tuberculosis, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis and muscular dystrophy combined," states Ann Evenson, Red Lake Falls, community outreach coordinator for the Minnesota Epilepsy league.

Epilepsy doesn't just happen to other people. It can happen to anyone anytime irrespective of race, age, sex or nationality, although the average age when epilepsy occurs is in prenatal and elementary school aged children.

There is a need to help, retrain, re-educate and re-build the confidence of some individuals who have seizures, Mrs. Evenson said.

Too often the person with epilepsy is rejected by family, friends and business associates. Parents, teachers, employers and community generally need more information about epilepsy, its causes and what can be done to help.

Minnesota Epilepsy league now employs Mrs. Evenson as an epilepsy outreach coordinator to serve northwest Minnesota. Her duties as outreach worker will consist of providing information and helping to develop services and awareness training programs. This service will assist the communities of northwest Minnesota and individual members to understand epilepsy and its impact.

"Everyone is special. You may know someone who is special and has epilepsy. Lend a hand, be a friend. Learn more about epilepsy and the services available by calling (218) 964-5544 or 681-2700, ext. 343," Mrs. Evenson said.

Savings Bonds Teach Thrift To Youngsters

For nearly 40 years, U.S. savings bonds have given millions of parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles a way to teach children the value of thrift.

Buying a bond as a gift is easy. Just go into any financial institution that serves as an issuing agent for bonds and buy a $50 bond for $25. Register the bond in the child's name, using either the child's social security number (if you know it) or your own. From then on the bond will grow ever more valuable, be safe against loss and offer some tax advantages too. Interest grows at the highest rate ever — an average of 6.5 per cent per annum when held five years or more.

As the bond grows, it also helps America by reducing inflationary pressures and helping stabilize the economy. It is a simple gift, but a valuable one. Bonds help us stay free, so all of us — adults and children alike — can grow and prosper as we ought to.

T.H. 59 To Be Reopened To Traffic Soon

According to district engineer John Youngquist of the Minnesota department of transportation, the highway 59 detour between Detroit Lakes and Mahnomen will be removed and the route will be reopened to traffic sometime during November.

Most of the grading and bituminous work associated with the first stage construction has been completed. However, additional work on the shoulders must be done before the road can be reopened to through traffic.

Youngquist stated that while the detour is in effect, the contractor is responsible for keeping the road passable for local traffic. When the detour is removed sometime this month, Mn-DOT maintenance forces will provide normal winter maintenance services on the route.

Final bituminous wearing course will be placed on the route during the 1980 construction year. No detours will be in effect during 1980, according to Youngquist.

Agassiz HSA Committee To Review Grants

Project review committee of the Agassiz health systems agency (HSA) will meet at the American Inn in East Grand Forks at 9 a.m. on Thursday, November 15. Under consideration are the following grants for Minnesota community health service (CHS) funding.

—North country CHS (Beltrami, Lake of the Woods, Hubbard and Clearwater, $208,536 for 1980; $232,000 for 1981).

—Polk county CHS ($84,989 for 1980; $91,002 for 1981).

—Multi-county CHS (Becker, Mahnomen and Norman, $147,245 for 1980; $152,224 for 1981.)

—Quin county CHS (Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington and Red Lake, $193,106 for 1980; $299,634 for 1981.)

—Multi-county special project ($20,524 for Becker, Mahnomen and Norman.)

At 1 p.m. a special ad hoc committee will meet to discuss the Agassiz area response to national guidelines in the areas of open heart surgery, cardiac catheterization, general hospital bed supply, general hospital occupancy rates and pediatric beds and occupancy rates.

All Agassiz meetings are open to the public. Anyone wishing more specific information on a particular grant application or regarding the national guidelines should contact Mary Ellen Preston, Agassiz HSA, 124 DeMers Avenue, East Grand Forks, Minnesota 56721 or phone 218-773-2471.

Programs For Winter Shows Being Planned

Women's division of the Red River valley winter shows has begun planning special family programs for the annual February event. Artists, craftsmen and needlework hobbyists are urged to begin preparing their work now for display in the various exhibits planned by the committee. Rules regarding needlework stipulate that items must have been created by employing a needle with an eye.

Week-long events will include senior citizens day, arts and crafts, special programs of interest to women and their families, in addition to several demonstrations, workshops and seminars.

Rezoning Tabled By City Council

Planning commission recommendations during Tuesday night's city council meeting combined with another agenda item—a letter from Dr. Paul Wendt, health officer, regarding Lot 4, Berg's first addition to form opposing views.

Debate over Sully's welding shop in Thief River Falls continued from the previous council meeting in which Jack Quinlivan, city planner, informed council members that a possible solution to the problem would be to rezone the area.

Jon Metusalem, realtor, and speaker for L.M. Sullivan of Sully's welding, informed council members of a possible buyer for the building.

"We are hoping to complete the transaction in the next two or three days," he said.

"I am opposed to selling the building to someone if that buyer uses the building for something that doesn't blend in with the environment," alderman Milan Borsheim said. "But it is beneficial if it is sold for a conforming use."

Recommendation brought before council members by the planning commission was for council members to deny a rezoning request from L.M. Sullivan on Lots 1-2, Block 1, Narverud's first addition from R-1 to C-2 (highway commercial;. Ordinance for this recommendation presently states that—if a business in a residential area is vacated, after six months the building reverts back to a residential area. Alderman Borsheim introduced a resolution to table the recommendation until the November 27 council meeting. Alderman Don Goodrich seconded the motion which carried.

Alderman Goodrich reminded council members of the similarity in agenda items and the inconsistent council decisions in resolving the resolutions when the item arrived concerning Berg's first addition.

"This area is C-2 and we can't do anything about it and Sully's wants C-2 and can't get it," he said.

This item, also carried over the previous city council meeting, concerned the problem of rats in the area near Edgewood drive, involving the Ehrenstrom property. The area, referred to the law enforcement center and to the health officer,

Coin, Antique Stamp, Hobby Show Set Here

Thirteenth annual free international coin, antique, stamp and hobby show will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Best Western inn of Thief River Falls. The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Twenty-five dealers will be on hand to buy and sell items in the hobby areas listed, according to Patrick L. Klemisch, show chairman.

Sponsoring Thief River Falls coin club devotes proceeds from show activities to area charities and over the years has contributed about $3,500 for scholarships at Northland community college and the area vocational technical institute and to other youth activities.

To Organize Handicapped Support Group

Organizational meeting of the parent support group for children with physical or mental handicaps will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at United Methodist church in Thief River Falls.

Encouraged to attend are parents of handicapped youngsters or others interested in being advocates for the handicapped. Purpose of the group will be to increase public awareness of needs and rights of the handicapped and to deal with problem areas which may arise.

People with questions about the meeting or organization may call Mrs. Linda Taylor at 681-7489.

Open House At Library Friday

"Be with a book for a day" is the theme of the open house to be celebrated at the Northwest regional library Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Open house is part of a national grass-roots response to encourage public support for libraries during the week of the White House conference on libraries and information services.

The conference will be in Washington, D.C., November 15-19. During this time, 1,000 delegates from all 50 states will attend work sessions to impress upon government the importance of access to books and information for the American public.

Governor Al Quie will honor "Be with a Book for a Day" in a celebration adding new books to the governor's library. He also indicates he would personally be with a book during the White House conference.

All residents served by the Northwest regional libaray are encouraged to visit their library in Thief River Falls November 16 and check out a book. Refreshments will be served and everyone will receive a "Be With a Book for a Day" emblem featuring the White House on an open book.

Also at the open house, the public is invited to join the library staff in celebrating a landmark acquisition, the 100,000th book. The book, "The Grain Harvestors," will be available for examination and for individuals to sign. Acquisition of a 100,000th book is a milestone in the history and development of library service in northwestern Minnesota. It serves to illustrate the informational, recreational and educational resources available to the citizens of the area at their public library.

LOCAL COOPERATION by Thief River Falls education officials has led to the establishment of a national program in post high school athletics. As a result of a locally initiated project, the National Junior College Athletic association (NJCAA) has approved allowing students from area vocational-technical institutes to become fully eligible members of athletic teams at state-supported community colleges. Demonstrating the cooperative spirit are, left to right, Dr. Alex Easton, Northland community college president; Arnt Aune, director of the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute; Ken Wiebolt, dean of students at Northland who carried the local proposal to state and national meetings; and Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of Thief River Falls public schools. A full story on the program appears in the sports section of today's Times.

Kremer Seeks Endorsement For 1B Seat

Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls announced Monday that he will be a candidate for the DFL endorsement in State House District 1B. In announcing his candidacy almost a year before the election, Kremer said, "I want to spend a lot of time listening to what the people in the area have to say about the issues."

A native of the Holdingford area, Kremer is a graduate of Northern Illinois university in DeKalb, Ill., with a master of science degree in mental health administration. He served in the Peace Corps for two years and for five years was employed in administration of the day-night unit of Northwestern hospital services.

A resident of Thief River Falls for six years, 34-year-old Kremer has been active in local and area DFL politics for most of that time. At present he is self-employed as an antique dealer and refinisher of furniture.

"I want to know what role the people believe state government should play in their lives," he said. "I have the feeling that most people look at state government as an enemy rather than as an ally, in attaining their goals in life. I want to hear what farmers say about the DNR and pollution control agency; I want to hear what small business people say about state regulations and taxes; I want to hear what the elderly and those on fixed incomes say about state programs and how inflation has affected them.

"I want to have plenty of time to listen to what the people of 1B are saying before I attempt to represent them. Many politicians listen to the people before elections and then after they are elected they only listen to other politicians. I want to set up an informal network of communication long before the election so that all of the people of the district will feel like they are a part of politics."

In conclusion Kremer added, "Obviously I cannot change the state alone. We can only bring government back to the people if we all work together to make it happen. That is why I am starting now, to give the people of the area a chance to participate. If any person or group would like to discuss issues or ideas I would hope they would feel free to contact me at 515 N. LaBree, Thief River Falls, or call 681-2946.

Neil Simon Production At NCC Nov. 20-21

Northland theatre of Northland community college will open its fall season with its production of Neil Simon's comedy, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue", Tuesday and Wednesday, November 20 and 21 at 8 p.m. in the college theatre. Play is under the direction of Roger Vaughan of the Northland faculty.

Neil Simon's talent for writing a funny line is in evidence in this show as it was in "Barefoot in the Park", "The Odd Couple", "Plaza Suite", "California Suite", and the "Sunshine Boys", all of which have been seen by Thief River Falls area residents on stage, at the movies and on television.

"The Prisoner of Second Avenue" is no exception as it begins to reveal the life of a pair of urban dwellers in New York City and their losing battle with their environment. The company Mel works for hits the skids and pares the payroll by axing him and several other executives. From then on it's downhill as Mel and Edna fight burglars, the noisy apartment dwellers next door, the utility department, the polluted air, the uncollected garbage and so on. They fight with resilience and the grit to survive.

Cast includes: Ken Ballou from Randall and Sylvia Nelson from Thief River Falls in the leads, and also includes Greg Gilbert, Thief River Falls; Diane Lusignan, Grygla; Leslie Bleth, Bemidji; Carla Reed, Thief River Falls; Dan Jerzak, Thief River Falls; Pete Mendiola, Miami, Florida; and Lori Green, Thief River Falls.

Tickets will be on sale at the Northland theatre box office on the evenings of performance and admission charges will be: Adults $2; students $1 and all Northland students and faculty are admitted free of charge.

Authorize Arbitration In Teacher Contract Dispute

Adoption of a resolution permitting the Thief River Falls school district's negotiating committee to petition for arbitration in collective bargaining with the district's teachers took place at the regular meeting of the school board Monday evening. The resolution was adopted unanimously by the members present with member Maynard Wedul absent at the time of the vote.

The resolution states that formal and informal bargaining sessions have occurred periodically and continuously since May 30 and that a petition for mediation was dated July 16 to summon the parties into formal mediation. While many items have been settled or dropped, the resolution states, some issues remain unresolved.

At the most recent bargaining session on November 5, according to the resolution, the faculty representative made a proposal calling for an increase in compensation paid to teachers from $3,376,916 in 1978-79 to $3,720,968 in 1979-80 and $4,059,199 in 1980-81. The representative computes the total increase for the two years at $682,283.

The school board representative countered with a proposal for the two years of $554,866 which leaves the difference between the two proposals at $127,417.

Monday night's resolution authorizes the negotiating committee to petition the bureau of mediation services for a declaration of impasse regarding unresolved issues so that an arbitrator may be selected. It also urges the teachers' representative to reconsider the offer of settlement made at the November 5 meeting.

Approval was given by the board to a resolution authorizing AVTI students to participate in the intercollegiate athletic programs at Northland community college. The invitation was extended by Northland as a result of acceptance of AVTI participation and eligibility by the National Junior College Athletic association. There will be no cost to the school district but students earning a spot on an NCC athletic roster will pay a $25 fee to the college. Students must present evidence of physical examination and satisfactory insurance coverage.

In other business the board authorized the purchase of Lot 1 in Block 1 of Gunderso-Iverson first addition to the city of Thief River Falls for the 1980-81 AVTI carpentry department's new house project at a cost of $6,700. The lot is in the area north of Sherwood Forest addition.

Following Successful Sales Meeting . . .

Steiger Says Hydra-Mac In "Best Position Ever"

"Results of our 1979 dealer sales meeting have put the company in the best position ever," stated Douglass Steiger, president of Hydra-Mac, Inc., following the dealer meeting held last week in Thief River Falls.

Dealers from throughout the United States, Belgium, Switzerland and South America who attended the sales meeting placed orders for 517 Hydra-Mac skid steer loaders with a value of $4.7 million. Additional orders for the coming year have been received since the meeting.

"Because of the success of our sales meeting we have approximately 70 per cent of our 1980 production sold," Steiger said. "This has turned our company in the right direction, enabling us to concentrate our efforts in producing units under our own brand name and marketing through our own dealers—obviously the most financially rewarding to our company."

The Model 14-C loader unveiled at the dealer meeting has met with enthusiastic response, he said, and a number of the orders placed were for the new model which will replace the Model 12-C in the Hydra-Mac line. The Model 14-C will bring continuity to the overall design plan, Steiger added.

Advance orders for 1980 models should also mean employment stability for Hydra-Mac's more than 200 employees and contribute to the healthy economic condition of the community, the company president added.

Held under a general football theme highlighted by the "Skid Steer Loader Bowl" last Wednesday afternoon, the dealer meeting attracted approximately 300 dealers, factory representatives and their spouses to the city. Outdoor carpeting used to cover the entire ice sheet in the arena for the "Skid Steer Loader Bowl" football game was donated by Hydra-Mac to the city of Thief River Falls.

Republic Airlines, which flew many of the dealers to and from the city for the meeting, set an all-time record for departures Thursday at the Thief River Falls regional airport when 90 passengers boarded out-going flights.

In issuing a public thank-you to the citizens of Thief River Falls, Douglass Steiger said the enthusiasm shown in Hydra-Mac helped the company to record the $4.7 million in sales. Appreciation was expressed to the city for the use of the arena and facilities, townspeople for their support and the Plummer high school band for two "very impressive performances" at the "Skid Steer Loader Bowl".

"The overall event was successful due to the efforts of many people," he said, "and the results chalk up another victory for Hydra-Mac and Thief River Falls."

"I Love You Truly" and "Oompah March" will be performed by the fifth and sixth grade woodwinds. "Nadia's theme" arranged by Jerry Jowak, and "Festive Spirit", arranged by Eric Osterling, will be performed by the junior high band.

Following the junior high band will be the high school band which will perform, "Prelude" by Schumann, and "Holiday in Spain" by A.R. Pinto. "A Song of Greeting" and "Let's Make Music", two selections by Natalie Sleeth, will be performed by the sixth grade chorus.

Medley of selections, including "Morning Has Broken," "If" and "Come Saturday Morning", will be performed by the junior high chorus, and featuring Timmy Wayne, soloist. Senior high choir selections will include "The Wizard", arranged by Dick Averre; "Sow Took the Measles", arranged by Walter Ehret; and "Finnegan's Fuge", arranged by Frederick Silver.

Both junior and senior high choir members will join in singing "Hava Hagila", a selection arranged by Walter Ehret. Final presentation of the evening will be given by all choir members who will sing "Promised Land", a selection by Natalie Sleeth.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Pamela Rafteseth And Neilden Vatthauer Wed

Miss Pamela Jean Rafteseth of Moorhead and Neildon Roy Vatthauer of Plummer exchanged vows recently at an evening ceremony at the Bethel Evangelical Free church in Fargo, N.D.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Rafteseth of Moorhead. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vatthauer of Plummer.

Rev. Merle Christensen officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Mrs. Bob Lemke, a friend of the bride. Vocalists were friends of the couple, Kari Jo Stokka, who sang, "Wedding Song," and Bob Rasmusson, who sang "What a Difference." Together they sang, "God, a Woman and a Man."

For the candlelight ceremony, the chancel was graced with baskets of greenery. On either side were bronze candelabra with white tapers complemented by clusters of peach carnations, babies' breath and greenery.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white Silesta chiffon with a sunburst pleated skirt and attached chapel-length train. The empire bodice with high neckline featured a sheer V-yoke with delicate satin stitch embroidery. A wide lace ruffle outlined the yoke, formed the cuffs on the long, fitted sleeves, and edged the skirt and train. For a total look, she wore a veil of nylon illusion, edged with Venice Lace. She carried a modified cascade of peach silk roses and brown leatherleaf, accented with babies' breath.

Maid of honor was the bride's youngest sister, Debbie Rafteseth of Moorhead. Bridesmaids were Linda Rafteseth, another sister, Linel and Linda Miller, twin friends of the bride, and Diane Anderson, a cousin. Their identical caped gowns of peach qiana, were fashioned with sunburst pleated skirts, raised waistlines and latice trimmed bodices. They carried natural wicker fans topped by clusters of silk peach and apricot colored carnations, brown and rust silk daisies, babies' breath and mountain fern with brown ribbon streamers.

Edlyn Vattheuer attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Curt Christenson, a cousin, and George Bregler, Gene Hanson and Paul Wold, friends of the groom. The ushers were Greg Schmitke and Blair Froseth, friends of the couple. The groom wore a rust tuxedo and vest, trimmed with black, a cream-colored ruffled shirt and a boutonniere featuring a cluster of peach silk roses and babies' breath. His attendants wore rust tuxedos with black trousers with single peach roses pinned on their lapels. The ushers were in black attire.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Rafteseth selected a floor-length gown of copper polyester lusterglo with a blouson bodice with a set-in yoke of ivory embroidered, imported tulle. Her corsage was of ivory silk roses. The mother of the groom wore a peach colored gown featuring a pleated floor-length skirt and angel sleeves. Complementing her gown was a corsage of brown silk roses.

Honor guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tangquist, grandparents of the bride.

A reception in the church parlors following with Halward and Ardelle Anderson, uncle and aunt of the bride, as host and hostess. Renate Vatthauer, a sister of the groom, registered the guests as Diann Rafteseth, a cousin of the bride, and Diane Miller, a friend of the bride, served the punch.

The four-tiered Lady Windermere cake, with alternating tiers of German Chocolate and white, was iced in peach and decorated with white beading and clusters of peach and rust candied daisies. Crystal pillars supported the tiers and florist greenery surrounded the four round cakes that formed the base. The cake was cut and served by Ardis Rafteseth and Verna Christensen, aunts of the bride and groom, respectively. Pouring coffee were the bride's aunts, Linda Tangquist and Eve Tangquist.

Waitresses were Karin and Cathy Rafteseth and Tamie Anderson, cousins of the bride, and Val Christensen, cousin of the groom. At the gift table were Shelly Anderson and Heidi Tangquist, cousins of the bride.

For treavling on the wedding trip to the Bemidji resort area, the bride wore a casual pantsuit.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of the North Dakota State school of Science at Wahpeton. Prior to her marriage, she was employed at the Dakota hospital in Fargo. She is currently employed in this city at the Falls Clinic. The groom, a 1973 graduate of the Pershing high school, Plummer, is employed by Langlie Electric.

The couple is at home in Thief River Falls at 102 East Nora. Photo, Grosz Studio, Moorhead.

Willie McLeans Are Honored On 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Willie (Bill) McLean of this city were honored on their 25th wedding anniversary on Sunday, October 28, at an open house at the Skylite apartment community center.

Seated at the head table with the honored couple were their three sons: Mike, Scott and Paul, and their attendants at the wedding ceremony 25 years ago, Mrs. Nels (Helen) Dyrdal of Thief River Falls, and Walter Eggen of Grygla. Also at the table was Mrs. George (Marlene) Milliron, who served as mistress of ceremonies for the brief program that preceded the reception. Vocal selections were a duet, "O Perfect Love," by Mrs. Roger Dyrdal and Mrs. Don Dyrdal, and a humorous song by Mrs. Roger Dyrdal, who has re-written the words to "Why Me?" Kathy Dyrdal was the pianist. Highlighting the program was a mock wedding. Participating were Todd Lewis, Roger, Jr., Jerri, April and Bryce Dyrdal, Myrna Dyrdal, Jason, Jamie, John and Risty Dyrdal and Todd and Tina Brenna and Boy Scouts, Todd Brenna, John Dyrdal and Todd Lewis, who had Mrs. McLean as their den mother. A toast to the honored couple was proposed by Roger Dyrdal.

For the reception, the serving table was centered with an anniversary cake, iced in white and inscribed and trimmed with lavender confectionery roses. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Art Brown, a friend of the couple. Pouring coffee was Mrs. Wallace Heaten, another friend of the family. Terry Dyrdal was at the punch bowl, Tawnya Hamre presided at the guest book. Sharon Johnson was in charge of the gifts and Lynn Dyrdal served as head waitress.

Approximately 50 relatives and friends attended the event. Out-of-town guests were from New Richmond, Wis., Middle River and Grygla.

Unable to attend, but sending gifts were Oscar and Lonnie Nyflot, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Erickson, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Erickson, Mr. and Mrs. George Borgen, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Skiles, Kay Gjertson, Stella Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kulseth, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Dokkin, Winona Malberg, Elody Olson, Cindy Olsen and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Garcia.

Congratulatory greetings were also received by telephone from Mrs. McLean's sister, Mrs. Raymond Skiles, Denver, Colo., and Kathleen Gjertson of Minneapolis.

Hosting the anniversary celebration were the couple's children, assisted by Mrs. George Milliron and Mrs. Nels Dyrdal.

St. John Annual Advent Workshop Set For Sunday

St. John Lutheran church annual Advent workshop will be held Sunday in the church basement. The event is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

Advent, which begins the fourth Sunday before Christmas, is a period of spiritual preparation for the celebration of Christ's birth. It is a season with dual emphases, stressing the coming of the Christ Child in humility and His second coming in glory.

The workshop will include banner making, Chrismons, advent wreaths, yule logs, nativities, advent calendars, devotional aids and song studies. Many of the traditions connected with the Advent season, rooted in Scandinavian and German cultures, will be incorporated into today's family devotional settings.

The public is welcome to attend the workshop. The cost will be 50 cents per family to help defray cost of materials used. Some crafts can be made at the workshop and taken home by the families.

Coffee and Advent cookies will be served.

Awareness Is Necessary Says Veterans Speaker

Ed Cohn of Virginia, alternate on the National Executive committee of the American Legion, was guest speaker at the annual Veterans Day dinner held Saturday evening at the Legion club rooms.

In his address to members of the post and auxiliary, Cohn spoke of the condition of United States today, SALT II, and the necessity of being aware of what is taking place, not only in this country but also in the world. He stressed the importance of writing congressmen, senators and legislators, asking for protection for Veterans hospitals and Veterans pensions.

Honored guests at the dinner were World War I veterans, Department vice commander Jim Cuppett; Ninth district president JoAnn Reeve and her secretary Annabelle Cuppett; Past ninth district commander, Bob Reeve and Ninth district vice commander Jerry Odegaard.

Donald M. Olson served as master of ceremonies. The welcomer was given by Commander Ike Hoglin and auxiliary president Marilyn Winters. Mrs. Winters also led the group in singing "Happy Birthday" in observance of the auxiliary's 60th anniversary on November 10. A piano selection was presented by Jody Berglund, music instructor at the Goodridge high school. The invocation and benediction was given by Ellsworth Jorgenson.

A turkey dinner with all the trimmings was served.

St. Anne's Court Hosts Supper For RLF Group

St. Anne's court, 855, of the National Catholic Society of Foresters met recently at St. Bernard's Catholic church in observance of All Saints Day. Guests at the Halloween supper were members of St. Joan of Arc court, 423, of Red Lake Falls. The menu included hobo stew and various salads and desserts.

Entertainment during the supper were musical selections by Mrs. Virgil Erickson and her daughter, Sheila. Also adding interest was Mrs. Ed Belland's doll display. Progressive whist followed with Mrs. Belland, Viola Vaudrin and Kathy Ford winners of a three-way tie. Florida Kuld won the low prize. Door prizes went to Theresa Dougherty, Florida Kuld and Chris Bjerker.

Caroline Bedard was in charge of entertainment, Theresa Vanyo, decorations; Ursula Dahl, registrations; and Virginia Carriere and Cis Lund, lunch.

— LOCALS —

Mrs. Carl Holbrook of this city and her niece, Mrs. Mabel Spicer of Grand Rapids returned Thursday from a five-week trip to Titusville, Fla. While there, they visited with Mrs. Holbrook's daughter and granddaughter, the Jack (Harriet) Weaklands and the Phil (Gloria) Makeys, and their families; and with a sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Trumphseller at St. Cloud, Fla. Points of interest visited were Disney World, Capok Tree inn, Cape Canaveral Space center, the Naval training center and an art and orchid show. Mrs. Spicer left for her home Monday morning.

Sunday dinner guests at the Orville Peters home were Alan Sackett of Fort Snelling, Mrs. Myrtle Sackett, Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Sackett, Mrs. Florence Drotts and Mrs. Olga Melvie.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hokkanen of Virginia spent the weekend in Thief River Falls at the home of Mrs. Hokkanen's mother, Mrs. John Uggerud, and visiting with her father at the CNC unit at Northwestern hospital.

Mrs. Ruth Jacobson has returned to her home in this city after spending two weeks in Kansas City, Kans., at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence (Anna) Mount. Also visiting at the Mounts were Mrs. Jacobson's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Alexander, together with their daughter and son of Albuquerque, N. Mex. Before returning home, she also visited with another daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Buzz Doutt at Holden, Miss., and with a niece and family, the Gary Walkenhoures at Kenyon.

Instead of a 20 per cent decline in fiscal 1979 purchases, as predicted earlier, the U.S.S.R. is now expected to spend $2.3 billion on U.S. farm products this year, 20 per cent more than last year.

Rev. Bjornrud Series Speaker At Newfolden

Rev. Merlin Bjornrud, a native of the Newfolden community, will be guest speaker at a special series of meetings to be conducted Monday through Wednesday, November 19-21, at 8 p.m. at the Evangelical Free church of Newfolden. Special music will also be provided.

Monday night's service will be designed for youth and Tuesday's for families with the Wednesday evening service to be the annual Thanksgiving service. Special music will be provided by the "Four Him" quartet including Randy and Calvin Lindstrom, Rolland Roseland and Myles Hogberg.

Rev. Bjornrud, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Bjornrud, has served as pastor of the White Oak Baptist church of rural Akeley for the past five years. He and his wife Jeannine have two children, Lon 4, and Allison, 2.

Senior citizen services are planned for Monday, November 26 at the Newfolden senior citizen center and Tuesday, November 27, at the Evangelical Free church. Rev. J. R. Riveness will be the speaker at both services with Mr. and Mrs. Ingolf Ingebrigtsen providing special music.

Full Gospel Group To Hear Rev. Peterson

Rev. Gordon K. Peterson, pastor of Calvary Temple and Soul's Harbor of Minneapolis will be guest speaker Monday at 7:30 p.m. when the Full Gospel businessmen's fellowship international meets at the Best Western inn. Men and women of all faiths are invited to attend.

Early in 1946 Rev. and Mrs. Peterson conducted an evangelistic crusade for a small group in Minneapolis which was meeting in a former Jewish synagogue. This led to a six-week revival and an established church in downtown Minneapolis.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — Are educational benefits under the GI Bill considered income for Veterans Administration pension purposes?

A — Yes. But amounts actually spent for educational expenses may be deducted.

Q: If I am rated "zero" per cent for a service-connected disability, am I entitled to a Civil Service preference letter?

A: Veterans with an established service-connected disability of "zero" per cent or more are entitled to receive eligibility certification for Civil Service preference.

Q: I have been honorably discharged after four years of active military service. What is my GI Bill educational entitlement?

A: Four years of active military service entitles a veteran to 45 months of educational assistance. It must be used within 10 years after discharge or release from service.

Q — I am a veteran taking nurses' training in a Veterans Administration Vocational Rehabilitation Program. Will the VA pay for the uniforms I require for the training?

A — VA will not pay for uniforms or other apparel worn instead of ordinary clothing. Apparel or other items needed for protective purposes will be authorized for veterans in vocational rehabilitation training.

Rites Held At Warroad For C. W. Stoskopf

Funeral services for Charles W. Stoskopf, 82, of this city were held today (Wednesday) at 2 p.m., at St. Mary's Catholic church in Warroad. Stoskopf, a former resident of the Warroad community, died Monday morning at his home here.

Concelebrants at the Mass were Rev. Arno Gustin and Rev. John Kleinwachter. Interment was in the church cemetery with the Heleson Funeral chapel, Warroad, in charge of arrangements.

Serving as honorary pallbearers were Charles Booren, Joe Umbauer, Carl Larson, Jim O'Donnell, George Ehlers, Leonard Dougherty and Arvin Hanson.

Active pallbearers were Donald Stoskopf, Robert Mattson, Lewie Fredricks, Marvin Simonson, Dr. John Larson and Ken Greenwalt.

Charles William Stoskopf, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stoskopf, was born May 16, 1897 at Raymond. In 1914, he moved with his parents to Warroad, where he lived and farmed south of the village until his retirement in 1976. Since then, he and his wife have made their home here.

He was married at Warroad on Nov. 27, 1929 to Myrtle Lundgren. The couple celebrated their 50th anniversary on Sunday, November 11, with a Mass at their home.

Surviving are his wife, three daughters: Mrs. Richard (Charlotte) Sperling, Grand Forks, N.D.; Mrs. Arlen (Theda) Boreen, Thief River Falls, and Mrs. Ken (Beth) Greenwalt, Virginia; two sons: Douglas and Clayton Stoskopf, both of Warroad, 16 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

In addition to his parents, he was preceded in death by one son, a daughter, four brothers and one sister.

Rites Held At Strathcona For Ted Johnson, 75

Theodore Julius Johnson, 75, of Strathcona and International Falls, died Tuesday morning, November 6, at the International Falls hospital.

Funeral services for Theodore Johnson were held Friday at 2 p.m., at the Gustav Adolph Lutheran church in Strachcona. Rev. Donald Fredine officiated. Mrs. Milo Coltom was the soloist and Mrs. Floyd Peterson, the organist. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery, Strathcona, with the Collins Funeral home, Middle River, in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Kurt Hanson, Wayne Hanson, Jerry Strandberg, Alan Strandberg, Don Johnson and Gregory Johnson.

Theodore Julius Johnson, a son of the late Edward and Bergit Johnson, was born July 18, 1904 in Huntley township, Marshall county, near Strathcona. He attended school and grew to manhood in that community.

On May 15, 1928, he was married in Virginia to Clara LaBlanc. Following their marriage, the couple lived for two years at International Falls before moving to the Strathcona community. In 1964, they purchased a farm in Huntley township. Since the death of his wife in September of 1976, Johnson had made his home at Strathcona and at International Falls.

He was a member of the Gustav Adolph Lutheran church of Strathcona.

Surviving are three sons: Theodore, Jr., Park Rapids; Glenn, Warroad; and Larry, Middle River; five daughters: Mrs. Harvey (Josephine) Hanson and Mrs. Norman (Luella) Strandberg, both of Strathcona; Mrs. Dile (Odella) Strandberg, Silver Bay; Mrs. James (Karen) Johnson, St. Paul; and Mrs. Russell (Connie) Elseth of Newfolden; 26 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Also surviving are two brothers: Helmer Johnson of Roseau, and Henry, Anaconda, Mont., and one sister, Mrs. Carl (Ida) Christenson, Rochester.

In addition to his wife and parents, he was preceded in death by two sisters.

Price Support On Milk Aided By Stangeland

Price supports for milk were approved by the House Thursday and Congressman Arlan Stangeland says this is good for dairy farmers and the American consumer.

"Farmers throughout the country, regardless of whether they are dairy cattle or grain farmers, are having problems breaking even. Many are being forced out of business because of high operating costs and lower market prices. Keeping milk price supports at 80 per cent of parity to assure adequate supplies of milk and provide farmers with adequate income will encourage them to stay in the dairy business and assures stable prices and supplies," Stangeland said.

This bill requires that milk price support levels be set at not less than 80 per cent of parity through Sept. 30, 1981. It also extends current authority for the agriculture department to make semi-annual adjustments through September 30, 1981.

Currently, the minimum price support level for milk required by law is 75 per cent of parity. The 1977 food and agriculture act temporarily raised price support levels to 80 per cent through March 31, 1979. Although statutory authority expired on that date, the secretary of agriculture had twice extended price support levels at 80 per cent. The secretary's most recent adjustment extended price supports for milk at 80 per cent of parity through March 31, 1980.

"Without price support for milk, dairy farmers will not be able to afford milk production and the milk supply will be reduced dramatically. If this should happen, demand will push prices up forcing consumers to pay higher prices at the market," Stangeland said.

The bill now goes to the Senate for consideration.

MSU Offers SIDS Seminar November 29

One-day Moorhead state university nursing seminar on "Understanding Sudden Infant Death Syndrome" is scheduled from 8:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. November 29 in Comstock memorial union ballroom on campus.

Guest instructors will include Kathleen Fernback, coordinator of the Minnesota sudden infant death center, and Gertrude Friedman, a mental health consultant for the center.

The seminar, available for seven continuing education units, is meant to familiarize nurses and other health professionals with the medical and social aspects of SIDS, current research in the field and methods of dealing with family grief after the death of a child.

To register, or for more information about the program, contact the Moorhead state nursing department at 236-2693. This seminar was rescheduled from an earlier date.

Slow down and live.

First Baptist Plans Mission Festival Here

Rev. Dale Bjork

Rev. Dale Bjork will be the speaker and missions-harvest festival at First Baptist church November 17-18. Rev. Bjork is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, earning a B.A. degree with special interest in Far East Studies. His seminary work was done at Bethel theological seminary in St. Paul.

The harvest festival will begin with a men's breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. A ladies' brunch will follow at 10:30 a.m. There will be an informal supper time at 6:30 p.m. On Sunday the Bjorks will share in the 9:45 a.m. Sunday school and 11 a.m. worship service. After the morning service everyone is invited to a harvest festival pot luck meal, followed by the concluding service at 2 p.m. The 2 p.m. service will include the receiving of a special offering with a goal of $5,000, 80 per cent for missions work.

Rev. and Mrs. Bjork left for China shortly after World War II and studied language at the college of Chinese studies in Peking. Later the Bjorks were engaged in a cooperative ministry in establishing a church in the north China city of Tsingtao. Before the fall of Nationalist China Mrs. Bjork found it necessary to leave the area along with most American dependents. Rev. Bjork carried on the mission more than a year after the Communist takeover.

The Bjorks have since spent nine years in Japan in a church planting ministry in a fast growing suburb of Tokyo. Since 1962 Rev. Bjork has been serving in the world mission office of the Baptist general conference.

Allow Farmers To Increase Meal Charges

Labor department has proposed allowing farmers to charge 75 cents a day for the meals they provide certain workers on the job, due to rising food costs.

Meal charge would be deducted by employers who use both temporary alien and domestic workers. Proposed rule change, published in the Federal Register October 26, has a 60-day comment period, ending January 2, 1980.

It would permit charges to the workers for three meals a day to be increased from the current $3.25 charge to $4. It also proposes a maximum allowable amount of $5 per day from the current $4 only if a Labor department regional administrator deems it justified.

Proposed rule is part of the labor certification process for the temporary employment of aliens in the U.S. Such certifications state qualified persons in the U.S. are not available, and that the employment of aliens will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the U.S. similarly employed.

Labor department requires that employers under this program agree to provide each worker with three meals a day. Job offer to the aliens and to U.S. workers must state the charge to the workers for such meals.

Regulations state that employers can petition the Labor department to allow a higher daily meal charge with documentary evidence that such an increase is justified.

Florida fruit and vegetable association and the U.S. Sugar corporation have petitioned the labor department for such an increase. They cite the rapid cost increases in meats, fruits, vegetables and other staples since the current rates were set in 1976.

Faculty Calls Daily Study "Inferference"

Sixteen University of Minnesota faculty members have called on the rest of the faculty to speak out on the Minnesota Daily controversy, calling a scheduled legislative hearing "interference in academic freedom."

The 16 faculty members placed an advertisement in the November 8 issue of the Daily asking other faculty members to "let critics and the legislature know that interference in academic freedom cannot be tolerated and that the inquiry into the Daily's finances is viewed as in infringement of our rights."

Higher education division of the House Education committee, chaired by Rep. Kenneth Zubay (IR-Rochester), has scheduled a November 14 hearing on the financial support of the Daily.

Daily has been the center of a controversy since June, when it published an end-of-the-year humor issue that angered members of several groups, who called the issue obscene, anti-religious and racist.

Daily receives about 20 per cent of its support through a fee collected from students, and it is this fee that critics are demanding be cut off. Most of the Daily's operating income comes from advertising.

The 16 signers of the letter are mostly senior faculty members, from such disciplines as physics, economics, philosophy, botany, agriculture, law, English and political science. Four of the signers hold Regents' professorships.

"It is well to recognize that a threat to the freedom of expression is a threat to our right to explore and teach without restraint," the letter states. "No one has ever suggested that free speech always leads to positive results, or that free press cannot be abused. But the alternative of a censored news source is disturbing to contemplate.

"More disturbing is the precedent. . .of permitting a foot in the door on this issue, and thereby virtually inviting special interests to involve themselves in a variety of university matters on which they are neither qualified nor justified to impose their views," the letter states.

Further, the letter states that "while many of us from time to time deplore the immaturity of the Daily's columns, and the strident postures which certain of its writers seem compelled to strike," prior censorship and the threat of withholding money are not the ways to deal with the problem.

F. Gerald Kline, director of the university's school of journalism and mass communication and one of the signers of the letter to the faculty, sent a letter to 350 newspaper editors in Minnesota asking them to "share our concern in this important matter."

Kline's letter explains the relationship between the Daily and the university and the Daily's financial support structure, and calls it "on balance. . .a superior campus newspaper."

"Many of us in the school of journalism believe that some critics of the Daily are using the humor edition as an excuse to punish the paper by cutting its fee support," Kline's letter states. "Their opposition appears to stem from long-standing disagreements with Daily editorial positions.

"The specter of legislators interfering even indirectly with newspaper operations should send a shudder through every reporter, editor, and publisher in Minnesota," his letter states.

Otter Tail's Annual Report Wins Award

Otter Tail power company's 1978 annual report was judged best in the public utilities (revenue under $250 million) category in this year's "Financial World" magazine awards competition. This is the 35th year the magazine has sponsored this contest in which an independent board of judges looks over several thousand annual reports in categories representing a cross section of U.S. industry.

There were three categories for public utilities. Other first-place winners, in addition to Otter Tail power, were the Hawaiian Electric company of Honolulu and Consumers Power company of Michigan.

The 1978 Otter Tail annual report has also received honorable mention recognition in the 40th annual report competition sponsored by Reddy Communications, Inc. This judging covers only electric utilities.

Otter Tail's annual report is the responsibility of Ralph Johnson, director of corporate communications.

Tourism Caucus Is Formed In U.S. House

A bi-partisan Congressional tourism caucus, dedicated to safeguarding more than four million jobs dependent on the tourism industry, has been formed by Congressman Arlan Stangeland along with more than 100 other Congressmen.

"Everyone living in the state of Minnesota knows how important the tourism industry is to the economy of the state, but it is also important to the nation's economy since tourism is the nation's third largest industry and it generates more than seven per cent of the gross national product," Stangeland said. "The tourism caucus will help to maintain healthy economies by giving greater assurances that jobs and tax dollars will not be lost because of improper action by Congress or the bureaucracy."

Stangeland added the caucus will serve not only to promote tourism, but to see that the development and adoption of government policies take into account the effects felt by the tourism industry. He further indicated that passage of a national tourism policy would be an important step toward achieving this goal.

"The state of Minnesota has an important stake in this caucus since some 139,500 jobs are supported by almost $3 billion spent by tourists in our state," Stangeland said. "The caucus could not only protect our state's tourism market from losses, but hopefully will promote legislation to improve it."

The caucus will be in full operation by the first of the year.

New Director Of Humphrey Institute Set

John R. Borchert, professor of geography and adjunct professor of public affairs at the University of Minnesota, has been named interim director of the university's Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs.

Borchert, 61, succeeds Prof. John Adams, who has been director since the institute was established in 1977. Adams will return to a regular position on the faculty of the geography department and the institute.

Borchert's appointment is effective immediately, and he will continue to serve until a permanent director assumes the position. Search for a permanent director has been under way since last spring.

Fred Lukermann, dean of the College of Liberal Arts (of which the institute is a part), said the search has been extended to enable the committee to consider top quality candidates who were not available for an immediate change from positions they now hold.

1,728 Students From MN. At UND This Fall

Total of 1,728 students from Minnesota are enrolled at the Grand Forks campus of the University of North Dakota at the beginning of the 1979-80 fall semester.

A record 9,708 students enrolled at UND this fall, setting a record for the fifth straight year. Growth was seen in the number of freshmen and transfer students, up 1.9 per cent and 13.5 per cent, respectively, and in the number of undergraduate students generally, up 5.2 per cent. Women make up 47 per cent of the student population. The 1979 enrollment includes 8,132 undergraduates, 1,108 graduate students and 468 graduate professional students in law and medicine.

Ag Land Loss To Be Aired At Workshops

Impact of agricultural land losses on the nation's present and future ability to produce food and fiber will be discussed October 3' through December 12 at public workshops in 17 states.

The workshops will be sponsored by the federal interagency national agricultural lands study (NALS),' co-chaired by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and Gus Speth, chairman of the President's council on environmental quality. Nine other federal agencies are participating.

The workshops will be held in Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento, Calif.; Denver, Colo.; Tallahassee, Fla.; Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Dubuque, Ia.; Ashland, Ma.; Moorhead, Minn.; Kansas City, Mo.; Burlington, N.D.; West Labanon, N.H.; Phillipsburg, N.J.; Carlisle, Pa.; Memphis, Tenn.; Dallas, Tex.; Salt Lake City, Utah; and Vancouver, Wash.

"We are seeking information from individual citizens, business, industry and public interest groups as well as state and local governments on the availability of agricultural lands," Bergland said. "We are especially interested in the effects of agricultural land losses on present and future food supplies."

Speth said the study group wants opinions from workshop participants on four main points:

—Problems stemming from increased competition for, or actual conversion of agricultural lands;

—Values threatened by current trends in the availability of agricultural lands;

—Costs and benefits of measures taken to prevent or retard agricultural land conversion; and

—Ways to avoid or mitigate the most important problems raised.

Inquiries will be made into the most rapidly growing local demands for agricultural lands; the amount and quality of lands converted to non-agricultural use; the proportion of the population affected: the irreversibility and possible escalation of these losses, and the adverse consequences for present and future generations.

Speth hailed the workshops as a timely and necessary meeting-of-minds among agriculturists, urban citizens, environmentalists and civic and political leaders.

"I am encouraged by the growing commitment of farmers, ranchers and environmentalists to the good stewardship of the nation's agricultural lands," he said. "Three million acres of our farm lands are converted to non-agricultural use every year."

"In terms vividly understandable to any farmer or rancher, this is the equivalent of 320 acres, or a half-section of farm land lost every hour. Obviously, if the farm land loss continues at this rate, there is the possibility of long-term damage to the country's agricultural capacity."

Speth pointed out that 48 states and many local governments have adopted agricultural land retention programs of one form or another. "We are asking citizens to share their experiences and opinions about factors that have contributed to the success or failure of these programs," he said. "Citizen response to our workshop questions, and research by members of the National Agricultural Lands Study staff will be included in a final NALS report to the President in January 1981."

The NALS research staff includes soil scientists, economists, sociologists, foresters, range conservationists, fish and wildlife biologists, agronomists and land use planners.

New Formula Helps Minn. In Fuel Funds

Senator Rudy Boschwitz says he's pleased with a new formula for distributing "fuel assistance" funds that will give Minnesota an expected total of $68 million for the coming winter.

The new formula was reached in an agreement between House and Senate conferees as they debated how to allot $1.35 billion in energy assistance money which had been recently authorized by both houses.

"This arrangement definitely reflects more closely Congress', intent in passing fuel assistance legislation originally than did an earlier formula used by the community services administration (CSA) when that agency sent out $250 million in October," Boschwitz said.

The earlier CSA formula allotted money according to increased general energy costs and sent a good share to southern states. At that time Boschwitz and several other northern state Senators had criticized the CSA for spending the money "for help with air conditioning" instead of using it as they believed Congress intended: to help with crippling fuel oil costs.

Out of the total $1.35 billion authorized for assistance, $950 million will now be sent to states according to a formula that stresses cold weather needs. The other $400 million is divided along a plan that figures in the number of supplemental security income (SSI) recipients in each state.

Boschwitz added that he was also pleased with that part of the conferees' agreement that allows the bulk of the money to go out through the CSA rather than through the department of health, education and welfare. "Since the CSA previously had been in charge of the program, they already have the 'machinery' in place to distribute the money quickly. Sending it through HEW would slow down its distribution to the folks who need that help — and need it right away."

Boschwitz had corresponded frequently with the conferees in recent days, seeking a formula that would reflect the special needs of Minnesota and other northern states in the cold months to come.

He had also requested the additional $150 million for heating costs that was included in the final approved amount.

Minn. County Ass'n. Focuses On Decisions

Tough issues and decisions which Minnesota counties will be facing in the 1980's will be the focus of the 70th annual meeting of the Association of Minnesota counties being held in St. Cloud November 13-15. More than 500 county commissioners, elected officials and department heads are expected to attend the event, which is being held in St. Cloud for the first time this year.

Keynote speaker for the AMC annual meeting was Dr. Harry E. Olson, Jr., an author and international lecturer in the fields of human potential and skill application. He spoke on "Getting On With America's Business," at the opening session, 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Sunwood Inn.

Issues facing the Minnesota legislature were the topic of addresses by two key state lawmakers: State Sen. William McCutcheon, chairman of the Senate Tax committee, and State Rep. Haryry Sieben.

Directors of two state agencies will also address the AMC annual meeting. Al Johnson, director of the state energy agency, will give an update on the state's emergency energy situation at the Wednesday evening banquet. The opening afternoon business session on Tuesday also featured state commissioner of transportation Richard Braun, discussing "Transportation Issues To Be Faced By Minnesota in the 1980's."

AMC annual meeting also includes workshops for county representatives on topics such as "Dealing With Labor Relations," "Risk Management," "Legal Liability of Counties," "Social Service Planning and Decision-Making," "Flood Plain Management," "Alternative Approaches To Computer Services," "Transportation Funding" and "Employee Motivation."

Great Amer. Smoke Out Set November 15

Thursday, November 15, is the date the American Cancer society has set for the "Great American Smokeout". Purpose is to try and convince the nation's 50 million smokers to give up smoking for at least one day. Many who do may find that they can give it up forever.

A survey last year revealed that nine out of 10 smokers had heard of the "smokeout" and that one out of every four had either stopped or cut down for the day.

Lung cancer is still the leading cancer reported for American men and the lung cancer rate for women had doubled in the past 10 years.

UMC Sponsors Ag Activities Day Dec. 7th

Tenth annual ag activities day, sponsored by the Agriculture division of the university of Minnesota technical college — Crookston (UMC), is scheduled for Friday, December 7. All members of 4-H clubs, high school agriculture departments, and Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapters from Minnesota and eastern North Dakota are invited to participate.

Judging contests and workshops will be in the following areas: crops, dairy cattle, general livestock, horse judging, agriculture mechanics, dairy products, farm management, wildlife, horticulture, meats, and soils. There is no limit on the number of students participating from any one school in each contest.

Plaques will be given to the first, second, and third place teams; ribbons to the fourth, fifth, and sixth. A rosette will be given to the first place individual and ribbons to second through sixth place.

There is no registration charge, but interested groups may call the UMC Agriculture division at 218-281-6510, extension 202 to pre-register or obtain more information.

MBA Seminars Explain Bank Security Plans

Annual Minnesota bankers association (MBA) bank staff seminars are underway and drawing capacity crowds at all meetings, according to Wayne Berthiaume, MBA administrative vice president.

Berthiaume said over 125 bankers from the Thief River Falls area listened to Jerry Kenna talk about bank security. A former FBI agent, Kenna is familiar with matters related to internal and external bank security.

"The purpose of these seminars is to provide Minnesota bankers with timely information that can be applied to their own operation", said Bethiaume. "The bank staff seminar series is a part of MBA's continuing professional development program".

In addition to 16 seminars, MBA is also conducting four security workshops that are geared to the person in charge of a bank security program. Since the bank protection act requires all banks to have a security program, this workshop is designed to help update an already operational program. Berthiaume said that many bank security programs were written several years ago and need to be re-examined to make sure they fill the current needs of banks.

In both the security workshops and the bank staff seminars, Kenna emphasizes the protection and security of bank customers and employees. He also talks about alarm systems, internal controls and development of security control and training programs.

Seminars are a joint effort of the MBA communications, American institute of banking and the security committees.

Surface Mining Regulations To Be Heard

Region III director Edgar A. Imhoff announced Monday that the department of the Interior's office of surface mining (OSM) has proposed regulations that would provide variances from the requirement to return mined land in steep slope areas to the approximate original contour (AOC).

A public hearing has been scheduled for 9:30 a.m. on November 16 in Washington, Imhoff said.

After considering numerous comments from the coal industry, state and federal agencies and public interest groups, OSM officials have concluded that the original requirements for AOC in the interim program should be modified. As published, current AOC interim regulations differ from those in the permanent program, and, officials said, should be amended to allow the regulations to be phased in.

"Those proposed changes should provide more flexible alternatives to coal operators in promoting environmentally sound reclamation, OSM director Walter N. Heine said. "We see this proposal as a more consistent and logical application of the surface mining act and believe it will promote better understanding of our program."

Specifically, Imhoff pointed out, if adopted, these proposed changes would:

—Allow for a variance from AOC to improve watershed control of lands within the permit area and on adjacent lands; and —Allow the land to be used for an industrial, commercial, residential or public use, including recreation facilities.

Every permittee who obtained such a variance would be required to:

—Improve the watershed inside and next to the permit area under the mining plan, which means either a decrease in total suspended solids or less flooding;

—Completely backfill the highwall with spoil material;

Disturb land above the highwall, with permission of the regulatory agency, only if necessary to blend highwall and backfill, to control run-off or to gain access to the area above the highwall;

—Place only so much spoil off the mine bench as is necessary to achieve the post-mining land use.

Regulatory agencies, then would be required to inspect each variance within three years of the permit's date.

The public hearing will be held in Room 8070, U.S. Department of the Interior, 18th and C Sts., N.W., Washington, D.C. Persons wishing to comment at the hearing should contact Alan Palisoul, Division of Enforcement, Office of Surface Mining, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240, (202) 343-2084.

Comments on the proposed AOC rules can be mailed to the Office of Surface Mining, U.S. Department of the Interior, P.O. Box 7207, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044; or hand-carried to Interior South Building, 1951 Constitution Ave., N.W. Room 135, Washington, D.C. 20240, where all comments will be available for inspection. To be considered, comments must arrive at the above addresses by 5 p.m., November 23.

Legislators Honored By Galilee Camp

Appreciation dinner for several area leagislators was held at Hegland Lutheran church, rural Strandquist, on Saturday evening under sponsorship of the Galilee Lutheran Bible Camp of Lake Bronson.

Honored for their efforts on behalf of the camp in a boundary dispute recently with the Minnesota department of Natural resources were State Senator and Mrs. Marvin Hanson of Hallock, State Representative and Mrs. Myron Nysether of Roseau, and former State Representative and Mrs. Art Braun of Greenbush. Unable to attend were State Representative and Mrs. John Corbid of Park Rapids.

Expressions of appreciation were made by Levine Vagle, Lake Bronson, chairman of the camp board for many years, who also emceed the brief program; Maynard Erickson, Roseau; Charles Jensen, Greenbush; Curtis Thompson, Newfolden; and Joe Jacobson, Wannaska. The legislators all responded and commended the contributions made to young lives through the work of the Bible camp.

Rev. Merle Knutson gave the devotions and Rev. Raynard Huglen had the closing prayer. Both are from Newfolden. Mrs. Jerome Boen, Strandquist, was pianist for the opening hymn sing.

Others attending were Mmes. Vagle, Erickson, Knutson and Thompson and Mr. Boen. The dinner was served by women from Hegland congregation.

Galilee Bible camp is owned by churches of the Association of Free Lutheran congregations in Northwestern Minnesota. Situated east of the community of Lake Bronson, the camp had its first season in 1953. At present a winterization program is in progress providing for year around utilization.

Oilseed And Grain Shipping Up 35 Per Cent

Truck movement of grains and oilseeds to Minnesota terminal elevators increased by 35 per cent during October to the highest volume since last July, reports agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

According to State-Federal grain inspection service reports on daily truckload receipts, Minnesota terminal elevators unloaded 65,092 trucks and moved an estimated 57 million bushels of grain and oilseeds into marketing channels. That compared to September's 48,140 truckloads delivering 42 million bushels.

Commissioner Seetin said that changing market demand and terminal traffic patterns have shifted the bulk of truck movement to Minnesota's metropolitan and Mississippi river elevators since late October.

Truck traffic has dwindled at Duluth port to less than 100 truckloads of farm commodities daily since late October, with volume of grain movement to Duluth terminal elevators now sustained primarily by rail hopper and boxcar deliveries. Adverse weather that had slowed the sunflower seed harvest also helped depress Duluth receipts by truck.

Weekend overtime operations of Minnesota's terminal elevators probably hit a new monthly high during October. Saturday and Sunday receipts during October included 3,139 truckloads carrying an estimated 2.7 million bushels.

Terminal elevators in Duluth received and unloaded 12,834 truckloads of farm bulk commodities during October. That was 20 per cent of the total for all Minnesota terminal elevators and an impressive recovery from the strike that had closed down Duluth and Superior for grain and oilseed deliveries between July 25 and September 26.

Prior Service People Offered Army Bonuses

Army is now making cash bonuses from $2,500 to $3,000 available to prior service individuals who re-enlist in the army for certain skilled jobs. This expansion of the army's bonus program was recently announced by officials at the United States army recruiting command headquarters at Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

Previous bonus enlistment options were available only to non-prior service people. New program is designed to fill jobs in several important occupational areas.

Jobs include two in combat arms, infantry and armor, and nine in the military intelligence area.

Bonuses are available to individuals from any branch of the service, currently not on active duty, who re-enlist for four years and complete the required training. Age limitations vary according to the length of the individual's original enlistment. With the exception of the two combat positions, all jobs are open to both men and women.

Rezoning Of Area Tabled By Council

resulted in a letter from the health officer, Dr. Paul Wendt, stating that action was needed to improve the land. Alderman Goodrich introduced a resolution to send a copy of the health officer's report to Ehrenstrom, and if he doesn't comply with the ordinance, a petition would be submitted to residents in that area to have improvements made.

In other council action, Marvin Lundin, chairing a Northwestern hospital services board committee on land acquisition, asked that Mayor Bob Carlson appoint a committee of council members to meet with the hospital board for discussion of a possible land exchange. Alderman Ambrose Wysoski introduced the resolution to accept the recommendation by Mayor Carlson to appoint aldermen Goodrich and J. J. Womack, along with Jon Larson of the parking assessment district, to the committee. The motion carried. The hospital is interested in city property south of the city on highway 32 as a long-range potential hospital site.

A further item, not on the agenda for the evening meeting, involved a debate concerning city land. Representatives of North township appeared at the meeting to discuss whose responsibility it is to make improvements on the road east of highway 59 (the gravel road between Kordel furniture and Country Kitchen).

It was mentioned by one representative that, "if the city is on both sides of the road, then the city owns the property, and the townships shouldn't have to do work on it." City council members accepted the responsibility of improving the area up to the apartments on East Greenwood street where there are city limits on both sides of the road in question.

Airport committee recommendations were presented by airport manager George Singer. Figures established were that $200 per month would be charged for car rental facilities at the Thief River Falls regional airport, resulting in $2,400 per year. The city would provide two plug-ins and car parking facilities at the airport. Presently Thomas Motors, Thief River Falls, and Carol Muckala are interested renters for the facility.

Alderman Wysoski introduced a resolution to draw up proper leases for area at the airport in effect December 1. Leases were approved on a one-year basis for both renters.

Resolution was adopted to accept the lease renewal for farmers renting land at the airport at 35 acres per year for a three-year period, from 1980-82. Figures would be effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Further airport committee recommendations concerned the authorization of the city engineer, Doug Stewart, to construct plans for handicapped remodeling in the airport terminal, with costs not to exceed $1,000.

"The $1,000 would be part of the project cost," Stewart said.

Improvements also involved black-topping service roads at the airport and constructing a fire and rescue building. Approved by council members was the reduction of one full-time contract employee position to a half-time employee position effective January 1.

Bids were opened at 3 p.m. November 13 for the I.H. crawler and FWD snowblower at the airport. Bid from International Harvester at Savage, MN was $18,000 and $875 from Hoffman of Goodridge.

Alderman Wysoski introduced a resolution to turn the bids over to respective committees, and to table the item for further discussion. Alderman Clayton Restad seconded the resolution, and the motion carried.

The idea of starting a whole food store, which involves a minimum of processing of foods, was introduced by Steve Anderson, Thief River Falls resident. Location for the new facility would be the entire upstairs of the old library.

"The location is suitable since it is right downtown, and people would be getting good food for less money," he said.

Alderman Goodrich reminded council members and Anderson that there have been other inquiries for use of the old library.

"We have two different requests," he said. "One is for governmental use and the other for commercial use."

Quinlivan stated that rezoning of land would be necessary if the commercial facility were built in the library, since the building is on public land, and the operation of the new facility would therefore not be conforming use.

"I believe the building should be utilized if it can be," alderman Borsheim said. "It should be put up for bids if the city is not going to make government use out of it."

Request for bids was also discussed for obtaining a police patrol car at the law enforcement center in Thief River Falls.

"The new car would replace the Plymouth we are using now, which has 98,000 miles on it," said Ken Froschheiser, chief of police. It was resolved that bids would be opened at 3 p.m. December 11.

Alderman Goodrich pursued the question of issuing a 3.2 off-sale beer license in Thief River Falls. Roll call vote had determined the final decision at the previous council meeting, in which the new Holiday stationstore in Thief River Falls was granted permission to obtain a 3.2 beer license.

"It has been stated in the past," alderman Goodrich said, "that the city had an ordinance to limit licenses for 3.2 beer to one per every 1,000 people. If we want to eliminate the problem of issuing too many, I believe we should set a limit of 12 licenses in this city."

Opposing viewpoints came from various council members, who argued that if a large grocery store was to be built in Thief River Falls, it would be denied a license if 12 had already been issued.

"What if a Super Valu came into town and wanted a 3.2 license?" alderman Borsheim asked. "Would we have to knock out the license of a smaller store?"

"We presently have 12 licenses issued in Thief River Falls," alderman Goodrich said, "which is two more than the previous ordinance says we should have."

He then questioned reasons for a threat to have a limit on licenses. Roll call vote was held to determine whether the present ordinance should be amended to read: "Subdivision 11. Number of licenses. The city council shall not have more than 12 off-sale beer licenses outstanding at any one time." Five "no" votes and two "yes" votes from alderman Ole Engelstad and alderman Goodrich resulted from the votes. Members decided the licensing committee would be charged with reviewing all licenses issued in Thief River Falls, and to report the results back to members at the next meeting. Resolution was introduced by Borsheim and seconded by alderman Wysoski.

Prowlers Fill Football Schedule

Addition of Grand Rapids has filled out the 1980 Lincoln high school football schedule, it was announced Tuesday by Lincoln athletic director Russ Smith.

Thief River Falls faced the possibility of an open date next fall when Crosby-Ironton declined to renew a two-year contract. But rather than play just eight games in 1980, the Prowlers were considering playing Roseau, a former Northwest Athletic Conference football rival, and were even exploring the possibility of playing current NWAC foe Fergus Falls twice next fall.

With the completed 1980 Lincoln football schedule, the Prowlers will open at home against Grand Forks Red River, travel to Detroit Lakes, play at Grand Rapids, host Staples, visit Moorhead, drive to Bemidji, entertain Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks and finish at Crookston.

Grand Rapids finished 1979 with an 8-1 record when the Indians lost their season opener to eventual Northern Lakes Conference champion Duluth Denfeld 6-3 and then won eight straight games.

Ironically, just as Thief River Falls and Grand Rapids were completing details of the new playing pact, the Indians lost the services of head coach Tom Drazenovich, who resigned his position because of "health and other personal reasons too numerous to mention." Drazenovich spent eight years in the Grand Rapids football program, the last two as head coach.

"We really feel bad about this," said Grand Rapids superintendent James E. Sauter when he talked about Drazenovich's resignation. "If anybody was meant to coach, it was Tom. But his health and personal feelings come first, and we respect his wishes."

Thief River Falls picked up Grand Rapids at the expense of Bemidji. The Indians and Lumberjacks ended the 1979 season against each other when Grand Rapids won 27-19. But reshuffling of the Grand Rapids schedule closed off that last playing date in 1980 and opened up the third week for the Prowlers.

Crosby-Ironton Is Now Section 8 Addition

Even though Crosby-Ironton, a relative newcomer to high school hockey, will not play many Section 8 opponents during the 1979-80 season, officials of the Minnesota State High School league have recommended to the MSHSL board of directors that the Rangers be placed in Section 8 for post-season tournament play.

The addition of Crosby-Ironton expands the Section 8 tournament field to 17 teams, necessitating a playoff game to reach the 16-team Sub Section 8 set-up.

Thief River Falls will serve as host for the 1980 Section 8 high school hockey tournament Feb. 29, March 1, 3, 4, 7.

Cliff Morlan Dies

Long time Bemidji Pioneer sports writer Cliff Morlan died Monday in Bemidji at the age of 66. Suffering from cancer, he died at 12:30 p.m. at the Bemidji community hospital.

Morlan, who had written his daily "Sports Review" column in the Pioneer for 38 years, was born in Crookston Dec. 22, 1912. He left school after the ninth grade to play semi-pro baseball in North Dakota. In 1931 he went through barber's college in Fargo, moving to Bemidji to open his own shop in 1937.

Always involved in sports, Morlan, for $10 a week, began writing his "Sports Review" column in 1941. He wrote his final column Sunday.

"For 20 years I didn't take a vacation," he once told a reporter. "I was afraid someone else might come in and do a better job and I'd be out of one."

In reflecting on his death, he asked that the Bemidji high school fight song be played at the beginning of his funeral service and the Bemidji State University fight song be played at the end.

Prowlers Edge Bemidji 43-40

Trailing from the very start, Thief River Falls finally passed Bemidji with a final event win Tuesday as the Prowlers edged the Lumberjills 43-40 in a girls high school swimming meet at Bemidji.

The come-from-behind triumph closed out the 1979 regular season schedule for the Prowlers who divided 12 dual meet decisions.

Thief River Falls, minus top two sprinters Betsie Hallstrom and Kathy Dillon, who missed the meet because of illness, struggled against a Bemidji team the Prowlers had beaten 104-58 earlier this fall.

But trailing 36-30 with two events remaining, Thief River Falls earned a 1-2 finish in the 100-yard breaststroke where Franki Kuyath swam a 1:18.1 and Robyn Dallmann swam a 1:19.6, and then completed the come-back with a victory in the meet-ending 400-yard freestyle relay where Johanna Desrocher, Joan Glauque, Sarah Green and Shelley McGann swam a 4:14.0.

Thief River Falls coach John Hustad admitted the absence of Hallstrom and Dillon made a big difference in the Prowlers' performance. "But they made up the best they could," he mentioned.

In addition to the wins by Kuyath and the 400-yard freestyle relay, Thief River Falls claimed firsts when Johanna Desrocher swam a 2:34.8 in the 200-yard individual medley; Glauque swam a 1:12.1 in the 100-yard butterfly; and Lisa Desrocher collected 182.75 points in the diving competition. Thief River Falls' top diver, Brenda Lund, was forced into the 50 and 100-yard freestyle races to fill in for Hallstrom and Dillon.

Hustad had special praise for the performance by freshman Mary Geatz who improved her 500-yard freestyle time by some seven seconds to finish a close second with a 6:13.9. "That was our best swim," he said.

Thief River Falls beat Bemidji 50-24 in junior high school competition.

AVTI Students Are Eligible To Compete In MJCAA Sports

Instigated by Northland community college, a new policy has been adopted by the national junior college athletic association (NJCAA) that will allow students at area vocational-technical institutes (AVTI) to participate in community college-junior college intercollegiate athletic programs. The announcement of the major rules change was made Tuesday by Northland president Alex Easton.

"As a result of our action last year, it was brought up at the state level and went on to the national level," explained Easton. "I'm proud to repeat that the whole thing started here in Thief River Falls."

The ruling, which takes effect with the start of the 1979-80 winter quarter, says full-time AVTI students are eligible to participate in state-supported community college athletic programs. It is a one-year plan, but Easton says, "I fully expect it to continue for more than one year."

"We're going to function, in a sense, as one school in athletic competition," pointed out Easton who feels the move is "another step up the ladder to our ultimate goal" of consolidating programs of the two post-high school educational facilities. Easton, speaking at a press conference that also included Thief River Falls school superintendent Bill Corliss, Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute director Arnt Aune and Northland dean of students Ken Wiebolt, ultimately looks for the two schools to work together in programming, establishing, in effect, a single facility with 1,000 students instead of two distinctly different units.

Part of the gap was bridged this year in Thief River Falls when a construction program linked the Northland and Thief River Falls AVTI facilities.

"Our faculty and students are welcoming them (AVTI students) with open arms," noted Easton. Backing up that claim are Northland winter sports program coaches Bob Lundbohm, Deb Jacobson and Chet Engelman.

Lundbohm says he already has two AVTI students who definitely plan to report for the start of practice with his Northland hockey team, and two others indicated they are considering the move. "And I'm sure there will be quite a few more next year," he said. "It'll be a great recruiting tool."

Jacobson also has two AVTI students who definitely plan to play basketball for her at Northland this winter, with the possibility of others also taking advantage of the new opportunity. "I like the idea," she said. "I think it's a good idea. They (AVTI students) should have some place to participate in sports. Their athletic careers shouldn't end because they attend an AVTI."

And while Engelman doesn't expect immediate help for his Northland men's basketball team, he figures the program can be beneficial in the future. "It certainly won't be a hindrance," he noted. "We have had some students interested in the past; not a great number, but what the heck, in basketball you don't need many to influence your program."

Northland officials actually proposed the idea three years ago when the plan went nowhere. But after Wiebolt worked in reintroducing the proposal at the state level, the plan was passed by the NJCAA and ultimately okayed on the local level by the Thief River Falls board of education at a regular meeting Monday.

Northland and Thief River Falls AVTI students have actually participated in joint school-related activities in the past. Approximately 75 to 100 AVTI students take part each year in Northland intramural sports programs and in theatre and music, and in some cases where a two-year program includes classes at both Northland and the Thief River Falls AVTI (audio communications), a vocational-technical school student has been a member of a Northland athletic team. It happened this fall with Jeff Olson, a freshman from Warren, who attended class at the Thief River Falls AVTI but played on the Northland football team.

The cooperative athletic venture will affect most of the 22 members of the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA). But since it pertains only to state-supported community colleges, University of Minnesota branch schools like those at Crookston and Waseca will not benefit from the plan. In addition, some schools like Worthington, Rainy River in International Falls and Itasca in Grand Rapids, do not have separate area vocational-technical schools to complement their programs.

WINNER OF THE prestigious Lincoln high school football team most valuable player Ole Award was senior Bill Jury. Announcement of the award, named in honor of Former Thief River Falls sports fan Evonne "Ole" Olson, was made during Monday's 17th annual football team banquet in the Lincoln cafeteria. Presenting the award to Jury (second from left) were members of the Olson family: Buzz, Betty and Terry.

Football, Volleyball, Cross Country . . .

Banquets Are Held For Lincoln Fall Athletes

Post-season athletic banquets were held earlier this week for members of the Lincoln high school football, cross country and volleyball teams. Athletes were honored in all three fall sports as the football team gathered Monday in the Lincoln cafeteria, the volleyball team met that same night in the basement of St. Bernard's church and the cross country team got together Tuesday in the Lincoln cafeteria.

Football

Bill Jury was presented with the most valuable player Ole Award to highlight Monday's football banquet. An offensive runningback and a defensive safety, Jury was given the MVP award, named in memory of former Thief River Falls sports fan Evonne "Ole" Olson, by members of the Olson family, including wife Betty and sons Buzz and Terry.

Rick Gobell will succeed Jury as captain of the 1980 Prowlers squad.

Earning special awards were John Dillon, coaches' offensive award; Jury, coaches' defensive award; Brian Culkins, most improved; and Gobell, most dedicated.

Cross Country

Bruce Johnson and LeeAnn Peterson were selected the most valuable runners on the boys and girls teams, respectively, during Tuesday's cross country banquet.

Other awards went to Chuck Lowell, most improved boys runner; Greg Ness, varsity coaches' award, and Kevin Kezar, junior high school coaches' award.

Selected as co-captains for the 1980 Lincoln high school cross country teams were Johnson and Todd Bergland for the boys, along with Margaret White and Brenda Blazek for the girls.

Volleyball

Varsity award winners at Monday's volleyball banquet were Stacy Ehrenstrom, most valuable player on offense; Marlys Huot, most valuable player on defense; and LeAnn Paetznick, most improved player.

Wendy Erickson was selected the most improved player on the junior varsity team while Patty Meyer and Carla Swanson shared the most improved player award on the C team.

Ehrenstrom and Huot were selected co-captains of the 1980 volleyball team.

Letter winners were seniors Nancy Noreen, Paula Kertz and Kathy Walker; juniors Stacy Ehrenstrom and Marlys Huot; sophomore LeAnn Paetznick; and student managers Carrie Thompson and Stacy Davidson.

TRFAHA To Start Candy Sale Monday

Thief River Falls amateur hockey association's annual candy sale will begin on Monday.

All youth hockey players are to meet in the basement meeting room of the city auditorium Monday afternoon. Bantams, Pee-Wee's and Squirts will meet at 4 p.m., and 7 and 8-year-old Tiny Mites will meet at 4:30.

The players will be selling candy door-to-door to raise funds for the local hockey program.

Some $10,000 in TRFAHA money has been used the past year to remodel and update the old arena.

Support of the important fund raising effort will be greatly appreciated.

State Football Title Games Slated Friday

Ten high school football teams will attempt to win state championships in five classifications of competition this week when title games are to be played Friday night at various sites in the eighth annual Minnesota State High School League state football playoffs.

All games are scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. reports Larry Larson, director of information and publications for the Minnesota State High School League.

Class AA

If someone were to have told you back in August when the 1979 football season began that Richfield and Columbia Heights would be playing for the state Class AA football title on the night of November 16, you probably would have thought the person was crazy. But this Friday night at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis, Richfield (10-1) will meet Columbia Heights (10-1) for first place in a class that has over 80 teams competing.

Richfield advanced to the championship game via a 21-18 triumph over Minneapolis Roosevelt last Thursday night at Parade Stadium while Columbia Heights eliminated Armstrong 12-7 on Friday evening at Parade Stadium. Both victors had to rally to overcome deficits in the final period of play. Richfield went ahead with 4:25 remaining while Columbia Heights waited until 3:20 left before taking the lead.

Not picked by many to make the finals, both Richfield and Columbia Heights have had good seasons. Losers only to Bloomington Kennedy in the final game of the regular season, Richfield, the Lake South Conference champion, had its most impressive victory this campaign when winning 20-0 against Rochester John Marshall in state playoff quarterfinals. Columbia Heights, meanwhile, has a similar success story. Losers only to Irondale of New Brighton during the regular season, the Hylanders had their most impressive showing in winning by a 40-8 margin in state playoff quarterfinal action against Cambridge.

This week's meeting between Richfield and Columbia Heights, the North Suburban Conference champion, promises to be a most interesting one. Richfield is led by standout tailback Scott Schuveiller while Columbia Heights is paced by quarterback Mike Lahti, a deft passer. Veteran head coaches Dick Walker of Richfield and Ron Raveling of Columbia Heights have had numerous winning years at both schools but neither coach or school has won a state title. Richfield, in its fourth state playoff, lost to Stillwater in the 1975 championship game, while Columbia Heights is in its first state playoff.

Both Richfield and Columbia Heights are offensive-minded teams. This year's title game promises to be an exciting event.

Class A

Two teams that many people figured to be in the title game have lived up to preseason press clippings and will meet in the Class A championship game Friday evening at Rochester Stadium.

Apple Valley (10-1), last year's Class A runner-up and losers only to Class AA school Owatonna during the second week of the regular season, will be a slight favorite according to oddsmakers to beat Rochester Lourdes (10-2), a strong contingent who like Apple Valley, has lost only to Class AA competition — Rochester John Marshall and Rochester Mayo.

Apple Valley won its way to the finals by way of a 21-0 victory over Paynesville last Friday night in Cold Spring. Last Saturday afternoon in Rochester, Lourdes toppled Crookston 14-9 to qualify for the finals.

Apple Valley, incidentally, could be the first school ever in state playoff history to go through the playoffs unscored on, should they whitewash Rochester Lourdes. The Eagles blanked St. Peter 17-0 in quarterfinal action two weeks ago.

While Apple Valley is in their second state playoffs, Rochester Lourdes had never previously appeared until this year's team qualified late last month.

Class B

If you're looking forward to watching two good "small-town" football teams playing one another, you might consider driving to Cold Spring to witness the Class B state football playoff championship game between two unbeatens — Mahnomen (12-0) and Gaylord (12-0).

Both schools "have been there before". . . refering to the state playoffs. But Mahnomen has never played in a title game. Entrants in 1974, 1975 and 1976, the Indians may have their best state playoff team this year. Coach Ken Baumann's contingent has outscored opposition by an astounding 377-21 margin. . . an average of 31.4 points per game compared to 1.7 points per game against. Mahnomen has shut out nine of their 12 opponents. Last week in their win over Holdingford, the Indians won by a 24-12 count. The 12 Holdingford points, of course were the most scored on Mahnomen all year.

Gaylord, meanwhile, like Mahnomen, has a tenacious defensive unit. In two state playoff games the Spartans have yet to yield a touchdown. They beat Belle Plaine 19-3 in quarterfinal

HAPPY HUNTER as a result of his success during the 1979 deer season was Clark Hendrickson of Thief River Falls who bagged this buck on public lands in the Elm Lake area. Hendrickson, KTRF radio's "morning mayor of northwestern Minnesota", will likely be so motivated by his success that he will begin playing the world's only remaining record of "Goin' Deer Hunting" next July. And if he persists in chiding the Times editor on the morning bowling report, we will publish the photo of the deer which shows the grille pattern from his pickup. The deer field dressed at 200 pounds.

FOUR SEASONS REALTY
1221 No. Main 681-7561

In Red Lake Falls, call Carol at 253-4271 or stop in at Peppermint Square

FIRST YEAR SUCCESS was recorded by 12-year-old Ron Giauque, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Giauque of Thief River Falls, who waited until the last day of the 1979 deer season to down this buck. Ron connected Sunday after passing up several opportunities earlier when cold weather caused him to be unprepared when other deer appeared.

State Football Games Friday

play and romped past Winona Cotter 13-0 in last week's semifinal action.

While Gaylord's points-for and points-against statistics are almost as impressive as Mahnomen's — 29.8 to 3.3 — the Spartans have the edge in state playoff performance. They have three state championship trophies in their school's trophy case. Head coach David Main, now in his 11th year as head mentor of the school with 234 students in its upper three grades (Mahnomen has 253), won state titles in 1972, 1973 and 1975, and had a team entered in last year's state playoffs.

If you're a high school football fan, you can't miss on this game.

Class C

Another team with unbeaten status, Bird Island-Lake Lillian (12-0) is the "experts choice" to win the Class C championship game against Harmony (11-1) in Friday evening's Class C championship game at Fairbault.

Bird Island-Lake Lillian, who has scored in the 20's, 30's, 40's or 50's in all but two of their 12 games, won their way to this year's finals when beating perennial playoff entry, Battle Lake, last year's Class C runner-up, 16-0, last Friday. Harmony, meanwhile, is somewhat of a surprise finalist and has been most impressive in winning their first two state playoff games — over Randolph 35-6 and Tyler 21-8. Since losing to LeRoy-Ostrander in the fourth week of the regular season, Coach Del Elston's Cardinals have found the formula to winning each week thereafter.

In their third title game, Bird Island-Lake Lillian, runner-up in 1974 and 1976, can't wait to bring home a championship trophy while Harmony, making their first appearance in a state playoff, is but one game away from saying "We're Number One".

Nine-Man

There are 100 high schools in Minnesota that play nine-man football and heading into this week all but two of them — Toivola-Meadowlands and Russell — have packed their gear away for the 1979 season.

But for Toivola-Meadowlands and Russell, two high schools with enrollments less than 100 students, this is a most exciting week. They will be playing for a state championship.

The game will take place in Wrenshall. Toivola-Meadowlands (10-0) advanced to the finals when beating McIntosh-Winger 12-0 last Friday while Russell (9-1) eked past Morton, 18-17. Toivola-Meadowlands is in their first state playoff while russell was entered last year.

Panthothere, a cat-size, furry, rodent-like creature, was the earliest true mammal on earth, appearing 150 million years ago, according to the National Wildlife Federation. Mammals evolved from a group of primitive reptiles called pelycosaurs.

Larson Music Among TRF Oldest Family Businesses

SHOPPING MALL ATMOSPHERE was the goal of a store renovation recently completed by the Larson Music company in Thief River Falls. An architectural and design company was employed to plan the remodeling of the store which adjoins the new Falls Mall on LaBree avenue.

One of Thief River Falls' oldest family-owned businesses, the Larson Music company will observe a grand re-opening Thursday, Friday and Saturday in extensively renovated quarters on LaBree avenue. The store has been remodeled to provide a shopping mall atmosphere, according to owner Jon Larson, and product lines have been expanded as well.

The grand re-opening will include free registration for a cross-country ski outfit, guitar, auto stereo systems and other prizes and T-shirts and six-packs of pop will be given with qualifying purchases.

The Larson company was started in 1921 when Lars Larson moved to Thief River Falls from Barrett and bought the Thief River Music company, located on Third street in the present site of First Federal savings and loan. It was known as the Larson company until 1952 when the name was changed to Larson Music company.

During the long history of the company, it has changed locations a number of times in what present owner Jon Larson, grandson of the founder, terms "taking advantage of opportunity". The store moved to buildings which are the present locations of Falls Vision clinic, Rex cafe, Thorp Loan & Thrift, Curtis L. Charlson offices and then to the present site on LaBree.

In early years the firm dealt in Skelgas and appliances and through 1946 was a distributor for Philco, Maytag and Skelgas, covering the area from highway 2 north to the Canadian border and the North Dakota border east to Fosston. After World War II the company went more heavily into music and later developed the market for phonographs, television, pianos and electronics.

It was in 1952 that the company sold its first television set and Justus Larson, who came into the business with his father Lars in 1941, promoted sales in a unique way. He mounted a fold-down antenna on an old bread delivery truck and drove to surrounding towns to demonstrate the receiving of pictures through the air.

Keeping pace with demand and innovations, the store has now expanded its inventory of stereo and hi-fi equipment. A special in-store boutique has been arranged to display and demonstrate hi-fi units. A computer allows customers to listen to any combination of speakers and turn tables, tape players or radios in stock. Emphasis is placed on component system packages at a reduced rate from individual component sales.

An architect and design firm was retained to help plan the store renovation, Jon Larson said, to create the mall atmosphere and plan display for the company's lines of record and tape players, hi-fi equipment, pianos, sheet music and books, guitars and amplifiers, television sets and band instruments. A specialized field since 1938 has been car radios and auto tape players were added in 1966.

Among unique items handled by the company over the years have been records produced by various area musicians and distributed by Larson Music throughout a four-state area. Among the musicians have been the late Selmer Ramsey, who had three fiddling albums; old-time music by the Stardust Playboys of Trail; LeRoy Larson and the Minnesota Scandinavian Ensemble (Larson is now professor of music education at the University of Minnesota); and country-western vocals by Orrin Ranum of Wisconsin, a brother of Ferrl Ranum of Thief River Falls.

The store has recently become a ticket sales center for all sorts of community and area events on a voluntary basis. It started by handling tickets to music attractions and expanded into many other areas. Most recently it has been named a Centick center for sales of tickets to all attractions at the Chester Fritz auditorium at the University of North Dakota. Customers are issued tickets at the store and avoid stopping at a "will call" window at the auditorium.

Throughout the company's history, the Larson family has been involved in community activities. Justus, who was active in the business from 1941 to 1965, was a charter member of the Jaycees and is a past president of the chamber of commerce. He also represents Region One on the governor's advisory committee on rural development and for the past four years has been a distribution representative for Pfanstiehl company, an audio accessory supplier.

Jon, who assumed management of the business in 1965, is also a past president of the chamber of commerce and is now a member of the city planning commission.

Audio engineering, commercial and service work for the music company is handled by Marcraft, Inc., a company owned by Jon's younger brother Mark. Located on the west edge of the city, Marcraft does consumer product repair and commercial servicing of items such as public building and church speaker systems. It also leases a commercial security alarm system to about 60 subscribers where a break-in triggers a signal in the law enforcement center and officers are on the site in response in a matter of minutes.

Larson Music has five employees while Marcraft employs a manager, three technicians, a receptionist and two delivery personnel.

"We feel we have been a real part of the community for a long, long time," Jon Larson said about the firm's 58-year history, "and that it is part of our responsibility to make it the best community possible. That includes making business attractive and responsibe to customers, and was a motivating factor in our recent remodeling and expansion program."

IN-STORE BOTIQUE for display and demonstration of stereophonic equipment is part of the renovation of the Larson Music company in Thief River Falls. Electronic switching by computer permits the customer to try any of the turntables, tape players or radios with any of the speaker systems available. In business since 1921, the company will observe its grand reopening Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

NCC Musicale Performances Slated Sunday

Two performances of the annual "Autumn Musicale" at Northland community college will be presented Sunday at 2 and 4 p.m. in the college theatre. The two performances by the community band and college choir are scheduled in anticipation of large attendance at the event.

Doug Engstrom will conduct the 60-member community band while Phyllis Dalager will direct the Northland choir. Special feature will be a jazz quartet playing "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano".

Arbitration Is Authorized By School Board

Hired by the board were Beverly Enderlein, long term substitute for third grade at Washington elementary school; Yvonne Sorenson, secretary for the children and parents learning together program at the AVTI; and Craig Lindahl, custodian at Franklin middle school; and Polly Reed, trainable mentally handicapped instructor at Franklin middle school.

Howard Thorson was named elementary basketball director for grades four and five, William McGann was named high school boys' varsity track head coach and Dan Vrudny was named high school assistant boys' swimming coach. Resignation of Vicki Wehage as school crossing guard was accepted.

Bids of Jorgenson Electric in the amounts of $1,839 and $1,377 were accepted for electrical work in AVTI new and remodeling house projects, respectively. Bids of Swenson Plumbing and Heating for $2,015 and $1,425 were accepted for the same respective projects.

Reduction in the amount of general debt service certified to the Pennington county auditor was made from $174,413 to $127,700. The recertification adjustment resulted from the original board resolutions when the bonds for the AVTI were issued.

Citizen members appointed to a committee for academically able students include Mrs. Gretchen Belto, Mrs. Margaret Saetre, Mrs. Ruth McDowell, Arnie Fjelland and Herb Achenbach. Faculty and student members were announced earlier.

Members appointed to new three-year terms on the general advisory committee of the AVTI were Gene Belto and Milton Reierson (reappointed), Roger Reuter, Tom Kenville and Marvin Bronken. All are from Thief River Falls except Bronken who is superintendent of schools at Okfee.

THERMO SAVER™
A Necessary Insulation Investment!
Energy use is reduced every day throughout the year—so start saving now!
THERMO SAVER, the original water heater retrofit jacket (U.S. Patent 4,039,098) is engineered to increase the efficiency of all units. A standard unit with THERMO SAVER installed is better insulated than many of the new, premium "super insulated" and special solar models.
The product will perform as designed even if only the top three-quarters portion of the tank wall is covered.
Compared to building type insulation, THERMO SAVER's double density fiber glass resists compression when wrapped, makes fabrication easy, and provides superior insulation value per unit of thickness. It's designed to maximize ease of installation and performance within the limited space commonly available between the unit and wall.
The extra thick top plate, for electric water heaters, provides added insulation value where it's needed the most.

In the Matter of the Petition for a Change in the Boundary Line of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District (Section 112.39, Subd. 4)

ORDER FOR HEARING AND NOTICE THEREOF

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED and notice is hereby given that a hearing concerning the above-entitled matter will be held on Tuesday, November 27, 1979, in the Newfolden Community Center, Newfolden, Minnesota, 56738, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Central Standard Time.

The hearing will be held before Bernard Singer, 1745 University Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55104, (612-296-8110) a hearing examiner appointed by the Chief Hearing Examiner of the State of Minnesota. This address is the office of the Hearing Examiner.

All parties have the right to be represented by legal counsel or any other representative of their choice, throughout the proceeding. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to the contested case procedures set out in Minnesota Statutes Section 15.0411 through Minnesota Statutes Section 15.052 and Minnesota Regulation HE 201 through HE 222. Questions concerning the issues raised in this Order and Notice or concerning informal disposition or discovery may be directed to Special Assistant Attorney General Douglas Blanke, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155, (612-296-2586).

The purpose of the hearing will be to receive and consider testimony and evidence bearing upon a Petition for a Change in the Boundary Line of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, signed by the managers of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, asking for certain changes in the boundary of said watershed district. The above petition was filed with the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 23, 1979.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District was established by Order of the Minnesota Water Resources Board on August 28, 1970, in accordance with Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 112.

The Director of the Division of Water, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, submitted a memorandum on the above petition to the Minnesota Water Resources Board on October 16, 1979.

The said petition has been served upon the County Auditors of Marshall, Pennington and Polk Counties, and the Commissioner, and the Director of the Division of Waters of the Department of Natural Resources.

Any person who desires to become a "party" to this case, must submit a timely petition to intervene to the hearing examiner pursuant to Minnesota Regulations HE 210, showing how that person's legal right, duties, and privileges may be determined or affected by the decision in this case. The petition must also set forth the grounds and purposes for which intervention is sought. A party to the case has the right to present evidence and argument with respect to the issues and to cross-examine witnesses. At the time and place fixed for the hearing on the above petition, all persons interested in or affected by the contemplated improvement shall be given an opportunity to be heard without becoming "parties".

Any person desiring to intervene as a party must submit a written request to the Hearing Examiner by 4:30 p.m., Central Standard Time, on November 23, 1979.

The above-cited procedural rules are available for inspection at the Office of Hearing Examiner, or may be purchased from the Documents Section of the Department of Administration, 140 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155 (612-296-2874).

Persons attending the hearing should bring all evidence bearing on the proceeding including any records or documents.

A copy of the petition is available for inspection by all interested persons during normal business hours at the office of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District, at the County Auditors' offices of Marshall, Pennington and Polk Counties, and at the office of the Minnesota Water Resources Board.

Dated at Saint Paul, Minnesota, 55102, this 30th day of October 1979.

What does the Bible really mean to you? Is it an old leather volume gathering dust on the shelf, or a beloved, faithful companion?

The answer depends partly on your childhood. If your family read the Bible daily, then its Books have long since become part of your way of life.

But to many of us, the Bible remains a mystery and even the "modern" versions seem complicated. We may want, almost desperately, to understand, but it isn't that easy.

Help is as near as your closest church. For centuries the Church has made a business of studying and interpreting the Bible. Despite the passing of time, they proclaim its message with remarkable clarity. Try it and see.

A Mystery?

Local Cooperation

It may not have a great impact athletically on either the area vocational-technical institute or Northland community college, but the agreement recently completed to allow AVTI students to participate in Northland athletic programs is a significant action. It is emphatic proof of a cooperative attitude which places the welfare of students at the top of the list of considerations.

With approval of the program by the Thief River Falls board of education Monday night, all hurdles had been cleared to permit AVTI students to participate in NCC athletics on a full and unrestricted basis. It will be an added attraction for the AVTI which has not had inter-school athletic programs. It may be a plus for Northland in adding some athletes to its men's and women's sports rosters.

What it provides more than anything else, however, is an indication of understanding by administration, faculty and students of post high school education here that a cooperative posture is best for all concerned. There is much more to be gained from a unified effort than any of the best intentioned differences which may exist.

We wish to commend Dr. Alex Easton, president of Northland; Ken Wiebolt, dean of students; Arnt Aune, director of the AVTI; Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of the public school system; the board of education, student associations and others who have developed the idea and put the program together. It is the type of action which should set an example for community spirit and initiative.

The First Amendment

Columnist Ruth Howard wrote the following recently in the Milbank (S.D.) Herald-Advance:

Boy, am I tired tonight. We spent the whole day picketing in front of the City Hall. Can you believe those guys? They wanted to cut off funding for the teen center just when we were getting somewhere. How can you help teenagers with their problems when they don't have any permanent place to go to find an adult who's interested. It costs less to keep the teen center open for a whole year than to pave two blocks of city streets; and what's more important? Just wait until the next election. We'll work to elect a council who's responsive to the needs of the community and those clowns who are warming their chairs in City Hall now will be out looking for a job.

When the Shah of Iran was deposed, more than 400 of his supporters were systematically executed. It is the accepted method of dealing with dissenters in much of the world.

I'd better make this pot of coffee strong. I know my husband is going to be crabby when he comes down. That sneaky realtor didn't tell us about the church bells on Sunday morning when he sold us this house. "Close to the churches," he said. "Convenient location," he said. But first the Catholic church starts ringing its bells at 6:00 a.m. Then it's the Lutherans; the the Congregational church starts. And the Methodists, not to be outdone, installed chimes in their steeple. Instead of the clanging of bells, we can listen to whole hymns. "O God our help in ages past, our hope for years to come." Why can't they just all be quiet and let me sleep late Sunday morning? Is that too much to ask?

In Czechoslovakia two young men were executed for 'crimes against the State.' They were caught smuggling Bibles into the country. In Poland a factory worker risks jail when he leaves his job to try to catch a glimpse of the Pope driving by.

I tried to explain to the officer that it WAS a real emergency. I was late for my hair appointment and you know how temperamental a good hairdresser can be. I was only going 67 mph. It's not so much the fine that bothers me. But you know the local papers always print the court news. Well, I called and tried to reason with the editor but do you think she would listen? She mumbled something about her 'responsibility to print the public record' and said she could not in good conscience leave out the account of my little embarrassment. I think they must get some kind of sadistic pleasure in putting good, law abiding citizens like me in embarrassing positions. Why else would they do it? Well, I guess I'm in good company. Last week they printed it when the high school principal got caught speeding in the school zone. And I remember reading that the mayor's son got nabbed for an illegal left turn. Guess I'll just have to learn to smile a lot this coming week.

On May 16, Ivan was taken from his Moscow apartment by officers of the KGB. The court records are not open to public scrutiny and in six months Ivan's wife and mother have been unable to find out where he is or what he has been charged with. Ivan is not the only Soviet citizen to disappear without a trace.

What? The first Amendment? What does the First Amendment mean to me?. . . .Well, nothing I guess. I can't see how it affects my life. I mean, it's kinda outdated isn't it? After all the Constitution is over 200 years old. How could it possibly affect me in this day and age?

How indeed?

Saving The Jury From Burger

Following editorial is from the Indianapolis News:

Supreme Court Justice Warren E. Burger is suggesting that judges, rather than juries, should decide civil cases that involve long trials and complicated issues.

In a recent speech to the conference of state chief justices, Burger suggested that most jurors are not competent to understand complicated issues in long civil trials.

His solution is to turn over at least some of the cases to trial by judge or panel of judges, rather than a jury.

Perhaps he is correct to suggest that a study of the matter is in order. A few cases are complicated and defy understanding. Admiralty and equity cases are already tried by judges rather than juries.

But there is a disturbing and elitist assumption in Burger's proposal. And it is mindful of the Burger court's tendency to dabble with time-honored constitutional principles, for example, in its sorry decision to let judges close pre-trial conferences to the public or in its unfortunate ruling that a jury does not need to be reminded of a defendant's innocence before the proof of guilt.

In his speech in Arizona, Burger mocked the jury selection procedure, basically declaring that it does not work properly. "Experienced business and professional people, accountants, professors of economics, statisticians, or others competent to cope with complex economic or scientific questions rarely survive challenges in the jury selection process if they are not excused for cause," he said. "The jury actually selected is rarely a true cross-section, as we are so fond of repeating."

If the jury selection is really a failure, then some sort of changes in that process may be in order, not necessarily an abolition of the principle of trial by a jury of peers.

Burger also suggests that the framers of the Constitution really did not anticipate the complexity of life in the late 20th century, so perhaps the principle of trial by jury is out of date for certain cases.

"When the framers of the Constitution were engaged in the practice of law in the colonies, they were not dealing with the kinds of complex cases which are the daily fare of the courts in the second half of the twentieth century," he declared.

Perhaps Burger is correct. There are complicated cases. There are more experts. There are technical matters hard for the average person to grasp.

But are these sufficient reasons for abandoning basic constitutional principles? Won't judges have the same problems grasping technical matters? Are judges so much more able in these matters? And who will decide which cases are complicated enough to warrant a trial by a judge rather than a jury?

There may be need for study. But changes in this area should be suggested very cautiously.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Little Boy: "Mom, can I have 50 cents for the man crying outside?"

Mother: "Of course, but what is he crying about?"

Little Boy: "He's crying, 'Ice cream, 50 cents'."

An orthopedist taking an intern through his ward called attention to a man with a limp. "He limps because his right leg is shorter than his left leg," the doctor explained. "What would you do in his case?" The intern replied immediately, "Oh, I suppose I'd limp, too."

The woman called her doctor late in the evening. "I know my problem; I've got hyperinsulism," she said. "I know," said the doctor. "I just watched the same TV program."

The picture and news item arrived in tough shape, the envelope mangled and torn. The envelope was clearly marked, "Photographs — Do Not Bend". Beneath those words someone had scrawled, "Oh yes they do!"

FIRST DOLLAR of clear profit was presented to Dale Olmstead, general manager of the KKAQ radio station in Thief River Falls Friday, by Chamber Ambassador, Ron Gerardy.

BOB KOSEL, Chamber Ambassador, presented the first dollar of clear profit to Connie Ellingson, manager and co-owner of the Mat Stop cafe in Thief River Falls Friday.

Tasty Tips For Holiday Meals

GOOD NEWS FOR DIETERS: NOW THERE'S LOW-CALORIE HOMEMADE GRAVY

Gravy with your holiday turkey, other poultry and leftovers doesn't have to be a no-no if you're watching your weight. Liquid gravy aids—such as Kitchen Bouquet—make it easy to prepare delicious low-fat, low-calorie gravy that rivals traditional gravies in both taste and appearance. The secret is to replace calorie-laden meat drippings with a gravy aid/browning sauce that adds flavor and color but no fat and minimal calories.

The following recipe makes four cups of low calorie gravy with a total calorie count of just 320 calories, or about 5 calories per tablespoon. Since no pan drippings are needed, it's an ideal gravy for preparing later in the week to serve with leftovers.

The recipe uses the never-fail "Shaker Jar" method of gravy-making. If you're just learning to cook, you'll be delighted to discover that you can produce a savory, rich brown gravy with no lumps and very little effort.

Pour on Low-Calorie Homemade Gravy.

STOCK GRAVY*
(Shaker Jar Method)

Step 1: Make stock by simmering 1 small onion, 1 stalk celery and giblets in 1 quart water about 1 hour, or until tender. Strain stock. If necessary, add water to make 3 cups. Chop cooked giblets and add to stock, if desired. (For convenience, prepared chicken broth may be used in place of homemade stock.)

Step 2: Combine 1 cup cold water and 1/2 cup all-purpose flour in a jar with tight-fitting cover; shake until smooth. Gradually add this mixture to hot stock, stirring constantly, and bring to boil. Simmer over low heat 2 or 3 minutes to cook flour and thicken. Stir in 2 teaspoons Kitchen Bouquet. Serve hot with roasted poultry or use in preparing leftovers.

*Tested in Kitchen Bouquet Kitchens, Grocery Store Products Company, Oakland, California.

Kitchen Bouquet liquid gravy aid can be used in all gravy recipes. It is the choice of more chefs than any other agent and flavor enhancer, and is made from a blend of caramel, vegetables, herbs and spices. Kitchen Bouquet is over one hundred years old and 100% natural. You will find it displayed in the condiment section of grocery stores.

Elderly And Rural Poor Benefit From New Food Program

According to a study soon to be issued by the U.S. department of agriculture, the rural poor and the elderly are the chief beneficiaries of changes in the food stamp program which took effect last January.

Testifying before the House committee on agriculture, agriculture secretary Bob Bergland reported that dropping the requirement that people must come up with a lump sum of cash to buy their food stamps added 2.9 million people to the program. Nearly half that number, he said, are the rural poor. At the same time, the number of elderly households in the program increased by 32 per cent while all others increased by only 14 per cent.

Citing the study which evaluates the effect of 1977 food stamp reform legislation, Secretary Bergland stated that "the gap between the poor and the rest of the country appears to be widening."

While overall incomes have increased by 31 per cent between February, 1976 and April, 1979, he reported, preliminary department data suggest that incomes of people using food stamps increased at less than one-third that rate. This same data indicates that the majority of food stamp households have gross incomes of less than $300 a month or $3,600 a year.

In addition, the study showed that between 500,000 and 700,000 people were dropped from the program when income eligibility limits were lowered this year. In addition, several million people received cuts in benefits.

Bergland also reported that each one per cent increase in unemployment adds 750,000 people to food stamp rolls. Because of rising unemployment and continued inflation, he said, the cost of the food stamp program could increase from $6.9 billion in fiscal 1979 to $8.3 billion in fiscal 1980.

Bergland added that increases in participation as a result of the 1977 reform legislation leveled off in March and are not a factor in the expected increase in the cost of the Food stamp program in 1980.

Citing problems in precisely predicting unemployment levels and inflation rates, Secretary Bergland urged Congress to eliminate spending ceilings imposed on the food stamp program with the 1977 reform legislation.

"The experience of the past two years has shown that the specific dollar authorization ceilings are not workable," he said. Predicting that benefits would have to be reduced if insufficient amounts are appropriated, he added that "I do not think it is healthy to place the food stamp program in an annual crisis due to the uncertainty of economic forecasts."

Department was forced to request a supplemental appropriation from Congress this summer to keep the program running. Increases in food costs, Bergland reported, accounted for $800 million of the additional appropriation. "If food prices had held at the levels originally predicted," Bergland said, "we would not have exceeded the cap last year."

In his testimony, Secretary Bergland stressed that the department is continuing to focus on driving down fraud and error in the food stamp program.

Starting in January, the department will begin requiring people to pay back the value of food stamps received fraudulently before they can again be eligible for the program. As an incentive to states to pursue fraud cases, a portion of this recovered money is now returned to the state.

In addition, Bergland said, the department is proposing that states pick up part of the cost of food stamps which they issue erroneously. "This would make a major change in the program," he said, "as it would make states liable for losses due to high error rates."

To help states lower their error rates and verify the incomes of people applying for food stamps, the department is also proposing that states be given access to social security and unemployment compensation records.

Three Bedroom Castle for Sale

Throughout most of our history, owning a home was an impossible dream. It's only during the past 20 years that it has become an attainable goal for 60 per cent of the American people. Now there are ominous signs that, unless we shape up and correct some of our mistakes, home ownership will begin to decline. We face a future in which the opportunity to buy a home could be relegated to a small elite, perhaps one as small as 20 per cent of the population.

Already the weeding-out process is underway. The price of a new home has almost doubled since 1972, and in some areas prices have shot up even faster. When a typical couple decides to venture into the housing market, they often find price tags averaging [illegible]. So let's say the couple has managed to save $15,000 for a down payment, which is a feat in itself, and thus needs a [illegible] loan. If mortgage money is available, and there is no guarantee of that, the man and his wife might be quoted an interest rate above [illegible] per cent. That means the couple will face monthly payments exceeding $700. If the entire loan is paid off over [illegible] years, the actual cost of the mortgage will be over a quarter of a million dollars. They don't call a man's home his castle for nothing.

What's gone wrong? Many people look at the high interest rates and cite them as the last culprit of runaway housing costs. The problem with that explanation is it puts the cart before the horse. Interest rates represent the price you must pay to borrow money, and neither prices, nor, for that matter, wages and profits, cause inflation any more than wet streets cause rain. Inflation results, quite simply, from a decline in the value of the currency produced by the government.

During the past 15 years, the federal government has been printing and spending money at a far more rapid rate — as much as three times faster — than our underlying economy could produce new goods and services. Those in Washington will go to almost any length to deny this is true, but the American people, who must cope with the real world, know better. That is why they have been rushing to invest their paper money in fixed assets like homes that can appreciate rather than decline in value.

Added to these underlying inflationary pressures have been special problems within the housing market itself that have exacerbated the price spiral. For example, the near explosion in the demand for new homes has been accompanied by severe constraints on the ability of builders to supply them. Land now costs 25 per cent of the base price of housing — up from about 10 per cent earlier — because of various development restrictions such as excessive zoning requirements. Also, the government has squeezed the supply of timber and driven up its price by restricting harvesting on huge areas of public lands.

Federal, state and local regulations also increase the cost of housing. Housing experts feel that 20 per cent of the current cost of housing can be traced to excessive or antiquated government regulations. In North Carolina, approximately $6,000 has been added to the cost of a new home just from regulations since 1970. One builder in the Midwest noted that no less than six different inspectors had to approve a house before it could be occupied. The longer they take, the more you pay.

What to do? One popular idea is to establish a graduated mortgage with scheduled monthly payments starting at a lower level than a standard fixed-payment, and which then gradually increase to a pre-determined level. This is an interesting idea, but we should understand that it treats only the symptoms, not the causes of the disease. Another proposal would extend credit allocation to the housing market alone. There are two fundamental defects with credit allocations: When this basically protectionist strategy fails, as it has in the past, housing is left with no financing. Also, the cost of this special allocation will be increased interest rates to the rest of the economy. In other words, the consumer will end up paying the same bill in a different form. To keep the price of new homes within reach of the average American family we must do three things and do them fast: First, resolve to fight inflation, and I mean really fight it by insisting politicians either stop their wild spending or be voted out of office; second, develop common sense performance-oriented building codes and development regulations, and third, free-up some of the vast forest areas now locked up.

If we don't take these measures, only kings and shieks will be wealthy enough to buy our homes.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

LITTLE SEALS CUT BIG FUEL BILLS

When insulating your home don't forget to weatherstrip the doors and windows. Weather-stripping is the number one item on the "Big Ten Checklist To Save More Energy In Your Home" prepared by the National Institute of Building Science.

Few homeowners have had access to professional weatherstripping. But Schlegel Corporation, which makes most such weatherstripping, now has low-cost kits for homeowners.

Make Storm Windows

Storm windows for unprotected openings can be made with the Storm Window Kit. White plastic molding holds cut-to-size plastic or glass.

A drafty door can be sealed with the Door Sealing Kit. Polyflex brand plastic strips mount in seconds around the perimeter of the door, held in place with self-adhering backs. The bottom is sealed with an easy-attaching door sweep. The corners are sealed with two self-adhering corner plugs.

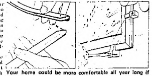
The Hinged Window Kit has 18 feet of self-adhering plastic strip that will seal one average window.

Your storm window's pile seals may have shrunk by now and become useless. Replace them with the Storm Window Kit.

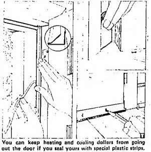
Easy To Do Yourself

The weatherstripping kits have one thing in common: they go up easily. They cut with scissors and self-adhere.

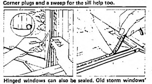
For homeowners getting started in weatherstripping and insulation for their homes, helpful literature is available free by writing to Weatherstripping, Schlegel Corporation, 400 East Ave., Rochester, NY 14692.



Your home could be more comfortable all year long if you see your way clear to installing storm windows. Kits can help you make them yourself.



You can keep heating and cooling dollars from going out the door if you seal yours with special plastic strips. Corner plugs and a sweep for the sill help too.



Hinged windows can also be sealed. Old storm windows' worn pile can be replaced.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Placek of Silverton visited Wednesday evening at the Jerrold Nelson home.

Clifford Barth of Breckenridge came up for deer hunting and was a weekend guest at the home of his parents, the Ray Barths.

Charles Anderson of Crookston and Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson and family were dinner guests Sunday at the Edwin Anderson home.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Trochmann on the birth of a baby boy, born Thursday, November 1, at Northwestern hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Norris Trochmann are the proud grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Nelson were afternoon visitors Sunday at the Seymore Nelson home. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nelson, Kevin and Chris of Thief River Falls visited there Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. David Barth and Andy of Thief River Falls were supper guests at the Ray Barth home Sunday.

Werner Nelson of Marshall arrived Monday and was a house guest at the Leslie Nelson home while visiting with other relatives in the area.

Sympathy is extended to the family of Harry Sampson, who passed away Wednesday, October 31 at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. Funeral services were held Monday at 10 a.m. at the Silver Creek church and interment was in the church cemetery.

Sunday dinner guests at the Amanda Torgerson home were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Torgerson, Sonja and Anita of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. David Rodahl and Mandy and Mrs. Jarvis Torgerson, Debbie and Lisa.

Mrs. Roy Nelson of Mavie was a visitor at the Solberg home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Knute Knutson were afternoon visitors Sunday at the Otto and Bernice Knutson home.

Mrs. Phillip Torgerson, Sonja and Anita of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Larry Gustafson, Stacey, Susan and Tony, Margaret Pederson, Amanda Torgerson, Mrs. Jarvis Torgerson, Debbie and Lisa, Amy Jo and Stacey Commings were visitors at the Don Jorde home of rural Thief River Falls Sunday afternoon.

Miss Thora Skomedal visited at the Amanda Torgerson home one day during the week.

Mark Trochmann of Thief River Falls spent Wednesday and Thursday at the home of his grandparents, the Lowell Trochmann's.

Werner Nelson of Marshall was a Tuesday forenoon caller at the Seymore Nelson home.

Mrs. Clarence Peterson of Silverton and Mrs. Otto Rupprecht accompanied Mrs. Donald Rupprecht to Grand Forks Tuesday where they spent the day.

Larry Pruden and a friend from St. Paul arrived Tuesday evening and were house guests at the Leslie Nelson home while deer hunting. Mrs. Jean Nelson returned home with them Thursday and will visit at the Glen Dahlquist and Pruden homes until Thanksgiving.

Misses Jackie, Julie and Jayne Schwartz were weekend guests at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Jean Nelson in Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Trochmann and Laurie enjoyed dinner together with Lowell Trochmann and son Mark in Thief River Falls Sunday. Faith and Larry Seth Myhrer also spent the afternoon there while their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Myhrer attended the Clifford (Kife) Olson funeral services held at the St. John Lutheran church in Thief River Falls.

Rhonda and Peggy Landreville were weekend guests at the David Panek home in Thief River Falls.

Werner Nelson of Marshall and Mrs. Jean Nelson were Wednesday forenoon callers at the Ray Knutson home in Thief River Falls. In the afternoon they visited at the Herman Witt home of rural Red Lake Falls.

Mrs. Jerrold Nelson was an afternoon visitor Sunday at the Glen Jorde home of rural Thief River Falls.

Smithsonian Has Near Perfect Clock

by William Waller
Smithsonian News Service

Scientiests at the Smithsonian Institution have built something that rivals the better mousetrap: a clock that keeps virtually perfect time.

Although it doesn't look at all like an ordinary timepiece, the clock is the most stable chronometer ever made — a hydrogen "maser" clock which gains or loses only a single second every 50 million years. And recent tests demonstrate that even higher precision is possible.

Why would anyone bother with such nit-picking precision? After all, no manufacturer would ever want — or need — to make hydrogen maser alarm clocks for sleepy consumers. (For one thing, the clocks have no hands and you can't really tell time with them.) In fact, the only place where these clocks are made regularly is the Harvard-Smithsonian center for astrophysics, a joint venture of the Smithsonian Institution and Harvard university in Cambridge, Mass., which is devoted to basic research in astronomy and physics.

But demand does exist. These ultimate timepieces already are being used for extremely precise navigation in space as well as for revolutionary research in radio astronomy and gravitational physics.

Split-second timing of hydrogen maser clocks currently is used for the pricise tracking of spacecraft in deep space and will soon be of great benefit to navigators on earth. For example, using a standard chronometer and sextant, a ship's navigator can only reckon the position of his vessel to within slightly more than half a mile. Radar techniques can reduce this error to about 30 feet. Hydrogen maser clocks installed in navigational satellites will reduce that error to the point where a navigator could even determine the position of his foot to within a foot.

Since the maser clocks will be in earth orbit, they could provide round-the world coverage for any ship — or any scientific endeavor — requiring precise timekeeping. Two maser clocks are now undergoing tests for the international "Global Positioning System" of navigational satellites. If everything goes according to schedule, such satellites will be in operation by the mid-1980's.

In radio astronomy, maser clocks are making it possible to measure the miniscule time differences in the reception of radio waves from distant celestial objects, as detected by two or more radio telescopes. When the time lag is accounted for, the different radio antennae — which may be separated by thousands of miles — can be used as a single giant receiver so that high precision maps, pinpointing objects that emit radio signals, can be made.

Perhaps the most exciting application for hydrogen maser clocks is in the field of experimental gravitation, the study of nature's weakest, yet most pervasive sorce.

On June 18, 1976, an early version of the maser clock, prepared by a team of scientists and engineers headed by physicist Robert Vessot at the center for astrophysics, was placed in a NASA rocket and launched 6,200 miles into space. Because Einstein's theory of general relativity predicts that gravity slows down the passage of time, the rocket-borne clock should have run faster than a duplicate clock watched on the ground. Smithsonian scientists found that this, in fact, occurred, confirming Einstein's theory.

Studies are now underway on a program to shoot a maser clock toward the sun in an attempt to probe its powerful gravitational field. As the space probe freely falls into the sun, both the motion of the probe and the gravitational forces which it encounters will affect the time signals beamed back to earth. By analyzing these changing signals, scientiests hope to understand more fully the gravitational forces at work within the sun — forces that ultimately determine the sun's energy output.

Other experements using maser clocks have been porposed, including the possible detection of the gravity waves believed to be rippling through the space from the ancient explosions of forgotten stars. Clocks might even detect gravitational reverberations resulting from the original "big bang," the cataclysmic event that many astronomers think marked the beginning of the universe.

According to Vessot, a maser clock is essentially no more than a specially prepared bottle which is constantly replenished with hydrogen gas. Each hydrogen atom in the gas has a single, rapidly spinning proton with a similarly spinning electron in orbit around it. Two charged particles act like tiny individual magnets, whose electromagnetic interactions can be made to release energy at very specific frequencies.

Spinning proton interacts with its spinning — and somersaulting — partner to produce a radio signal at a certain frequency, precisely 1420 megacycles: Once a few atoms in the bottle are set to oscillating in this manner, all the other atoms follow suit, oscillating and radiating in step like a miniature version of a chorus line. It is this synchronization, or "masing action," which gives the hydrogen clock its extraordinary stability.

By cooling the gas to phenomenally low temperatures, 400 drgrees below zero Fahrenheit, the atoms can be made to stay in step about 10 times longer than at room temperature. Steady radio-signal emitted by the super-cooled hydrogen thus provides a time standard more stable than any other man-made devices.

"Our maser signal has a short-term stability equivalent to losing only 1 second every 50 million years," Vessot said. "And, with super-cooling, it has the potential of losing the equivalent of only one second every 300 million years."

With the further development of such hydrogen maser clocks, revealing many scientific mysteries may just be a matter of time.

ENTERTAINING IDEAS

BRAVOS FOR BRUNCH!

Have you started brunching yet? Served anytime from mid-morning to mid-afternoon, brunch is a wonderful—and economical—way of weekend entertaining. These Belgian waffles make an ideal offering. The recipes come from Pat Jester's new Brunch Cookery, an exciting collection of brunch menus and ideas.

BASIC BELGIAN WAFFLES

Bake these extra-thick and crisp waffles on a special Belgian waffle iron.

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tsp. salt
8 eggs, separated
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
1 tsp. vanilla extract
2 cups milk

In a small bowl, mix flour and salt; set aside. In a large bowl, beat egg whites with electric mixer on high speed until stiff peaks form. In another bowl, beat yolks until thickened and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes. Stir in melted butter or margarine and vanilla. Alternately add flour mixture and milk to yolk mixture, beating well after each addition. Fold egg whites into yolk mixture. Prepare Belgian waffle iron according to manufacturer's directions. Using 1-1/4 cups batter for each waffle, bake on preheated waffle iron 30 to 60 seconds. Turn waffle iron; continue baking 2 to 3 minutes or until steaming stops and waffle is golden brown. Makes 6 waffles.

ORANGE SUNSHINE WAFFLES

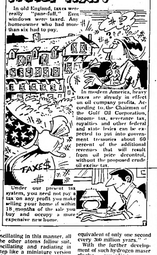
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup cornstarch
1-3/4 cups orange juice
1/4 cup maple-flavored syrup
4 oranges, peeled, sectioned
1 (4-oz.) carton frozen whipped topping, thawed
1 (8-oz.) carton plain yogurt
1/4 cup maple-flavored syrup
Basic Belgian Waffles
Toasted slivered almonds

In a medium saucepan, mix sugar and cornstarch. Stir in orange juice and 1/4 cup maple syrup. Stir constantly over medium-high heat until mixture thickens and bubbles. Stir in orange sections. Cool only until warm. In a small bowl, beat whipped topping, yogurt and 1/4 cup maple syrup until fluffy. Chill until serving time. Prepare Basic Belgian Waffles. Serve waffles topped with whipped topping mixture and warm orange sauce. Garnish with toasted, slivered almonds. Makes 10 servings.

Published by the same company that produced Crockery Cookery and Crepe Cookery, Ms. Jester's book is fast becoming a bestseller. Look for the new Brunch Cookery in local bookstores, department stores, gourmet shops, and grocery stores. The price is $5.95. Further information is available from HPBooks, Box 5367, Dept. NP-A9, Tucson, Arizona 85703.

Orange sunshine waffles will win wows from brunch guests. Try some soon!

FANCY THAT!



In old England, taxes were really "pane-full." Even windows were taxed. Any homeowner who had more than six had to pay.

In modern America, heavy taxes are already in effect on oil company profits. According to the Chairman of the Gulf Oil Corporation, income tax, severance tax, royalties and other federal and state levies can be expected to put into government treasuries about 60 percent of the additional revenues that will result from oil price decontrol, without the proposed crude oil excise tax.

Under our present tax system, you need not pay a tax on any profit you make selling your home if within 18 months of the sale you buy and occupy a more expensive new home.

Birthdays

The birthday anniversary of Mrs. Don Dyrdal November 8 and Mrs. Martin Solseng, November 12, were observed at a social gathering at the Dyrdal home Saturday evening, November 10. Hosting the event were Kathy Dyrdal and Shelly Solseng. Present besides the guests of honor and the hostesses were Martin Solseng, Mrs. Esther Solseng, Don Dyrdal, Greg, Kristy and John, Mrs. Edith Dyrdal, Mr. and Mrs. Daryl Lewis and Todd and Alvin Lietzow. Kathy and Shelly each furnished decorated cakes, which were served with ice cream and a pot luck luncheon.

Friday evening coffee guests at the Roger Dyrdal home following an adult education meeting were Pastor and Mrs. Dave Gabrielsen, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Moe, Ethel Moe, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Steinert, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Waswick and Mrs. Daryl Lewis.

Jack Hoglo and Chris of East Grand Forks, Bob Hoglo, Joe and David of St. Hilaire, Gary Hoglo and Ray Dargon and sons were Saturday morning coffee guests of Mrs. Marion Hoglo. They were all hunting deer earlier. Jill Olson of Rocksbury also spent Saturday and overnight with her grandmother Mrs. Marvin Olson and Kelli called for her Sunday and were dinner guests of Mrs. Hoglo.

Mrs. Palma Brotten, Nelder Brotten, Clayton and Kent of Viking were Thursday afternoon callers at the Frank Armstrong home. Mrs. Brotten was a coffee guest of Alma Armstrong while the others visited at the Axel Stark home in Sanders.

Bringing birthday anniversary greetings to Lloyd VeVea in Thief River Falls Sunday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Dake Ayers, Randy, Robby, Diane, Denise and Darla and Mrs. Enid Sande. Afternoon coffee and supper guests for the occasion were his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff VeVea of Crookston also Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Sande of Grand Forks.

Mrs. Duane Olson stopped with greetings Monday forenoon.

Alvin Lietzow was a Monday forenoon coffee guest at the Daryl Lewis home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Armstrong were Sunday dinner guests at the Paul Magsam home in Euclid.

Silver Creek ALCW put on a program at the evening meeting of Oak Ridge ALCW November 8. The event was well attended.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

Are asbestos pads under a stove dangerous?

Lillian

Dear Lillian:

No, used in this manner, asbestos is not dangerous. Asbestos is a potential health hazard when airborne particles are inhaled and become lodged in the lungs or the lining of the chest cavity. Asbestos used in building materials, such as pads under your stove, is "bound" by another substance. Unless you are cutting or otherwise handling this type of asbestos, particles cannot escape into the air.

If you have further questions, you can call the Consumer Product Safety Commission at 1-800-8326.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I recently heard a report about using untrasound to detect breast cancer. Is this better and safer than mammography? How does it work?

F.

Dear F.:

Ultrasound scanning, a painless, noninvasive method of detecting breast abnormalities, is still under investigation. In one of the methods now being studied, a patient undergoing breast scanning lies face-down on a special table with her breasts suspended in a water-filled chamber. High-frequency sound waves are projected into the breasts, and the pattern of echoes from the sound waves is converted by computer into an image of the interior of each breast.

Although this method has proved useful in identifying and locating cysts in women with fibrocystic breast disease, more evaluation and refinement of equipment is needed before ultrasound can be used routinely to detect breast cancer.

Mammography, an x-ray of the breast, is currently the most reliable mechanical method for detecting a breast cancer too small to be felt in a manual breast exam. Although there has been some concern over the possible cancer hazard posed by repeated mammographic exams, the benefit outweighs any potential risk for annual screening of women over the age of 50 or for diagnosing women having breast symptoms at any age.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I have a question regarding the "tolerable levels" of certain brands of cigarettes. Does this mean that I don't have to worry about getting lung cancer if I smoke the safe amount of one of these brands?

T.E.

Dear T.E.:

There are several brands of cigarettes on the market that contain comparatively low levels of tar and nicotine, but individual smokers react differently to these substances. What may be a "tolerable level" of tar and nicotine for one smoker may be a hazardous level for another.

Smoking any cigarettes, in any quantity, is a potential risk to one's health. In addition to tar and nicotine, cigarette smoke contains toxic gases, such as hydrogen cyanide, volantile aromatic hydrocarbons, and carbon monoxide.

Carbon monoxide, in particular, has been linked to some of the diseases associated with smoking. Excess carbon monoxide in the blood of pregnant women who smoke causes a slower than normal rate of fetal development.

"Low" tar and nicotine cigarettes may carry less risk than those with higher levels of tar and nicotine, but the only truly safe amount of these substances is none at all.

Dear Cancer Answers:

What about the risk of radiation exposure from ionization smoke detectors?

Alice

Dear Alice:

According to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, if you held an ionization smoke detector close to you for eight hours a day through a whole year, you would receive only a tenth as much radiation as you'd get on one round-trip airline flight across the United States.

The amount of radioactive material contained in an ionization chamber smoke detector is so small that there is no distinguishable health risk, if the detector is used according to manufacturer's directions.

QUICK-MIXING IDEAS CAN SPEED HOLIDAY COOKING

Thanksgiving Day dinner takes many long hours to prepare and mere minutes to gobble up! How can you spend less time preparing the holiday dinner and serve leftovers that are as good to gobble as the first time around? Gold Medal® Wondra® flour makes it easier!

Quick-mixing Wondra can begin by getting your turkey gravy and vegetable sauces quickly to the table while everything else is still piping hot. You can do this easily because Wondra pours like salt—especially in the convenient Pour 'n Shake® canister—and it mixes instantly in cold liquids.

And no more worry about dull leftovers once Thanksgiving dinner is over. Instead of serving the same meal over and over again, use your imagination with Wondra to create a different main dish for every meal. Try using Wondra for sauces and pastries to make casseroles, meat pies, crepes, sandwiches, popovers and more. You'll find that it blends better and is easier to handle than regular all-purpose flour.

Discover the delicious ways to use Wondra in your everyday cooking in the "Cooking with the Greatest of Ease" booklet. Free copies of the Wondra recipe booklet are available by writing: General Mills, Inc., P.O. Box 6, Dept. 940, Minneapolis, MN 55460.

SWISS TURKEY PIE

Pastry (below)
1 1/2 cups cut-up cooked turkey
1 cup shredded natural Swiss cheese (about 4 ounces)
1/3 cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons Gold Medal Wondra flour
4 eggs
2 cups whipping cream
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon sugar
1/8 teaspoon dried thyme leaves

Heat oven to 425°. Prepare Pastry. Mix turkey, cheese, onion and flour; sprinkle in pastry-lined pie plate. Beat remaining ingredients with hand beater; pour over turkey mixture. Bake 15 minutes.

Reduce oven temperature to 300°. Bake until knife inserted 2 inches from edge comes out clean, about 30 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting. 6 servings.

Pastry

1 cup Gold Medal Wondra flour
1 tablespoon toasted sesame seed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup plus 1 tablespoon shortening
2 to 3 tablespoons water

Beat flour, sesame seed, salt and shortening in large mixer bowl on low speed, scraping bowl constantly, 1 minute. Beat in water, scraping bowl constantly, until all flour is moistened and pastry begins to gather into beaters, about 1 minute. Gather pastry into ball; shape into flattened round on lightly floured cloth-covered board. Roll 1 1/2 inches larger than inverted pie plate, 9 x 1 1/4 inches, with stockinet-covered rolling pin. Ease into plate; trim pastry and flute.

Clinicians Outnumber Physicians

There are many reasons why there are more clinicians than physicians in academic medicine, but the two that present themselves often are the facts that clinical medicine is thought to be more socially acceptable and more financially rewarding.

Thomas W. Burns, MD, division of endocrinology and metabolism, University of Missouri school of medicine, Columbia, tries to explain in the September 1979 issue of the "Animals of Internal Medicine", an official publication of the American college of physicians, why the continued popularity of academic medicine is important to patient care in this country. He notes that there are not many subspecialists being trained for academic medicine, to teach subspecialists of the future.

Over the years, physicians' income from patient care has increased to where he greatly exceeds the income a physician may get from research and development.

Data collected for studies by the national institutes of health (NIH) in 1977 and 1978, showed a rise in projected figures of manpower needs for physician trainees. Committees reported that 2,800 slots would be recommended for funding (1977). Of that amount, only 2,450 were funded and 660 of these positions went unfilled for lack of applicants. This meant only 1,790 MD investigators supported by NIH training stipends, compared with 4,600 as recently as 1971.

At the same time, American medical association files showed, according to Dr. Burns, that the number of physicians who report research as their primary activity was 15,400 in 1968 and 7,900 in 1975.

All of the studies and all of the quoted figures still do not have the answer to the question. Income from patient care is greater than the stipends — and the grants have "payback provisions", requiring those who receive a stipend and do not stay with the research area to pay back the money. Future researchers need encouragement. One suggestion, brought out by James Wyngaarden, MD, FACP, professor of medicine at Duke University, is for the American board of internal medicine (ABIM) to develop a set of training policies especially suited for a clinical investigator.

As Dr. Wyngaarden points out, "What if essentially all biomedical research were to be done by the PhD investigator, while the MD provided patient care and concomitantly taught the housestaff and the medical students?. . .Would the PhD investigators, their elegant methodologies notwithstanding, be able to consistently ask the relevant questions and adequately test out the answers without close contact with their clinically trained colleagues?"

American college of physicians is a national professional organization of over 41,000 members who are internists or in other related specialties. One of the prime activities of Philadelphia-based American college of physicians is the continuing medical education of practicing physicians. In addition to presenting postgraduate courses, the 40,000-member ACP also sponsors nearly 40 regional meetings, a four-day national scientific session, and publishes the monthly "Annals of Internal Medicine" and "Forum on Medicine".

Federal Review System Checks School Lunches

School lunch and breakfast programs will be the subjects of a proposed federal-state review system designed to correct problems with accountability of federal money and quality of meals.

According to assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman, audits and reviews of food programs in recent years have revealed weaknesses in state and local management.

"In looking at the programs, we found that some schools do not have adequate systems for reviewing applications for free lunches and claim federal funds for an excessive number of free meals. They are also sometimes serving meals that do not meet Federal nutrition standards. This new review system will improve meal quality as well as accountability of Federal money," she said.

While states currently review the operation of school food programs, the new review system proposes that states be required to review a specified number of schools every year and correct problems uncovered in those reviews within 90 to 180 days.

"This problem of claims for excessive numbers of free meals is fully within control of the schools," Assistant Secretary Foreman said. "The problem is not that parents are submitting false information but that schools are not meticulous enough in approving applications for free and reduced price meals and filing claims for federal reimbursements."

Federal government provides 3 billion dollars a year to provide meals for over 27 million children in schools. Schools and states file claims for federal money based on the number of meals they serve. In turn, they must serve meals that meet federal nutrition standards.

Thirty-three departmental audits of state agencies over fiscal years 1975-78 also showed that 45 per cent had problems with accurage meals countes. In addition, in 12 of these audits there were instances of reimbursements exceeding allowable costs.

Proposed review systems sets specific minimum requirements for schools in processing applications for free and reduced price meals, filing reimbursements for meals and other costs, keeping counts of the types of meals served, and ensuring that meals meet federal nutrition standards.

Public is invited to comment on the proposed review system. Proposal was published in the Federal Register, October 30. Department will have nationwide public meetings on the proposal in November and early December. People interested in getting a copy of the proposal or attending the Midwest regional public meetings in Chicago November 28 and 29 at the Best Western — Lakeshore Hotel, 600 North Lake Shore Drive should contact: School Food Program Section, Food and Nutrition Service, Midwest Regional Office, 536 S. Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

Art Archives Major Smithsonian Area

by David M Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

American families trying to track down their ancestral roots know the frustration of vital records scattered across the country in county courthouses or obscure government offices, stashed in the attics of distant relatives, or worse, inadvertently destroyed.

Art historians and biographers, many of them burdened also by limited research funds, used to share similar frustrations. But today it's easy for the scholar or simply the curious art lover to locate millions of valuable documents in one stop, at the Smithsonian Institution's archives of American art based in Washington, D.C.

Here can be found a letter from London written in 1783 by one of the era's notable portrait painters, Benjamin West, an American expatriate. In a cheerful tone that now seems odd — West had become George III's court painter and a member of his inner circle — the artist offered congratulations to his former pupil, Charles Willson Peale, "and my countrymen in general, on the event of Peace and fortitude they have shown during the unhapy war."

West continued, "You have given me great delight in saying you would by the next opportunity, send me a whole portrait of that greatest of all characters, George Washington."

"When we see this nearly two hundred year old letter — the frayed paper, the firm hand, the quaint spelling, the elegant expression," says Garnett McCoy, deputy director of the Archives, "both West and the 18th century take on a reality not found in books about the period."

Over the past 25 years, the archives has collected and codified seven million irreplaceable documents and photographs gathered from the nation's artists, museums, dealers and galleries. Deeded or temporarily loaned to the archives, these papers are available on microfilm not only in Washington, but in other regional centers — Detroit, Boston, New York and San Francisco.

This collection of personal diaries, correspondence, sketchbooks and business papers, spanning nearly three centuries, forms the building blocks of art history.

Among the letters in the archives' files is a blunt note by Winslow Homer about his painting "The Gulf Stream" (1899). "I regret very much that I have painted a picture that requires any description," Homer complained to one art dealer. "The subject of the picture is comprised in the title. I have crossed the Gulf Stream ten times and I should know everything about it."

Still later, in 1913, during the New York Armory show, which was to alter the American art world by introducing modern European painting and sculpture to this country, Walt Kuhn, one of the organizers, wrote a friend: "You haven't any idea how this confounded thing has developed. Every afternoon Lexington avenue and the side streets are jammed with private automobiles, old fashioned horse equipages and taxi cabs. New York Globe described the crush on the outside as resembling opening night at the opera with a uniformed attendant using a megaphone to call the chauffered automobiles."

Though strongest in its 20th century records, the Archives is concerned about the decline in the quality of correspondence in recent years. Communications now are largely by phone, curator Arthur Breton notes, and "we're getting material with less information than in the past. You just can't compare today's letters to the level and style of the 19th and early 20th century writing."

Three or four times a year, an Archives truck travels to the regional centers, bringing to Washington 200 or so cartons of newly-acquired material. Besides correspondence, there are old invitations, invoices for supplies, catalogs, cancelled checks and mountains of press clippings — useful clues to the past.

(Found among the sculptor Joseph Cornell's papers were a number of things he may have intended for one of his creations: Ping Pong balls, clay pipes, cheap marbles, wine glasses and a bird's nest.

Acquiring all this is an art in itself. "Persistence is probably the most important quality needed in this work," says Julie Haifley, area collector for the Washington office. "A sense of timing is also important." Sometimes, an artist's heir, usually a widow, will offer all the papers the archives would like, but others need gentle prodding as well as help in sorting and boxing the material. "One told me later she could never have done this by herself," Haifley remembers.

Luck also seems to play a rather large role in the acquisition work. McCoy recalls that, shortly after painter Rockwell Kent made arrangements to donate his files to the Archives, a fire devasted his New York home. "We wish the whole house with its now irreplaceable contents had been sent to the archives," Kent later said.

And then there are the surprises. Called to Vermont after the death of Robert G. McIntyre, the last owner of the influential New York City Macbeth gallery, McCoy and other archives representatives found "great mounds of exhibition and auction catalogs, stacks of photograph albums, all scattered through the premises in a state of wild confusion. One inconspicuous little bundle sitting on a table turned out to include 12 Winslow Homer letters."

But sometimes what turns up is a negative surprise — for example, the papers of a prominent artist and social activist during the 1930s that reflect none of his creative work — but only the type of business correspondence that every artist sends and receives.

On the other hand, there are the papers of the obscure artists, those who have kept detailed dairies and carried on rich correspondence with more prominent figures of their day. Papers of Charles Green Shaw, a relatively unknown abstract painter of the 1920s and '30s, contain such valuables as letters from Cole Porter and H.L. Mencken, notes from Anita Loos and F. Scott Fitzgerald and a small, white card from Lillian Gish with the simple message, "I miss you at Christmas."

Isn't it time to give a tax break to savers?

On the average, the British save 13% of their disposable income. The West Germans save 15%. The Japanese, 25%. But Americans save only 6.5%. This is a disturbing fact, especially when you consider that much of the money needed for Now ~~5.2%~~! 4.5%!

America can't afford to wait much longer.

Over the past few months, you've probably seen the above message in which we urge a tax break for savers. Since this message was published, it has been determined that Americans no longer save an average of 6.5% of their disposable income. Most recent figures for this year show that Americans are saving only 4.5%!

There is a reason why Americans are not saving. INFLATION! The prevailing attitude is "Buy now before prices go higher." But the less Americans save, the more dangerous inflation will become.

To help prevent inflation from getting completely out of hand and to provide needed capital for economic growth, Americans should be given a significant tax break on the interest they earn on savings accounts.

It is time to give a tax break to savers. America can't afford to wait much longer.

Lawn Studies May Aid Understanding Of Ecology System

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

"I believe a leaf of grass is no less than the journey-work of the stars," poet Walt Whitman once wrote. One can only guess what Whitman would say today about the 30 million acres of lawn that abound in every American city, suburb and rural community.

But whether you regard grass and its care as pure and simple drudgery or as a spiritual experience, you probably spend a lot of time and energy making your grass look as green as your neighbor's. And although you may not realize it, you could just as easily raise a crop or two of corn with the amount of energy you devote to your lawn.

That is one of the surprising fundings from a study on lawns by Dr. John Falk an ecologist at the Smithsonian Institution's Chesapeake Bay center for environmental studies in Edgewater, Md. Fald regards a lawn as neither a chore nor a spiritual experience. To him, a lawn is actually a simple econological system in which the interactions of man, animals and plants can be measured in direct and fairly meaningful ways.

"As an ecologist, I'm interested in what impact man has on his environment, so it seemed logical for me to choose a simple system to study," he says. "Lawns have all the ingredients of an ecosystem and they can be found in virtually identical form anywhere in the United States."

Despite the abundance of lawns, their ecology is completely unexplored, Falk explains. So his front yard became a living laboratory. Goal of his work was to understand the ecological dynamics of a lawn by determining the flow of energy through and into it.

Like a typical suburbanite, Falk regularly mowed, watered, fertilized, tended and observed his 1,000 square foot lawn over the course of a year. Unlike a typical homeowner, however, he recorded every detail, not matter how trivial.

He collected all grass clippings, weighed them and extracted samples randomly for further study. He captured insects off the lawn five times a week and identified the number and kinds. From his dining room window, he observed birds and other animals on the lawn twice a month, from 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes after sunset. Nearly everything that happened on that lawn was recorded — even the amount of time it took to move the water sprinkler.

At the end of a year, Falk had collected an immense amount of information and some interesting conclusions began to emerge. First surprise was the tremendous diversity of lawns.

"Most people think of lawns as just being grass — a two-dimensional swatch of plant material," Falk says. "But the average lawn contains 30 to 50 different kinds of grasses and weeds, snails, spider mites, spiders, earthworms and over 100 species of insects."

This large population of insects and other assorted creatures in turn supports a diversity of birds, he explains. "In fact, birds utilize the lawn at a level 20 to 40 times higher than that recorded for natural grasslands. The reason may be that lawns are basically islands of food resources in a sea of concrete."

A second surprise was that lawns form one of the most productive terrestrial plant communities in the world. "Everyone knows that grass grows fast," Falk says, "but would you predict that your front lawn is probably producing more new plant material in a year than tall grass prairies or a coniferous forest of comparable area? Well, it is."

A third conclusion was confirmation of Falk's personal observation that people expend tremendous amounts of energy on their lawns. To make comparisons, he converted his data into a common unit of energy, the kilocalorie. (A biologist's kilocalorie and a nutritionist's calorie are the same. By this definition, a diet soda contains one kilocalorie.)

His calculations showed that over the course of a year, he spent 173 kilocalories per square foot on his lawn. In contrast, only 66 kilocalories per square foot per growing season are required to raise a crop of corn. Tobacco, a more labor intensive crop, requires 84 kilocaloeries. Growing a vegetable garden of comparable size would require about half the energy of caring for a lawn.

Does this mean that, with the rising price of food, we might see people turning their lawns into vegetable gardens? Falk doubts it.

"From my observations, lawns are firmly entrenched in the human psyche," he says. He even has a theory that might explain our love affair with grass.

"A typical suburban lawn is not just grass," he explains, "but a smoothly rolling contour with scattered trees and few well-placed bushes. It's a lot like a savanna. Many anthropologists place the origins of man in the short grass savannas of East Africa one to three million years ago, and the majority of man's development has occurred in this habitat. Could we be striving to create neosavannas in our own parks and front yards?"

To gain evidence for this theory, Falk is carrying out a number of studies of people's preferences for natural landscapes. In the meantime, his fascination with lawns as ecological models is continuing. Most recently, he completed a study on the effects of mowing on two major insect populations in lawns — Leaf hoppers and frit flies (as distinct from fruit flies). Not only were these populations not adversely affected by mowing, but frit flies actually moved off unmowed lawns onto new mowed lawns, presumably to take advantage of the juicy, newly-mown grass.

And he's just begun a three-year study for the U.S. department of agriculture that will investigate different lawn management strategies, including their costs. Findings from these studies may ultimately be useful to the large U.S. turf industry in making pest control practices more environmentally sound. But for now, the studies are furthering our ecological understanding of man-managed biological systems.

Hints for the Holidays

GIVE A FESTIVE DIET SUPPER

With Holidays approaching and rich foods abounding, plan a light supper get-together. Partytime Striped Bass, baked with parsley, lemon, tomatoes, onion and Montclair Sparkling Natural Mineral Water, Canada's number one brand, is a real taste-tantalizer. For a bubbling good time, serve Tomato Punch Montclair, a tasty diet delight.

PARTYTIME STRIPED BASS

1/2 cup fresh parsley, chopped
1 whole striped bass (about 3 pounds), dressed
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
3 fresh tomatoes, sliced
2 onions, thinly sliced
1 cup Montclair Sparkling Natural Mineral Water
1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup white wine
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Sprinkle parsley on bottom of greased baking pan. Lay the fish on the parsley; sprinkle with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Arrange tomato and onion slices on top of fish. Combine Montclair, olive oil, wine, oregano and garlic powder; pour over fish. Bake at 350°F. for 1 hour, basting every 15 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

TOMATO PUNCH MONTCLAIR

1 can (14 ounces) tomato juice
1 teaspoon celery flakes
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 piece cinnamon stick
1/2 teaspoon superfine sugar
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
1 bottle Montclair Sparkling Natural Mineral Water
Ice cubes
Celery sticks, optional

In saucepan, combine tomato juice, celery flakes, Worcestershire, cinnamon, sugar and salt. Simmer 10 minutes. Strain and chill. To serve, in pitcher, combine tomato juice, Montclair, and ice cubes. Garnish each serving with celery. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

INFLATION-FIGHTING FOOD IDEAS

A Dish You Can Count On

Tasty, inexpensive, and easy-to-prepare, yet elegant enough for company, is this Monte Cristo Stir-Fry made with cooked ham and turkey or chicken (leftovers welcome), inexpensive and always appetizing cooked rice and a can of condensed cream of chicken soup.

Stir-frying requires only a few minutes of high heat and quick mixing in a small amount of butter, margarine or oil. The condensed soup helps make the meal easier to prepare, and the rice makes it easier to pay for, yet lends the dish a more aristocratic appearance.

Rice, white, brown or parboiled, is a versatile staple that absorbs the flavor of the foods with which it's served, making a tasty meal such as this one even more so.

MONTE CRISTO STIR-FRY

1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1 can (2-1/2 oz.) sliced mushrooms (drain; reserve liquid
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 can (10-3/4 oz.) condensed cream of chicken soup
1/3 cup milk
1-1/2 cups boned, cooked turkey or chicken (large pieces)
1 cup cubed cooked ham
2 tablespoons diced pimiento
2 tablespoons dry sherry, optional
3 cups hot cooked rice

Sauté peppers and mushrooms in butter until tender crisp. Stir in soup, milk, liquid from mushrooms, turkey, ham, and pimiento; heat thoroughly. Add sherry. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

MRS. ANTROBUS, played by Tracy Brown, in Thronton Wilder's play, "The Skin of our Teeth" presented at the Lincoln high school auditorium last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, covers her son, Henry's mouth (played by Jon Walker) before he reveals anymore about his real name, "Cain:" Daughter Gladys (Sue Rosetta) is astonished by her brother's actions.

1980 Member Drive Launched By Art Council

Looking forward to an exciting year with monthly cultural events, North country arts council (NCAC) is launching its 1980 membership drive this month. It is hoped that many of the arts supporters in the area can be reached personally, and if not, by the council's monthly newsletter and other media.

Latest event for the volunteer arts organization was the people's art festival, attended by hundreds at the Hobson union on the Bemidji State university campus. Plans are already being made for art in the park scheduled for next summer.

At a recent board meeting Nancy Erickson, president of NCAC, listed some of the artists and events coming the next year. They include art classes for adults and children, writers workshop, a number of professional musicians in concert and many shows by the eleven affiliate groups belonging to NCAC.

Goal of the NCAC is to provide art programs that are stimulating, unique and entertaining to area audiences and to the artists themselves. The Council is in constant touch with the school district and the Bemidji university to encourage and to coordinate art efforts in education and development. Reflecting the growth in North Country community, the board is working with the business community and various agencies to add to the quality of the area.

To meet the demands of an increased program and inflationary trends, the NCAC has made adjustments in the membership costs. Individual membership is $10. Business or organization dues will be $25, a NCAC arts developer $50, and a NCAC patron $100 or more.

Anyone interested in becoming part of the arts council as a member and supporter, please call mornings 751-8044, or write to the NCAC office, Box 128, Bemidji state university, Bemidji, MN 56601.

LYNELLE HANSON, the fortune teller in the production of "The Skin of Our Teeth", a production by Thornton Wilder performed last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday in the Lincoln high school auditorium, gives the audience a lesson on life as she looks into the future.

Grygla Plans Blood Pressure, Foot Clinic

Blood pressure and foot care clinic will be held on Friday, November 30, at the Grygla community center from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. for the Grygla residents of all ages.

Nurses from the Marshall-Kittson county nursing service will be taking the blood pressure and giving foot care. There will be a charge of $1 for each individual having his or her blood pressure checked and an additional charge of $1 for foot care.

State Offices Closed Friday

Offices of the Minnesota department of economic security will be closed the Friday after Thanksgiving, November 23, a holiday for state employees.

All job service, unemployment insurance, comprehensive employement and training act (CETA), division of vocational rehabilitation (DVR) and work incentive program (WIN) offices will be closed.

The Friday after Thanksgiving has been substituted for Columbus day as a holiday for state employees.

Aid Available For Emergency Fuel Assistance

Low income residents needing help paying their fuel bills or help weatherizing their homes may contact their local civil defense office for the names and telephone numbers of energy assistance programs operating in Minnesota today, according to division of emergency services director Gerald Kittridge, department of public safety.

"County civil defense offices are prepared to act as information centers to aid individuals looking for emergency fuel assistance," said Kittridge. "In addition to fuel assistance, energy conservation programs dealing with weatherization are also available."

According to Kittridge, the energy programs have been established to help those people who are being hurt the worst by rising fuel costs.

"In many cases priority will be given to elderly households, handicapped households or homes heated with fuel oil," said Kittridge. "Other programs are limited to people whose incomes meet federal guidelines. We encourage those individuals having serious problems paying their fuel bills or needing home weatherization to call and find out if they qualify for assistance."

Energy Crisis Assistance May Be Available

Northwest Community Action, Badger, announces that low income residents of Roseau, Kittson, Lake of the Woods and east Marshall counties may apply for assistance in paying for fuel bills. Only households with incomes at or below 125 per cent of the C.S.A. guidelines and heads of households who receive S.S.I. may be eligible for assistance.

Pamphlets are being sent out Tuesday to all area residents which will contain information where and when to sign up for assistance.

For more information call Northwest Community Action outreach aide Karen Skadsem, Newfolden, 222-3309 or Northwest Community Action, Badger, 528-3258.

Immunization Offered At Area Schools

Marshall-Kittson county nursing service will be offering four immunization clinics in the country. Vaccines for diphtheria, polio, pertussis, tetanus, measles, mumps and rubella will be available. This is an opportunity for parents to complete their child's immunizations.

Clinics will be held in the schools November 28 at the times listed below: Newfolden, 8:30-9:15 a.m.; Grygla, 10:30-10:45 a.m.; Gatzke, 11:15-11:45 a.m.; and Middle River, 1-1:30 p.m.

Preschool youngsters, school age and adults needing immunizations are welcome. Needed immunizations will be given at a reduced rate of $1 per dose. We will need a signed consent for every dose. The state requires consent forms to be signed in order for them to be valid.

No School On Thurs., Friday

All Thief River Falls public school students will be excused at the regular time on Wednesday. There will be no school on Thursday or Friday.

CPR Technique Saves Life Of Child Thursday

LUCKY BABY is Matthew Smith, three-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Smith, whose life was saved by application of cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) Thursday morning. While under observation at Northwestern hospital, he was visited by his mother (Marlene) and Mrs. Ted (Myrtle) Mills who provided the CPR assistance in the emergency.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Three-month-old Matthew Smith is alive today as a result of CPR techniques and circumstances which brought a 50-year registered nurse many hundreds of miles to administer them.

Mrs. Ted (Myrtle) Mills, a registered nurse and past house supervisor at Northwestern hospital prior to moving to Oregon nine years ago, is credited with coming to the assistance of Matthew and his mother along highway 32 just south of the city.

Mrs. Melvin Smith had left the parental Walter Bratland home at Strathcona Thursday morning enroute to Wheaton where the Smith family had moved last month. The Smiths are former Thief River Falls residents. With her were her four-year-old daughter Melanie and three-month-old son Matthew.

Mrs. Smith (Marlene) stopped in Thief River Falls to fill the car with gas and again just south of town to feed the baby who was fussing. After feeding the youngster she started south again and about a half mile past the Best Western inn noticed that the baby was turning blue.

She stopped the car, took the baby and got out in the middle of the highway where she attempted to burp it and apply mouth-to-mouth breathing. The first passer-by was Tippi Benson of Thief River Falls, a school district social worker, who rushed to a phone to call for an ambulance. The driver of a farm truck stopped next and assisted Mrs. Smith from the roadway and back to her car.

Next to stop were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Mills of Beaverton, Oregon, who were enroute to Thief River Falls to spend a couple of days visiting with friends here. Mrs. Mills had just resigned from a nursing position in Oregon, completing nine years of practice there and 50 years in the profession.

She applied chest massage to the youngster while Mrs. Smith continued with the mouth-to-mouth breathing.

"I could feel his heart start beating again," Mrs. Mills said when discussing the situation with the Times. "He was very blue when I got there. It's a good thing his mother got out of the car and on the highway where she would be noticed or people might have driven right on past. I'm sure we would have if we hadn't seen something was wrong."

Mrs. Smith said she got out of the car with the youngster in an attempt to attract assistance. When the child started breathing again, Mrs. Mills held him while Mrs. Smith drove her car to the hospital. They met the ambulance on the way but its services weren't needed. City police officer James Hulteen also arrived at the scene to offer assistance.

Dr. Duane Davidson, who attended the youngster upon arrival at the emergency unit of the hospital, credited the application of cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) with being instrumental in saving the child. Mrs. Mills added that extreme care had to be used because of the age of the baby.

Mrs. Smith said that the child had suffered pneumonia recently and that it had a previous history of breathing difficulty. That is likely why she noticed that the youngster had stopped breathing as quickly as she did. Through it all her four-year-old daughter stayed in the car and did not seem upset until the baby was in the hospital, Mrs. Smith added.

Melvin came up from Wheaton Friday, the child was released from the hospital Saturday and the family returned to Wheaton Sunday. Mrs. Smith spent part of Friday afternoon receiving CPR instruction at the hospital. "I didn't want to go out on the road again without knowing more about CPR," she told the Times on Friday.

Smith is employed by a vending machine service in the Wheaton area.

The Mills left Saturday after spending two days visiting at the Harvey Patten residence and with other friends in the community. Ted is a former instructor at the area vocational-technical institute here while his wife was employed as an RN at Northwestern hospital for 20 years. Thursday was the first time she used CPR training outside of the hospital setting.

Jaycee Family Week Observed Nov. 18 To 24

Thief River Falls Jaycees, along with 9,000 Jaycee chapters throughout the U.S., will observe Jaycee family week from November 18-24. Theme for celebrating this year's family week is "What A Family. . .What A Life!"

Jaycee family week has a threefold purpose: To cause Jaycees across America to place increased emphasis on the importance of the family, to help Jaycees identify ways to become more active with their families, and to aid a major national effort to improve the quality of family life in America.

A leading authority on the family, Dr. Urie Bronfenbrenner, commenting on the fragmented state of the family, said "If present trends continue, it will not be long before the broken family, so to speak, is a norm, and the legally wedded, two-parent family is a rare exception."

The United States Jaycees, along with various other organizations, have recognized the recent erosion of the family unit and have started an active campaign to promote family time together. Their programs stress the importance of the family spending quality time together, on a regular weekly basis. United States Jaycees have adopted the family time theme of "Moments at Home," which is promoted throughout the United States as a public service project. Two of their pamphlets are helpful in family life development. They are "prime time", and "all in the family" (for teaching children about alcohol). For more information on these programs, contact the Thief River Falls Jaycees.

Thief River Falls Jaycees encourage everyone to take time to plan special activities with their families during Jaycee family week and to make it a regular part of your family's schedule.

YOUNG MATTHEW SMITH, three-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Smith of Wheaton and formerly of Thief River Falls, was being kept for observation at Northwestern hospital following his brush with death Thursday. The youngster was revived with CPR techniques.

School Patrols Aided By Class At Legionville

Presentation of 25 winter jackets was recently made by the American Legion - Ecklund - Holmstrom Post 117, to school patrol students in the Thief River Falls schools.

American Legion - Ecklund - Holmstrom Post 117, who bought the jackets, also supplies other school patrol supplies including rain coats, flags, and harnesses.

School patrol boys and girls receive their training at Legionville (nine miles north of Brainerd on Long Lake) and are sponsored by the Minnesota American Legion and the Legion auxiliary. Presently, Minnesota is the only state that has a school patrol program set up in this manner.

History of the school patrol begins in 1921, when Sister Carnelia of St. Paul, began using pupils as school patrols at the Cathedral grade school. Then, in 1929, when Earl Brown of Detroit Lakes was named the first chief of the highway patrol, the American Legion became dominant. In 1936 the American Legion adopted a resolution to operate a camp to maintain Americanism and good citizenship. And, two years later, two week-long instruction camps were started one at Camp Ripley and the other at the county fairgrounds in Brainerd. In 1953 a resolution was passed to raise funds to secure land and maintain a permanent site for the school patrol training center. Construction of the site began in 1956 for the Legionville school patrol training center, a non-profit education institution at North Long Lake, north of Brainerd, donated by Clyde Parker. Dedication of Legionville was made a year later by governor Orville Freeman.

During the week-long session at Legionville, students are taught safety patrol methods with Minnesota highway patrol officers acting as teachers, and nature study and conservation. Boat and water safety and first aid lessons are also provided by the Red Cross life guards.

At the end of the week-long session, a Minnesota highway patrol officer gives an examination of progress to students covering the school patrol and safety lesson taught while at the training center. Each youngster that passes the exam receives a certificate of graduation to go back to his or her community

OPEN HOUSE at the Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls Friday was attended by a number of local people. "Be With a Book for a Day" was the theme of the open house and refreshments were served by library personnel. The event was held locally in coordination with a national conference on libraries and information services to encourage public support of libraries.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Various Reports Given at Legion Auxiliary Meet

Reports highlighted the monthly meeting of the American Legion auxiliary held Tuesday, November 6, at the Legion club rooms with President Marilyn Winters presiding.

Included was the membership report given by Avis Odegaard. She stated that at present there are 524 members in the local unit including 21 Gold Star members and seven Life members, whose dues are paid by the unit. It was also noted that three members had died during the year, and that in September the annual membership tea had been held for members' convenience in paying dues and picking up membership cards.

Lyla Quam gave the Community Service report. She stated that the most recent event had been to assist a group of local senior citizens in entertaining senior citizens from surrounding towns at a luncheon held the previous day. Other events at which the unit was assisted were: Community Kidney auction, serving the Friendship club twice a year, donating to the fund for senior citizens to attend the Winter Show at Crookston; sponsoring Bingo games, prizes and workers twice a month at Oakland Park Nursing home; and assisting in community drives, charities and visitations. It was also noted that the unit had contributed its fair share of $3.00 per member to Operation Heartbeat.

Mrs. Quam also requested that members save Roman Meal wrappers as a special fund raising project for the Children and Youth program. She said that five cents will be received for each bag and that all funds will be designated for Special Olympics.

The Poppy report, given by Flora Hagglund showed that the order for the next year had been increased 10 per cent over the past year. It was noted that in addition to selling the poppies, the unit had given large poppies to 14 churches for Memorial day and that regular poppies had been used for decorations, corsages and wreaths throughout the year. Donations from the poppy fund included $100 to the Veterans' gift shop; $25 each to the Fargo VA hospital Christmas party, the American Legion fund for hospitalized vets in Minneapolis; Service men's center, Minneapolis, and the Legion Auxiliary emergency fund; $30 to the Dollar Bill shower for Christmas gifts to local veterans; $15 each to the Forgotten children's program and the Valentine party at the Fargo VA hospital; $12.50 for a subscription to the Thief River Falls Times to the Fargo VA hospital; and $10 to the birthday party fund at the Minneapolis VA hospital.

Constance Driscoll gave the Americanism report. She stated that the unit is currently establishing a Veterans room at the Pioneer Village, where uniforms from all branches of service and memorabilia from all wars and conflicts will be displayed. During the past year, flags were presented to the Day Activity center and the Occupational Development center. In addition to carrying the colors at meetings and conventions, and in local and in surrounding area parades, the unit assisted in the Flag day ceremony and the Memorial day services. The unit also presented each new member with a small flag and a pamphlet on flag etiquette.

The report on the Legislative program was given by Gwen Brooten. She stated that the unit is subscribing to the legislative bulletin and that letters have been set to legislators asking support on bills pertaining to the welfare of veterans, their families and VA hospitals.

Avis Odegaard gave the report on the fall Conference held at Alexandria. Representing the local unit as delegates at the conference were Mrs. Odegaard and LaVonne Haroldson.

The December meeting was discussed and it was decided that in place of a gift exchange, the money used for purchasing gifts should be brought to the meeting to be used for buying items for the Fargo VA hospital.

The meeting concluded with President Winters expressing her appreciation to the women who sewed the patches on the 25 new jackets purchased by the Legion for the school patrol.

Kim Renee Herndon To Wed Ernest J. Zavoral

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herndon, Grove City, Pa., announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Kim Renee, to Ernest Jeffrey Zavoral of Grove City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Zavoral, Sr., 105 McConnell Drive, Butler, Pa., and grandson of Robert Zavoral, Goodridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Zavoral, Grygla.

The bride-elect is a 1975 graduate of Slippery Rock high school and a 1979 graduate of Grove City college. She is employed by Four Seasons in Grove City. Her fiance is also a 1975 graduate of Slippery Rock high school. He attended Grove City college for two years and is now employed as supervisor of H and D Coal company.

A December 29th wedding is planned.

All Officers of Campanula Club Are Reelected

All officers of the Campanula garden club were reelected for another year at a meeting of the club held Wednesday afternoon at the public library meeting room.

Officers of the club are Geneva Overum, president; Ruth Holms, vice president; Mrs. Emil Koglin, secretary; Olga Johnson, treasurer; and Bernice Knutson, good cheer.

The meeting also included the welcoming of Mrs. Victor Franson as a new member; and the paying of the State Horticultural Society dues.

Nine members attended the meeting and answered roll call by giving a phenology report from October 10 until November 14. Adding interest was a test, identifying different seeds.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Pennington county agent Terry Courneya, who answered questions on various gardening problems.

President Geneva Overum presided at the meeting and led the garden quiz. A potluck lunch was served.

The December meeting will feature the club's Christmas party. It will be held December 12 at the home of Geneva Overum.

Nancy Rae Smeby To Marry Perry Hubbard

Mr. and Mrs. John Smeby of Grygla announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Rae, to Perry Hubbard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stirling Hubbard of Kenosha, Wis.

Miss Smeby is currently employed as a secretary at United Asphalt company in Fridley. Her fiance is a graduate of Bethel Seminary, Minneapolis, and is assistant pastor at the Waite Park Wesleyan church.

A December 15th wedding is planned.

Zion Women To Study Family Advent Customs

Zion Lutheran Church Women will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m., with the Naomi circle presenting the program, "Family Advent Customs."

Special music will be provided by a group of Zion women. The program will also include a thank-offering presentation service and the installation of officers.

Members of the Martha circle will serve as hostesses. The Hannah circle will be in charge of hospitality.

Bible study leaders are asked to meet with the pastor at 7 p.m.

Groslie and Kilzer Vows Spoken at Cambridge

Miss Rebecca M. Groslie and Mark Stephen Kilzer were married recently at Christ the King Catholic church in Cambridge. Rev. Blair officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Wesley and Cleo Mae Groslie, former Thief River Falls residents who are now living in Minneapolis. Her grandfather, Ole Engelstad, resides here. Parents of the groom are Bernard and Eva Kilzer of Richardton, N.D.

For her wedding, the bride selected a white floor-length gown with a full skirt that extended into a chapel-length train. The empire bodice featured a net insert with keyhole opening, accented with lace trim. Matching lace motifs were appliqued on the cuffs of her full bishop sleeves. To complement her attire, she wore a walking length veil, topped by a blusher, edged in lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, babies' breath and stephanotis.

Mary C. Prchal of Minneapolis served as maid of honor and Karen Hansen, Wausau, Wis., was bridesmaid. They wore royal blue floor-length gowns styled with buttoned V-fronts and butterfly sleeves. Babies' breath formed their hair pieces. Each carried a solitary yellow rose.

Howard Kilzer of Rochester attended his brother as best man. Lesley Groslie, a brother of the bride, was groomsman. Like the groom, they were attired in light blue tuxedos with ruffled shirts and yellow rosebud boutonnieres.

Presiding as lector was William Groslie of Rochester, brother of the bride. Ushers were Dan Groslie, another brother of the bride, and John Kilzer, brother of the groom. Clare Kilzer, sister of the groom, was soloist.

Ninety guests attended the wedding dinner that followed in Christ the King parish hall. The ladies association catered the dinner. Marilyn Groslie, sister-in-law of the bride, served the punch and Sandy and Cindy, sister-in-law and sister of the bride, cut and served the three-tiered wedding cake. At the guest book was Debbie Tollefson. At 5:30 p.m., the wedding party reassembled at the lake home of the bride's parents where champagne was toasted to the couple.

The following week, the groom's parents hosted a post wedding reception, dinner and dance at the Eagles club in Dickenson, N.D. About 150 guests were in attendance with godmothers Ira Protz and Loretta Schroeber cutting and serving the wedding cake.

The couple is now at home in Sun Prairie, Wis. The bride is a 1977 graduate of St. Cloud university and has been teaching elementary school in Wausau, Wis. The groom, a graduate of North Dakota State school of Science, is employed as contracting telephone engineer by D&S Telephone contracting company of Mobile, Ala.

Business-Professional Women to Meet Tonight

Thief River Falls Business and Professional Women's club will meet tonight (Monday) and not Tuesday as published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

The dinner-meeting, to begin at 6 p.m., at the Elks club, will feature Senator Mary Hanson and his wife, Gayle, as speakers.

Oakland Park Home Monthly Events Reported

Observance of Halloween was included among the many activities at Oakland Park Nursing home during the month of October. On that day several staff members wore Halloween costumes representing smiling witches, a black cat, jack-o-laterns, Raggedy Ann and Andy, and a ghost, Mary, who read a Halloween story. As a special activity, members and staff tried catching apples tied to strings. Afternoon lunch featured cupcakes and apple juice. Highlighting the day were the "Tricks or Treaters" who visited the Home.

Other events at the Home during October were worship services every Thursday afternoon by local and area pastors; devotional programs by church circles, the monthly birthday party, special Sunday dinners with residents taking turns in hosting members of their families, bowling games, sing-alongs, and other activities.

In charge of Thursday worship services were Rev. James Hagemeister of the Assemblies of God Tabernacle, Rev. Earl Eveland of the Evangelical Free church of Newfolden, Rev. Curtis Anderson of the Evangelical Free church of this city, and Rev. Gene Broughton of the Faith Lutheran church of Goodridge.

Church circles presenting devotional programs were a Unit from Fedeemer Lutheran church, who served angel food cake; Hannah circle of Trinity Lutheran church, who served lunch; and the "Spirit Seekers of St. Bernard's Catholic church with Julie Buresh in charge, who presented a program of folk songs and served punch and cookies.

The residents' monthly birthday party was hosted by a group from St. John Lutheran church. The lunch they served included orange juice from McDonald's. Residents observing their birthdays and the date of the birth were Clarence Peterson, Oct. 11, 1901; Hilma Stolaas, Oct. 14, 1887; Tilmer Lausness, Oct. 18, 1900; Effie Johnson, Oct. 27, 1891; Gunhild Sollom, Oct. 28, 1893; and Bertha Grondahl, Oct. 29, 1900. The birthday honorees also received special birthday cards from the Catholic Daughters.

Residents hosting dinners on successive Sundays of the month were Effie Johnson with her brother, Walter Aubol as guest; Lillie Nelson with her son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Ed Nelson, as guests; Emma Hjelle with a niece, Nora Rokke and friend as guests; and Minda Larson with her husband, Emil, and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Larson, as guests.

Bingo games at the home were sponsored by the Eagles Auxiliary and American Legion auxiliary providing prizes and workers who assisted the residents in playing.

The activities department, in charge of the bowling announced that the Oakland Park team won the game against Valley Home. Members of the team are Andrew Handrickson, Annie Jensen, Ray Welch and Odin Peterson. The game was played at Valley Home.

Other activities included two quilting bees, a slide show presentation of the Chicago area with resident Bea Erickson in charge; a sing-along with Lois Anderson activities aide, and Myrtle Marks, charge nurse, leading the singing; and a cookie baking session in the resident kitchen with Wendy Reller, activities director, assisting the residents.

The month's events also included a visit from the Zoomobile of Apple Valley with Tom Reller, brother-in-law of activities director, Wendy Reller, in charge. Displayed were a ferret, Possum and an Anaconda, the largest breed of South American snakes. He also assisted the residents in holding the animals.

Also during the month, residents and staff mourned the death of resident Myrtle Engelstad and attended the memorial service held at the Home at 10:30 a.m., on October 10. Her pastor, Rev. J. Hovland of Trinity Lutheran church, officiated at the services.

Chat and Chew Donate to Fergus Falls Hospital

Items to be sent to patients at the Fergus Falls State hospital were brought to the Chat and Chew homemakers meeting held Tuesday afternoon at the Gerald DeHaan home. The items, passed around for viewing, will be packaged and mailed to the hospital before Christmas. Marian Williams is in charge of the project.

Ten members attended the meeting, which included the lesson, "Cooking creatively with basic mixes and herbs." Wanda Murphy and Vi Sullivan were lesson leaders. Mrs. Murphy also led in a test of identifying 10 different herbs and spices. Samples of season salt were distributed by Mrs. Sullivan. The members answered roll call by revealing their Thanksgiving Day plans.

A report on the Home Council seminar held at the Elks club the previous day was given by Pauline Aubol. Geneva Overum read the homemakers creed, Carol Narverud gave the secretary's report, and Mrs. De Hahn gave an account of the club's financial conditions.

The club's Christmas party was discussed and the event was set for December 11. During the social hour, Thanksgiving Day cards were signed for former members, Mrs. Lena Hayes and Mrs. Laurel Joyner. A dessert lunch was served by Mrs. DeHahn.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Mrs. Gene Nelson
Viking

Zucchini Casserole

- 2 quarts sliced or diced unpeeled zucchini
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1½ lbs., lean ground beef
- ½ teaspoon salt
- one-eighth teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup sliced carrots
- 1 7 oz. pkg. seasoned stuffing croutons
- ½ cup butter, melted
- 1-10¾ oz., can cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup dairy sour cream

Method: Cook zucchini, onion, and carrots in a small amount of salted water. Drain, reserving the liquid. Stir fry ground beef until brown, add salt and pepper. In another pan, prepare stuffing croutons according to package directions, using melted butter and 1½ cups reserved liquid. In separate bowl, combine cream of chicken soup and sour cream and fold in vegetable mixture. Spread half of the meat mixture in a greased 4 or 5 quart casserole. Top with half of the stuffing croutons and cover with vegetable mixture, topped with remaining meat mixture and croutons, in that order. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

The Gene Nelsons live on a dairy farm near Viking. They have five children: Debbie, who is married to Michael Waterworth and lives at Newfolden; David, who lives with his wife and son, Ryan, at New Rockford, N.D.; Steve, who together with his wife, farms with the Nelsons; Darrell, who is employed by Arctic Enterprises, and Grant, an eighth grader at Marshall County Central high school, Newfolden.

The Nelsons are members of Zion Lutheran church, Viking.

GIRL SCOUT

ACTIVITIES

Saturday, November 10 marked the annual Brownie Bounce and Junior Badge Day for Brownies and Junior Girl Scouts from Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Eighty five Brownies and over seventy five Juniors attended the event which was held at Franklin Middle School.

The Brownie Bounce is traditionally observed as a time for becoming acquainted with Brownies from other troops. The day was spent in games and songs. Steve Anderson spent some time with the Brownies teaching songs and entertaining.

Junior Girl Scouts worked with a number of community resource people in order to earn their folklore badge. Time was devoted to folk art, games, songs and dances. Resource people who participated in the event with the junior girl scouts were: Yoshiko Duke, Sue Fredeen, Pat Dunning and Gretchen Beito. In addition, Washington 5th grade troop and leader, Polly Edington taught a folk dance and Washington 4th grade troop and leader, Kathy Sundstedt taught sons. Kitty Cornell and Mary Numedal coordinated a display of hand arts and crafts. All junior troops participated in planning and carrying out the badge day with participation in skits, registration, flag ceremony and hospitality.

Orchestra In Concert Series "Enjoyable"

by James A. Solsten

St. Olaf college orchestra performed Tuesday evening, October 13, for the Thief River Falls concert association members. The orchestra has performed here before, admirably, and it was not disappointing this time.

The string section was carefully rehearsed. They played cleanly with a good solid sound. They played musically. The wind and percussion complement was also excellent, also musical.

The opening overture was "The Thieving Magpie", a happy piece of music. If one has overheard a Rossini overture one could have easily guessed the composer of this one as it contained his usual delightful devices and unmistakable imprint.

Likewise, the Gershwin concerto in F had many reminders of his more often heard "Rhapsody in Blue". Again the flavours typical of Gershwin were there to tell those without a program just who the composer was. The pianist, Craig Gerstenkorn, was certainly an adequate soloist who shows promise.

Usually a program contains some concession to modern music. The "Suite from the Three-Cornered Hat" by Mauel de Falla filled that function. He was a Spanish composer who died in 1946.

The piece has a modern sound and tricky rhythms with much Spanish flavour. It was not overly dissonant as many such pieces are in an effort to depart from ordinary harmonies. It had many moods and shadings and was artistically executed.

The conductor, David O'Dell, is a young man who, in his own words "inherited this orchestra". Nevertheless, he had to prepare it for this tour and certainly did it no harm. His conducting is effective, controlled and his motions are economical just as the textbooks say they should be. He is hardly flamboyant but handles complicated scores competently. From behind he reminds one of the Boston symphony's Ozowa. He seemed a bit shy on stage; backstage friendly and pleasant. After intermission we heard Antonin Dvorak's symphony No. 8. Many words could be said about it; two will suffice — pleasant listening. We heard a most enjoyable concert.

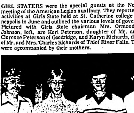
GIRL STATERS were the special guests at the November meeting of the American Legion auxiliary. They reported on the activities at Girls State held at St. Catherine college in Minneapolis in June and outlined the various levels of government. Pictured with Girls State chairman Mrs. Ormond (Iola) Johnson, left, are Kari Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Peterson of Goodridge, and Karyn Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards of Thief River Falls. The girls were accompanied by their mothers.



BOY STATERS, who attended Boys State at St. Olaf College in Northfield in June, presented their report at the November meeting of the American Legion held recently at the local club room. In reporting on the American government training program received, they stated that they are available to give their reports to other organizations. Pictured, from left to right, are Larry Odegaard, Legion commander; Mike Semanko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Semanko, Thief River Falls; Terry Drangstveit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin Drangstveit of Goodridge, and Terry Soine, Boy State chairman.

MILLIE JEAN Reierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Reierson, Thief River Falls and holding the rank of sergeant at Fort McClellan, Ala., and Barb Bacon, daughter of Al Bacon and Iris Bacon, also of Thief River Falls, and a lieutenant at Fort McClellan, recently competed in and won the softball title at Fort Jackson, SC. Women had to first win at Fort McClelan to become eligible to enter the 1979 training and doctrine command women's softball (TRADOC) tourney at Fort Jackson.

Garden Valley Issues 17,000 Directories

Several hundred new listings and other current information are contained in Garden Valley's 1980 telephone directory, seventeen thousand copies are being distributed this week.

Opon receipt of the new books, all old directories should be discarded to avoid using incorrect information.

Numbers of Garden Valley members for whom service was installed after the printing of the new directory — or other recent changes — can be obtained by dialing toll-free numbers 1-411, if information requested is within your own exchange; or 1-555-1515 for other exchanges within Area 218. For updated numbers in other areas, dial 1 plus Area Code plus 555-1212. Note: Until their exchanges are upgraded to all one-party service, Erskine and McIntosh subscribers are reminded to dial their special code number after dialing DDD Access Number 1 for all long distance calls.

Emergency Numbers (including fire and police departments) are, as before printed on the inside front cover of the new telephone book.

To provide a convenient reference for members of the cooperative, the complete corporate by-laws of the Garden Valley Telephone company are included in the informational pages located near the front of the directory.

Thieves Steal Antique Desk

Theft of a china showcase writing desk and contents has been reported by Mrs. Ray Donarski of Argyle, who requests that antique dealers and others be on the alert for its possible sale. The desk and drawers are locked, she said, and the desk was a gift from grandparents to a grandchild who is very upset over the loss.

Legionville Trains Local School Patrol to practice what they have learned and to teach other children in the school about the school patrol program. When students have earned their school patrol certificate they are in charge of the school patrol crossings.

There has not been one fatality at a school patrol crossing since the training schools were started, according to information supplied by the American Legion.

In 1979, 1,057 boys and 963 girls from Minnesota were enrolled at Legionville (in 1936 there were 157 boys). Thief River Falls American Legion sent 15 students while the auxiliary sent three. Students sent consist of 10 boys and eight girls sent one year, and 10 girls and eight boys sent the following year, with numbers alternating on a yearly basis.

U.S. agricultural exports are expected to reach a new high — $32 billion — for the fiscal year ending September 30. If imports hold at the estimated $16.3 billion, it will mean a $15.7 billion agricultural trade surplus.

Super-Saver Fare Offered By Airline

Republic Airlines will have introduced November 15 its new "Supreme Super-Saver" fare which offers a 40 per cent discount from the standard fare between all cities in the United States served by the airline.

"This new fare, which will replace a number of other discount fares, will have fewer restrictions while offering passengers greater savings," said Graydon Hall, Republic's senior vice president of marketing.

Hall said the super-saver fare is available throughout the week and can be used between any domestic points in the county which Republic serves.

To qualify for the fare, passengers must make reservations and purchase tickets at least seven days prior to their departure. Travelers can leave any day and return no earlier than 12:01 of the next Saturday, however persons departing on a Saturday may return any time within 60 days.

"Supreme Super-Saver seats are limited," Hall said, "so passengers should make their travel plans as far in advance as possible."

To Show Films At Assemblies Of God Sunday

"A Distrant Thunder" will be shown at the Thief River Falls Assemblies of God church, 315 Duluth av. N., on Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

This film begins where "A Thief in the Night" ended according to Rev. J.L. Hagemeister. Events foretold in the Bible which are to take place following the second coming of Christ are vividly protrayed.

Rev. Hagemeister and congregation extend a cordial invitation to the public to view this film.

Mrs. Albert Peterson Rites Held At Gatzke

Mrs. Albert (Ida) Peterson, 71, of Gatzke died unexpectedly Tuesday morning, November 13, at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida Peterson were held Friday at 2:30 p.m., at the United Lutheran church in Gatzke with Rev. Robert Peterson and Rev. Ernest Dobkins, pastor of the Seventh-Day Adventist church, officiating. Duets were by Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Blom and Mr. and Mrs. John Merth, with Mrs. Ray Juhl as accompanist. Mrs. John Merth served as organist. Interment was in the Moose River cemetery with the Collins Funeral home, Middle River, in charge of arrangements.

Honorary pallbearers were Alvin Nordvick, Walter Lunsetter, Ed Lund, Delmar Hagen, Ray Juhl and Lyle Blahauvietz.

Serving as active pallbearers were grandsons: Keith and Ramon Hagen, Wayne and Terry Loken and Maurice and Gene Lunsetter.

Mrs. Peterson, the former Ida Amanda Taie, was born Jan. 12, 1908 in Veldt township, Marshall county, near Gatzke, to Ole and Anna Taie. She grew to womanhood in Veldt township and there attended the former Wildwood school.

On Nov. 26, 1927, she was married at Grygla to Albert Peterson. Following their marriage, the couple farmed in Moose River township, near Gatzke, until 1954. At that time they moved into Gatzke, where they have since resided. After moving to Gatzke, Mrs. Peterson was employed at the Gatzke school as a cook for 17 years.

She was active in the Senior Citizens group and, was a member of the Middle River Seventh-Day Adventist church.

Surviving are her husband, a son, Rodney Peterson, Wichita, Kans.; four daughters: Mrs. Ralph (Ione) Hagen, and Mrs. Glenn (Grace) Lunsetter, both of Gatzke; Mrs. Vernon (Helen) Loken, Pencer, and Miss Dorothy Peterson of Middle River; 23 grandchildren, 27 great-grandchildren; two brothers: Willie Taie, Roseau, and Otto, Gatzke; and one sister, Mrs. Bennie (Milda) Goslien of Greenbush.

She was preceded in death by her parents, one son, two grandchildren, a brother, three half-brothers and three half-sisters.

Frank Stanko Services Held At Warren

Funeral services for Frank Stanko, 78, of Valley Home were held Friday at 11 a.m.; at Sts. Peter and Paul Catholic church at Warren. Stanko, a former resident of the Warren and Argyle areas, died Wednesday morning at Northwestern hospital.

Rev. James Bernauer of St. Bernard's parish, officiated at the services. Mrs. Leonard Novak was the organist and Mrs. Rodney Nowacki, the soloist. Interment was in the Wagner Baptist cemetery near Argyle with the Belmont Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Larry Voytilla, Ted Voytilla, Glenn Voytilla, Earl Voytilla, Norman Haugen and James Olson.

Frank Stanko, a son of the late Harry and Theodora Stanko, was born April 21, 1901 in Argyle. He grew to manhood in the Argyle area, where his family farmed, and he lived most of his adult life there, farming in Wanger township; Marshall county. During World War II, he worked for a time in the shipyards in Oregon. From 1977 until 1978, he lived in Milwaukee, Wis. He then returned to the Warren area; where he lived for a short time before becoming a resident of Valley Home.

He is survived by two brothers: John and Peter Stanko, both of Warren; three sisters: Mrs. Nellie Bordenkircher; Portland; Ore; Mrs. Russell (Marie) Wood, Warren; and Leona Stanko, Milwaukee, Wis.; and several nieces and nephews.

One brother and a sister preceded him in death.

Roy Storvick Services Held

Roy O. Storvick, 81, of 804 First Southwest, Wadena, died Thursday, November 8, at St. Luke's hospital in Fargo, N.D., after a lingering illness.

Funeral services for Roy O. Storvick were held Saturday, November 10, at 2 p.m., at the Immanuel Lutheran church in Wadena with Rev. Kurt Wied and Rev. Olaf C. Cartfrod officiating. Interment was in the Wadena cemetery.

Roy O. Storvick was born Dec. 12, 1897 in Freeborn county. He graduated from Albert Lea high school and Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, and received his Master's Degree in Dairy Science from Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa. He taught and coached for two years at Canton Lutheran normal school, Canton, S.D. From 1932-44, he was general manager of Iowa Brand Creameries, Inc. in Mason City. He moved to Wadena in 1944 to assume the position of General Manager of Northern Cooperatives and remained in that position until his retirement.

He was active in the support of his church and Alma Mater, and served for 12 years on the board of regents of Luther college. In 1976, on the 55th anniversary of his graduation, he was inducted in the Luther College hall of fame.

In 1924, he was married to Helen Weeks of Thief River Falls, a sister of the late Mrs. William Sponheim.

Surviving are his wife, four children, Olin Storvick, Moorhead; David, Minneapolis; Rosalie Miller, Zumbrota; and Sonja Hagestuen, Aitkin; 16 grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, and two sisters: Clara, Corvalis, Ore., and Joyce Hazeltine, Redding, Calif.

Dorothy Zeh Dies Nov. 3 In Corvallis, Ore.

Mrs. Dorothy C. Zeh, 76, of Corvallis, Ore., died Saturday, November 3, in a Corvallis Nursing home. Funeral services were held in Corvallis the following Tuesday.

Mrs. Zeh, the former Dorothy Colton, was born Oct. 24, 1903 in Grand Forks, N.D. She attended the University of North Dakota, where she was a member of the Gamma Phi Beta. On June 21, 1925, she was married in Grand Forks to Ernest F. Zeh of Thief River Falls. She was employed in Monterey, Calif., from 1955 until 1960, when she moved to Carmel, Calif. There she was employed as manager of Normandy Inn until her retirement in 1967. Since then, she had made her home in Corvallis.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Joe (Nancy) Holder, Corvallis; two grandchildren, and four sisters: Mrs. W.T. DePuy and Genevieve Colton, both of Grafton, N.D., Mrs. W.S. Duckstad, Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. V. W. Weaver, Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear friends,

The first Thanksgiving would have been impossible but for the generous sharing of food by the Indians. Now that our country is blessed with food in abundance, it behooves us to share with impoverished nations and, more important, to teach them production techniques that have made our country so abundant. Such practical Christianity is needed to evolve a world thankful for Christ and for freedom

Sincerely,
Belmont Funeral Home

Stop Smoking Clinic Here Starts Nov. 25

Internationally known "Five-day plan to stop smoking" will be in Thief River Falls November 25-29 in the conference room of the day-night unit at Northwestern hospital. Conference room is located in the north end of the third floor.

The "Five-Day Plan" is the official stop smoking plan of the United States navy and was originated by medical doctors the ministers combining the mental, physical and spiritual aspects of how to stop smoking. Local physicians will present medical facts each evening and the program will be coordinated by Rev. Ernest Dobkins. It is sponsored by the Seventh-day Adventist church as a community service; there is no fee for the clinic.

Pre-register by calling 681-5678 or come to the opening night of the clinic. Each meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. with a half-hour film. A day by day, step by step approach to stop smoking will be presented. The program has been successful for millions world wide, Rev. Dobkins said.

Study Tour To Colombia, S.A., Slated By 'U'M

The University of Minnesota's international study and travel center will sponsor an educational tour to Columbia, South America, over the university's spring break, March 22-30, 1980.

The tour, which is open to the general public, focuses on the central region of Columbia, with an emphasis on historical and cultural aspects of Bogota and the Boyaca region to the north of the capital. The tour also includes a two-day excursion to the tropical agricultural Magdelena river valley. Estimated cost, including airfare, is $749.

Further information is available from the International Study and Travel Center, 40 Coffman Union, 300 Washington Ave. S.E., University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455.

Gasohol On Agenda For Wheat Growers

Realizing that perhaps no other faction of Americans is as dependent on energy as is the agricultural community, the Minnesota association of wheat growers has asked Ray Anderson, vice president of the National Gasohol association, to speak at the growers annual convention, November 28, 29 and 30 at the American Inn in East Grand Forks.

Long a proponent of gasohol, Anderson was one of the original members of the NGA board of directors. After receiving Anderson's acceptance of the growers' invitation to speak, Jorgen Knutson, Minnesota wheat growers president, said, "Anderson is an outstanding addition to our program. He will bring us up to date on the status of the national gasohol program, gasohol legislation now under consideration in Washington and on-the-farm distillery projects.

Anderson is scheduled to speak Thursday afternoon, Nov. 29. Another Thursday speaker, Billy Ray Gowdy, will discuss the USDA's position and future policies regarding international wheat marketing. Knutson also said Gowdy expects to have an update on the possibility of extending the closing date of the St. Lawrence seaway.

Steve Easton Among Who's Who Students

The 1979-80 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" will carry the names of 28 students from Dickinson state college, who have been selected as being among the country's outstanding campus leaders. Among those 28 students is Steve Easton of Thief River Falls.

A nominating committee consisting of the dean of men, dean of women, faculty and student senate representatives selected the candidates. They join students selected from more than 1,200 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

You're Supporting SALT II

Whether you favor the strategic arms limitation treaty or not, you have been paying for efforts in behalf of its passage. You have been doing so by paying your taxes like loyal Americans do. Rev. Robert E. Bauman of Maryland explains how it works.

"One of the most alarming practices of the Carter administration has been the expenditure of tax funds in support of public relations efforts that can best be described as purely political in nature," he writes.

First, President Carter sent a memo to federal department heads urging them to use their tax supported offices to persuade the public to support passage of the Equal Rights amendment. Then there was a massive tax supported campaign to sell the American people on the Panama canal give-away, Rep. Bauman says.

"And now," he adds, "the Carter administration has spent more than one million of your tax dollars to persuade you to support its increasingly unpopular SALT II arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union.

"Throughout most of 1979, the administration has been sending representatives of the state department and the arms control and disarmament agency (ACDA) around the country to speak in favor of SALT II. These tax supported SALT sellers have been urging their audiences to lobby their senators to vote for the so-called arms limitation treaty.

"To date, employees of the state department and the ACDA have made more than 1,100 appearances around the country to generate support for the President's controversial treaty with the Soviets. Senior officials of the government have appeared at 39 government sponsored pro-treaty conferences.

"In each of these cases, the airfare, hotel accommodations and incidental expenses, as well as the salaries for the government bureaucrats were covered by the tax dollars of working Americans, many of whom are philosophically opposed to the treaty with the Soviets.

"While any administration has the right to put forth its interpretation of the facts surrounding an important issue, this calculated lobbying effort clearly steps over the bounds of propriety and, in my opinion, legality as well," he said.

". . .Moreover, government involvement in the manipulation of public opinion is an activity unbefitting a democracy such as ours and threatens to undermine the viability of our constitutional process."

The American Conservative union, which Rep. Bauman chairs, has filed suit against the President in U.S. district court in Washington, seeking to enjoin the administration from using tax funds for political lobbying.

Oil Company Profits

Following editorial is from the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

The timing was uncanny.

Just when Congress and the Carter Administration were embroiled in debate over oil decontrol, along come the profit reports from the largest U.S. oil companies.

By this time, we're all familiar with those reports: Third-quarter profits soared 118 per cent at Exxon; 97 per cent at Standard Oil (Indiana); 45 per cent at Atlantic Richfield; 191 per cent at Standard Oil (Ohio); 130 per cent at Mobil; 65 per cent at Sun; 64 per cent at Cities Service; 58 per cent at Marathon.

Politicians, who are adept at leaping before looking, bitterly attacked the earnings reports. James G. Archuleta, an official for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, branded Exxon's profits "pornographic". Similar feelings are being expressed by motorists who must pay more than $1 for a gallon of unleaded, by homeowners who are being charged upwards of 90 cents for a gallon of fuel oil, and by truckers who are paying nearly $1 a gallon for diesel fuel.

But before we all join in, let's check the facts.

First, Big Oil earned most of those profits from European operations. Mobil, for instance, said foreign energy earnings, including profits on inventories, accounted for 85 per cent of its third quarter increase. Sun's profits came from improvements in earnings from its Canadian subsidiary and its overseas operations.

Exxon's third-quarter earnings were attributed to a "significant" increase in worldwide operating earnings, plus reduced taxes in Britain. On the other hand, Exxon's U.S. refining and marketing earnings "continue to be depressed," dropping from $217 million in 1978 to $180 million so far this year.

Okay, you say, but isn't a billion-dollar profit, if not pornographic, at least obscene?

Not if you divide it among individual shareholders. Exxon made $1.1 billion in profit. That's $2.60 a share. According to the latest New York Stock Exchange quotation, Exxon pays shareholders dividends of $1 per quarter. The remaining $1.60 is re-invested in the company, which increases the overall value of not only the company but of each share of stock in the company. Anyone wishing to participate in this windfall may purchase Exxon stock for about $56 a share, plus brokerage fees.

In the meantime, Sun Oil earned $3.19 a share; Cities Service, $3.11; Sohio, $3.03; Mobil, $2.80, and Marathon, $1.31.

So who are these shareholders? According to "The Wall Street Journal," 65 per cent of Exxon's shares are held by institutions: pension funds, insurance companies, mutual funds "and other mechanisms for small savers to pool their resources," plus charitable and educational foundations, colleges and universities. "Employee pension funds alone own 28 per cent of Exxon," the "Journal" notes.

As pleasant as all this sounds, oil companies are still raking in lots of money. Many of the contributing factors, however, are beyond their control: the Iranian revolution and accompanying shortfall, rapidly fluctuating exchange rates, increasing worldwide demand for a product that grows scarcer by the day, and changing tax rates in various European nations where officials would rather see higher prices and availability than low prices and closed pumps.

On top of that, while competition still exists between the 28 major U.S. oil companies, competition among U.S. sources of energy is being severely curtailed by various laws and groups opposed to nuclear power, natural gas drilling, coal mining and coal-fired generating plants.

While oil companies could reduce profits significantly by following Chevron's lead and cutting gasoline prices three cents a gallon, the blessings would be short-lived. American motorists would respond by driving more, burning up even greater quantities of our dwindling gasoline stocks.

Politicians searching for white horses have tosses their saddles on President Carter's plan to tax these so-called windfall profits. Consumers who value their jobs, their mobility and their warm homes in the winter might be better off if oil companies could take these profits and invest them in such things as extensive exploration, the trans-Alaskan natural gas pipeline, additional refineries and new crude oil pipeline systems.

Americans are slowly accepting the reality that cheap energy is a thing of the past. Next we'll have to learn to be wary of politicians promising to turn oil company profits into fuel for our furnaces and automobiles and electricity for our refrigerators.

Caught Red-Faced

Following was noted recently in the Minnesota Farm Bureau News:

Recently the federal government has been trying to crack down on ex-students who have defaulted on their payments to the federally guaranteed student loan program run by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

As part of the effort, they came up with "Operation Cross-Check," which matched the program's default files against HEW payroll files across the United States. The work wasn't wasted. It turns out that more than 300 HEW employees — including 37 earning between $15,500 and $43,923 a year — have defaulted on these government loans that helped pay for their education.

So next time HEW calls you to account for some act of moral turpitude, remember to ask the official on the other end whether he's paid up.

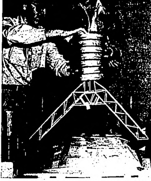
Borrowed Nonsense:

Youngster on train: "Mom, what was the name of that last station where we stopped?"

Mother: "I don't know, Tommy. Now don't bother me, I'm reading."

Tommy: "Well, I thought you might want to know, because little brother got off there."

Is there any significance to the fact that when a woman goes to see a doctor for fatigue the first thing he does is examine her tongue?



TOOTHPICK ENGINEERING contest of Moorhead state university attracted 87 participants who were involved in the construction and design of 57 structures. The rules state that a structure is to be built using a maximum of 500 round wooden toothpicks, and undetermined amount of glue, a lot of engineering ingenuity, and must be designed and constructed with a clear span of 20 inches. Overall winner, with a load of 175 pounds, was the team of Ali Ghiasi from Iran and Khidir Sulaiman from Iraq (pictured above). Rick Bothum of Viking was one of the contest participants.

4H CLUB

Pennington county 4-H leader's council met November 5 at 8 p.m. at the courthouse meeting room and was called to order by vice president, Sharon Hamre. Both the flag and the 4-H pledges were said the roll call was taken at the start of the meeting.

Secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved, and the bank balance is $1,813.83. A thank you was read from Leann Holen for the key award.

In old business, Howard Person reported on the 4-H display case for which the county commissioners have expressed favor. There was also a discussion on where to put the case. Mrs. Bert Kron will be going to the North Central States leader's forum in Illinois. The motion was made to spend $50 for two people to attend. Those volunteering to be alternates for the awards committee were: Violet Muzzy, Mary Broten and Sharon Wagner. Holiday craft fair was discussed and each club was assigned baked goods to bring for the bake sale.

In new business, the motion was adopted to accept the 1979-80 proposed budget.

Program of the evening consisted of slides shown by Pam Swanson from the Black River 4-H club on her exchange trip to Norway.

Black River

The Black River 4-H club held their monthly meeting November 8 in the Black River church. The meeting was called to order at 8:00 p.m. by President, Lynn Mosbeck.

Old Business: Thanks to the Halloween Party Committee Report on Junior Leader workshop by Roy Dobias.

New Business: We'll be collecting gifts for the Fergus Falls State Hospital. Christmas Party at our December meeting. Committee was formed for the "Adopt a Grandparent" program.

Demonstrations were given by Gene Mosbeck on Trapping Sets and Tom Scholin on Electric Circuits. Project talks were given by Kyle Kisch on Conservation and Joni Mosbeck and Wendy Doaias on Foods.

The program was on "Starting the 4-H records" led by Janice Noreen along with help to individuals by the junior leaders and remaining adult leaders. Lunch was served by Lorraine Mosbeck.

Papa Bear

The Papa Bear 4-H club held its monthly meeting at the city auditorium on November 13. Jennifer Westlin called the meeting to order. Danielle Anderson led us in pledges. Kay Lyn Espe called off roll call. There were six new members: Dena Sund, Richie & Mike Bendickson, Chris Oseid, and Corey and Melony Anderson. The treasurer's report was read.

Old business: Instead of adopting a grandparent we will serve cookies.

New Business: For the Holiday Craft Fair Dana Sevre and Danielle Anderson will make cookies. Others will help work. We elected Brenda Senum as Historian. Dana Sevre made a motion to adjourn the meeting. Danielle Anderson seconded it.

We played games for recreation.

Present at the meeting were 17 4-H members, 10 4-H parents, and no visitors.

PROMOTED to district staff sergeant with the Minnesota state patrol at Marshall is Anthony E. Kozojed, formerly of Thief River Falls. He has been stationed at Warren for a number of years as an officer of the local district commanded by Lloyd Rudd of Thief River Falls. Kozojed, at one time a member of the Thief River Falls police department, has been with the patrol for 12 years. His promotion was effective October 29.

Movie

Movie 4-H club held its monthly meeting at the Grand Town Hall November 12. Meeting was called to order by vice president Julie Schwartz. Roll call was to name your favorite Thanksgiving food. Flag pledges were said and secretary's report was read. Also, the treasurer's report was read and approved. New members were given 4-H pins.

Old business: Holiday Craft Fair was discussed and several volunteers will be working at the Fair.

New business: Christmas party was planned for Sunday, December 7 at 7:00-9:00 p.m. We also decided to draw names and the price range for the gifts was set at $1.25-$1.50. We also decided to donate $2.00 to Fergus Falls. We also decided to have an ornament contest, the winner receiving a silver dollar. Because of the high price of Christmas trees and the short time we would use it we decided to have a Charlie Brown Christmas tree instead. Games and songs will be the activities for the evening. Candy bags will be made and a pot luck lunch with a dish from each family will be for the meal. Awards that were not received on Awards Night were handed out.

Demonstrations were given by Peggy Landerville on "How to Make Oatmeal Cookies", Twyla Svendsgaard and Jayne Schwartz gave a team demonstration on how to make Washington dessert. Terry Courneya gave a demonstration on Parliamentary procedure. The meeting was adjourned by Rhonda Sanders and Carna Sanders.

Present at the meeting were 14 4-H'ers, four 4-H parents, and one visitor.

Top Sunflower Growers And Pioneer Cited

Clark E. Dahlgren, founding president and former chairman of the board of the Crookston-based Dahlgren & Co. processing firm, was honored last week at the first annual sunflower breakfast seminar. The conference was sponsored by the university of Minnesota technical college — Crookston as an outgrowth of UMC's sunflower bowl celebration, which has been held each fall at the school for the past 12 consecutive years.

With more than 110 area farmers, sunflower seed dealers, and corporate representatives in attendance at the Crookston Best Western Motor Inn, Dahlgren traveled from his present home in Florida to accept the inaugural "Sunflower Pioneer" award. The retired executive was cited for being among the first agri-businessmen in the Red River valley to recognize the value of sunflowers as a cash crop and to encourage widespread production of the commodity as well as development of new sunflower strains that have resulted in further diversification of the industry and introduction of new product lines.

A three-foot-tall wooden carving was presented to Dahlgren by the designer and craftsman, Dr. Marv Mattson, an agronomy professor on the faculty of UMC. Mattson's hand-made wall hanging, inscribed "Clark E. Dahlgren. . .A Pioneer," prominently features three sunflowers stained in hues of yellow and brown. An engraved plate on the back denotes the occasion and rationale for the award.

Nineteen other leaders in sunflower production were also given awards. Hailed by their respective seed distributors as "top growers" for their dedication to the continued expansion of the sunflower market were the following area producers:

A. C. "Curt" Borgen, Moorhead; Vernon Bratvold, Crookston; Morton Brendenmuhl, Moorhead; Bruce Brovold, Trail; Clifton Carlson, Gilby, N.D.; Russell Eck, Gonvick; George Flaskerud, Fosston; Everett Flesche, St. Hilaire; Manvel Green, St. Thomas, N.D.; Wayne Gustafson, McIntosh; Donald Holy, East Grand Forks; Harold Kalsnes, Thief River Falls; Jorgen Knutson, Red Lake Falls; Gerald LeBlanc, Crookston; Ken Mehrkens, Thief River Falls; Joe Ose, Thief River Falls; Vernon Plante, Crookston; Don Stenberg, Oklee; and Robert Wald, Thief River Falls.

Recipients in this category were awarded certificates of excellence and a specially-cast lapel pin shaped like a football with a sunflower mounted on it.

Officials say that a similar event will be planned for next fall in view of the excellent turnout at an early hour of the morning and the favorable feedback from those present.

Blind Service On Public TV

Area television viewers may watch Channel 2 Sunday evening for an interview with Swan Anderson, founder of White Cane, Inc., a service to the blind, at his home in Noyes.

Also appearing on the program will be Ardell Larson, outreach aide for Northwest Community Action, Inc., who has assisted from the beginning of the project. There will be a rerun of the same program at 10:30 p.m. on Tuesday, November 27.

Supplement To Statutes Now Available

Revisor of statutes announces the publication of the 1979 supplement to Minnesota Statutes, 1978. This publication includes the general and permanent laws enacted at the 1979 legislative session and must be used in conjunction with the four volume set of 1978 Statutues.

Price of the buckram-bound edition is $40 plus four per cent sales tax.

Orders will be shipped on receipt of letter with prepayment inclosed. It has been determined that the state of Minnesota is not authorized to provide materials or service without receiving payment and that all sales must be on a cash or prepayment basis. Due to this decision, official purchase orders without prepayment are no longer acceptable.

Supply is limited and no reprint is anticipated. It is suggested that purchases be made as soon as possible. Order from Department of Administration, Documents Division, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul 55155.

Fill Up Before Holiday Trip, Advises AAA

You may want to fill your car's gas tank in advance if you're planning on traveling over Thanksgiving, advised the Minnesota State Automobile Association (AAA). A survey of 65 gas stations throughout the state revealed that 60 per cent of them planned to be closed on Thanksgiving Day, said Minnesota AAA.

Generally however, motorists should find adequate gas supplies. Only four of the 65 stations reported that they had run out of some grade of fuel in the past month. But there are some signs of a slightly tighter gas supply; 54 per cent of the stations reported being closed on Sundays, compared with 44 per cent a month ago.

Meanwhile, prices continue to creep up — especially at the self-service stations, where prices rose an average 2.7 cents per gallon in the past month. At full-service stations, prices increased an average of 1.3 cents per gallon.

Currently, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is $1.038 for regular, $1.094 for premium, $1.076 for unleaded, $1.097 for premium unleaded and $1.012 for diesel.

At self-service stations, the average price per gallon is $1.012 for regular, $1.077 for premium, $1.048 for unleaded and $1.079 for premium unleaded.

The decision by President Carter to stop purchasing oil from Iran was expected to cause another price spiral, although it will take 30 to 60 days before the action affects supplies. "That gives us plenty of lead time to find other supplies," said Bob Thomas, a spokesman for Ashland Oil, one of the major gasoline suppliers in Minnesota. Thomas noted that if the Department of Energy implements the allocation system that was used during the 1973-74 oil embargo, the effects of the 700,000 barrels per day cutoff (of Iranian crude) would be equitably distributed throughout the country.

"It won't have an immediate impact," agreed Ken Wingard of the Minnesota Independent Retailers Association. However, Wingard did predict some dramatic price increases. "In the past two weeks wholesalers have increased their prices from one to three cents per gallon," he noted. "If we have a normal winter, we should get through it okay," Wingard said when asked about supplies.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association has called on all drivers to support President Carter's decision by using less gasoline. "If all Americans cooperate by saving just one or two gallons of gas each week, the U.S. can reduce its reliance on foreign oil without hardships and without making any drastic changes in our lifestyle," said J. B. Creal, AAA president.

Observing the 55 mph speed limit, using public transportation or carpooling where possible, keeping cars properly tuned, practicing good driving habits and eliminating unnecessary trips can all save a substantial amount of gas, said Creal.

Minnesota AAA also asked that motorists start the holiday season safely. "It's not a good idea to drive after eating a heavy meal, which can make you sleepy," said Dianne Nelsen, Minnesota AAA spokesperson. "And driving after drinking can be both illegal and unsafe," she added.

"Nobody thinks they'll be the ones to be in an accident, but 50,000 people are killed every year in the U.S. in traffic accidents. Wearing your seatbelts and driving within the 55 mph speed limit are the minimum steps you should take to insure the safety of yourself and your family," added Nelsen

Change Report System For Employers

Starting this month, Minnesota employers will receive unemployment benefit charge statements four times a year instead of twice.

Change was made at the request of employers who wanted more frequent notification of the names and amounts of unemployment benefits being paid to their ex-employees, said assistant commissioner Barbara Beerhalter, unemployment insurance division, Minnesota department of economic security.

Employers who rehire ex-employees protect their unemployment insurance benefit fund account balances and help keep their tax rates from increasing. Employers also can report irregularities in unemployment payments sooner to prevent possible overpayment of benefits to claimants.

Detecting errors while a claim is still active, rather than months after the claim is exhausted, allows the department to make necessary corrections more quickly and helps avoid improper charging to an employer's account.

Non-profit and governmental employers, who elect to reimburse the department for the exact amount of unemployment paid their ex-employees rather than pay a tax on their payroll, will have additional benefits from the new quarterly system. These employers will now be on a quarterly payment schedule similar to the tax-paying employers and will receive their cost statements three months sooner. The change will enable them to more accurately budget their unemployment insurance costs.

Area Services Of BSU Offer Classes Here

Alternate energy systems and consumer economics are just two of the subjects to be explored this winter through classes offered in locations by Bemidji state university's office of area services.

Courses designed for academic credit are scheduled to be held in Ah-Gwah-Ching, Akeley, Bemidji, Brainerd, Fosston, Grand Rapids, Hibbing, International Falls, Roseau, Staples, Thief River Falls, Wadena and the Bald Eagle outdoor learning center located between Cass Lake and Bena on highway 2.

LPN Seminar On Sex Abuse

Minnesota licensed practical nurses' association will be conducting an educational seminar for licensed practical nurses and other interested persons December 5, at the Sheraton Inn Northwest, Interstate 94 and U.S. 52 in Brooklyn Park, Minnesota.

Seminar on the topic of "Identifying Sexual Abuse" will be presented as a one day session. Registration or additional information is available from the Minnesota Licensed Practical Nurses' association, 1700 West Highway 36, Suite 616, St. Paul, Minnesota 55113.

RRV Historical Society Sets Regional Meet

A regional Christmas seminar and dinner is planned for 6:30 p.m., December 1, at the Ada high school cafeteria in Ada, featuring Dr. Paul Dovre, president of Concordia college in Moorhead. The topic of Dr. Dovre's address is "Religion: The Backbone of the Red River Valley Way of Life."

Sponsored by the Red River valley historical society and hosted by the Norman county historical society, this celebration will also include Scandinavian singers and musical groups presenting religious music of the pioneer era.

According to RRVHS director Mary Ostling, the event is a very special one. "It's not often in the modern world that the importance of religion in each of our lives is highlighted and celebrated," she said.

Dinner and seminar are open to the public. Tickets are $5 per person and reservations can be made by writing or calling Mrs. Lenora Johnson, Ada, MN 56510 (218) 784-4911 or by writing the Red River valley historical society, Box 733, Moorhead, MN 56560 or calling 236-9140. Reservations are due by November 26.

School Patrols Eligible For State Awards

All Minnesota schools with school safety patrols or school bus patrols are eligible to compete in this year's safety patrol award program sponsored by the Minnesota safety council.

John P. Sopsic, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public safety, urges elementary schools to enter the award competition by completing the written report forms which will be sent out this month. Forms must be returned by December 15.

Any school which has not received the forms by November 15 should contact the Minnesota Safety Council, 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul, MN 55102.

Written reports will be scored and qualifying schools will be inspected by Minnesota state patrol troopers. An award committee will make the final selection.

Minnesota safety council will present plaques for the award of honor, for outstanding achievement and for meritorious achievement at the council's safety conference in May.

Inflation price you out of a new building? Take a look at Stran.

And reconsider.

As your Authorized Stran Builder, we're very much aware of how inflation has affected the cost of building new facilities.

Costs have risen dramatically for both materials and construction labor. That's why it makes good building sense to take a look at Stran's building systems approach. Why?

- Most of the building is fabricated in a modern manufacturing plant to take advantage of automation and more productive man-hour utilization.
- The system is designed and produced to go together fast at your job site. Saving valuable man-hours in on-site construction costs.

So before calling off your plans for a new building, call us and let's see how we can help you defeat inflation. We may have you breaking ground after all.

Basketball Format Changed

Thief River Falls is the defending Region 8AA Sub Region 4 high school basketball champion. But the Prowlers won't have a chance to defend that title this winter because of the changes made in the Region 8AA post-season tournament format.

Instead of competing against long-time athletic rivals Bemidji, Crookston and East Grand Forks in the Sub Region 4 tournament, Thief River Falls will find itself playing in the Region 8AA North Half basketball tournament this year against Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls, Moorhead and Park Rapids, in addition to Bemidji, Crookston and East Grand Forks.

And Thief River Falls head coach Glen Peters doesn't like the idea.

"Our kids were really proud of our Sub Region 4 title last year," he said. "Now the chances of winning a trophy are pretty slim. Moorhead will win the thing eight out of ten years — even with a lousy ball club."

"Now, even if you have an exceptional ball club — like I think Crookston will have this year — you're still going to lose to Moorhead by 15-20 points in the tournament," he figures.

The 1980 North Half Region 8AA basketball tournament will be played at Moorhead State University. A coaches' seeding meeting will be held Mon., Feb. 11, with a pair of first round games planned Tues., Feb. 19, and Thurs., Feb. 21. Two semifinal games will be played Fri., Feb. 22, with the championship game planned Sat., Feb. 23.

The North Half champion will meet the South Half representative in the state tournament-qualifying Region 8AA championship game Fri., Feb. 29, at St. Cloud State University. South Half competitors are Alexandria, Melrose, St. Cloud Apollo, St. Cloud Tech, Brainerd, Little Falls, Sauk Rapids and newcomer Cold Spring-Rocori.

Peters also argues against the Moorhead site, figuring it takes the tournament away from the fans in this area. The Sub Region 4 format featured rotating tournament sites among the four participants.

A year ago Thief River Falls finished the regular season with a 9-9 record, then edged Bemidji 60-56 and got by Crookston 72-69 in a pair of thrilling Sub Region 4 games. Facing Sub Region 1 winner St. Cloud Tech in the Region 8AA semifinals at Bemidji State University, Thief River Falls came out a 67-45 loser.

Miscellaneous

+Junior center Mark Kirkpatrick of Oklee was named winner of the Steve Vaneps Award, presented annually to the finest offensive lineman on the Moorhead State University football team. Juniors Don Dicken and Murray Semanko of Thief River Falls were letter winners on the Dragons' 1979 NIC co-championship team. Semanko was also the second-leading receiver on the MSU junior varsity team this fall, catching 11 passes for 120 yards as a starter at tight end.

+New Roseau high school basketball coach Ron Ruud, whose Rams open the 1979-80 season in Thief River Falls Nov. 30, feels Roseau "has the potential to be very good." With seven players standing 6-0 or taller, the Rams will have good overall size. "We will be competitive and ready to give anyone a good game," promises Ruud whose Rams are the defending North Border Conference champions.

+Lake of the Woods high school basketball team, the defending champion in District 32, boasts seven players standing 6-2 or taller and features four returning starters off last year's 18-6 ball club to rank as a solid Region 8A title threat. Leading the Bears will be 6-6 senior Todd Robinson who averaged 16.9 points and 11.7 rebounds per game a year ago. "We're big this year, the biggest team we've ever had," confirmed Lake of the Woods coach Ron Omerza. "And we're quick. We've got kids, including some of our bigger kids, who can shoot the eyes out of the basket at 20 feet. I'm looking for a good year." The Bears start the 1979-80 basketball season with a 32-game home court winning streak.

EIGHTEEN LINCOLN HIGH school girls will compete in the 1979 Section 3 swimming and diving championships, scheduled to be held Tuesday and Wednesday at Bemidji State University. The defending champion Prowlers, who won Section 3 titles in 1975, 1977 and 1978, finished the 1979 regular season schedule with a 6-6 dual meet mark. Thief River Falls Section 3 entrants include, front row left to right, Karla Lokken and Shelley McGann; middle row, Rochelle Farmes, Shari McGann, Peggy Achenbach, Lisa Desrocher, Karen Dillon and Mary Geatz; back row, Franki Kuyath, Sarah Green, Johanna Desrocher, Kathy Dillon, Robyn Dallmann, Joan Glauque and Betsie Hallstrom. Missing at the time of the picture were Andrea Lia, Brenda Lund and Lori Swanson.

Prowlers Swim In Section 3 Meet At Bemidji This Week

Thief River Falls, the dominant team in northern Minnesota girls swimming competition the past four years, finds itself cast in the role of the underdog this week as the Prowlers ready themselves for the 1979 Section 3 swimming and diving championships, scheduled to be held Tuesday and Wednesday at Bemidji State University.

Coached by John Hustad, the Prowlers won Section 3 titles in 1975, 1977 and 1978. In 1976 Thief River Falls finished a close third, a mere two points behind co-champions Brainerd and St. Cloud Tech. A year ago the Prowlers beat the field by some 57 points.

However, graduation finally caught up to the Prowlers and they rank no better than third in the pre-meet forecasts after a 6-6 regular season dual meet season record. A strong Moorhead team is expected to end Thief River Falls' championship reign, with Brainerd ticked for second and the Prowlers third.

John Hustad

"Moorhead is the favorite," agrees Thief River Falls coach John Hustad. "They have an awful lot of depth, starting right at the top. The gap between Brainerd and us is a lot smaller than the gap between Brainerd and Moorhead."

Tuesday's preliminary competition starts at 5 p.m. Wednesday's finals begin at 1. Top two Section 3 finishers in each event, plus the top four divers, earn spots in the 1979 state meet Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. Swimmers can also make the state field by matching qualifying standards, but those are set awfully high.

Junior Brenda Lund, going after her third straight Section 3 diving title, figures to be Thief River Falls' best championship bet this week. A smooth performer, Lund "has got to be considered the favorite," according to Hustad who also feels sophomore Lisa Desrocher could be a state meet possibility in diving. "Lisa was third last year and she's been improving by leaps and bounds," he said.

Junior Franki Kuyath is the defending Section 3 champion in the 100-yard breaststroke, but she faces a tough field this year, as does Johanna Desrocher, the Prowlers' lone senior who was second in the event a year ago.

Sprinters Kathy Dillon and Betsie Hallstrom, both juniors, also rank as potential Thief River Falls state meet qualifiers. Dillon figures to be among the top 100-yard freestylers and Hallstrom should be a contender in the 50-yard freestyle.

And Hustad feels both Thief River Falls relay teams could be state entrants. The 200-yard medley relay team features freshman Sarah Green in the backstroke, Kuyath in the breaststroke, junior Joan Glauque in the butterfly and Hallstrom in the freestyle. The 400-yard freestyle relay team includes Lund, Glauque, Dillon and Hallstrom.

Rest of the Thief River Falls Section 3 qualifiers include Dillon, freshman Mary Geatz and seventh grader Shelley McGann in the 200-yard freestyle; Johanna Desrocher, sophomore Robyn Dallmann and freshmen Karen Dillon and Shari McGann in the 200-yard individual medley; Lund, Green and eighth grader Karla Lokken in the 50-yard freestyle; junior Lori Swanson in diving; Glauque, junior Andrea Lia and freshman Rochelle Farmes in the 100-yard butterfly; Lokken and Shelley McGann in the 100-yard freestyle; Kuyath, Geatz and Shari McGann in the 500-yard freestyle; Lia, Green and Karen Dillon in the 100-yard backstroke; and Dallmann and junior Peggy Achenbach in the 100-yard breaststroke.

"The attitude of the kids is pretty good," noted Hustad. "Their taper is coming along well. Their spirit is getting better. They realize they can do as well as they want to. They need to have confidence in themselves. Last year we had built-in confidence. This year they'll have to find it. If they can do that. . ."

Joining Moorhead, Brainerd and Thief River Falls in the Section 3 field will be Alexandria, Bemidji, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls, Little Falls, Melrose and Park Rapids.

"I guarantee they (Prowlers) will swim well," promised Hustad. "They may not be the fastest, but they'll swim hard."

LHS Basketball Squad Missing Scoring Punch

A year ago a 9-9 Lincoln high school basketball team averaged 60 points per game, with half of those points provided by guard Steve Enderlein and forward Jeff Oseid. Graduation took only two starters from the 1978-79 Prowlers, but it's Enderlein and Oseid and their 30 points per game who are missing as Thief River Falls prepares for the start of the 1979-80 season.

"When you take a couple of guys out of the line-up like Enderlein and Oseid, it's tough," admitted Thief River Falls head coach Glen Peters who must find a way to either make up those 30 points or a way to play awfully tough defense.

"We'll have to be defensive-minded," acknowledged Peters, "because we really don't have the good outside shooting. We expect to show improvement on defense and on the boards."

Seniors Kyle Hams, a 5-9 guard, Todd Young, a 6-1 center, and Jim Nyland, a 6-1 forward, were all starters a year ago. Hams was a Northwest Athletic Conference all-conference choice last year when he averaged 11.4 points and 6.2 assists per game while shooting a team-high 73 per cent from the free throw line. Young, in his first year of high school basketball, improved dramatically as the season progressed, pulling down 195 rebounds and blocking 39 shots while averaging 6.8 points per game. Nyland averaged 7.1 points per game and shot a team-high 56 per cent from the field.

However, it was Enderlein and Oseid, both three-year starters, who represented the bulk of the offense as Enderlein, a four-year letterman, scored 19 points per game and Oseid averaged 12 to earn the team MVP award. A WCCO all-stater, Enderlein finished his high school career with 950 points.

Three seniors are the likeliest candidates to join Hams, Young and Nyland in the starting lineup. But 6-2 Greg Miller, 6-1 Gregg Peterson and 5-10 Mark Schmitke all saw limited playing time last year.

"I'm hoping we'll have balanced scoring," explained Peters, "and have Kyle come up with some 25-point nights. He's capable of doing it, too. We feel he's one of the better guards in the area. I think they're all capable of scoring for us, but people like Miller and Young will have to become more aggressive and get some baskets off the offensive boards."

Hams and Young will serve as co-captains of the Prowlers this winter.

"I think we'll be competitive," said Peters. "We did lose some good ball players, but I don't think anybody is going to blow us off the court. I think we're going to provide some good basketball."

In addition to the graduation losses, the Prowlers also lost an assistant coaching position in a budget cut, with Vern Treat serving as Peters' lone assistant this year.

A little bigger and a little quicker than they were last year, the Prowlers hope to be able to run with the basketball this winter. "Our fast break, led by Young and Hams, should be pretty decent," mentioned Peters.

Lincoln basketball team initiates the 1979-80 Thief River Falls winter sports season by hosting Roseau Fri., Nov. 30.

"This team has a lot of confidence in itself," noted Peters. "They're very enthusiastic."

Cowart Named Northland MVP

Mike Cowart, a freshman runningback from Norland high school in Miami, Fla. was named most valuable player on the 1979 Northland community college football team, it was announced recently by coach Irv Smith of the Northmen.

Cowart set new Northland records this year when he carried the ball 186 times for 795 yards. His efforts earned the 5-8, 172-pounder a spot on the MJCAA Region 13 all-region football team.

It was also announced that Chris Kneen, Albert Padron and Tony Smith were selected as honorary Northland tri-captains this fall. Kneen is a 6-6, 220-pound sophomore offensive lineman from White Bear Lake; Padron is a 5-10, 195-pound freshman linebacker from Miami Senior High; and Smith is a 6-0, 160-pound freshman quarterback from Inkster, Mich.

But despite several new team and individual records and a best-ever 3-5 finish in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA), Northland placed only Cowart on the 1979 MJCAA Northern Division all-star team announced last week. Itasca, which matched Northland's 3-5 record, led the ballotting with six representatives on the team while coaches selected five members from unbeaten Northern Division champion Golden Valley Lutheran.

Seven Northmen were given Northern Division honorable mention status: Smith, Kneen, Padron, defensive backs Paul Wilcox and Jim McCue, offensive tackle Rafael Millian and defensive lineman Jeff Reese.

Seniors Bill Jury, Jeff Ulrich and John Dillon were Thief River Falls representatives on the 1979 Northwest Athletic Conference all-conference football team announced Wednesday by league coaches at their annual fall meeting.

Jury, a 5-11, 160-pounder, was named to the team for the second straight year as a defensive back. He joins Bemidji's Dale Leonard and Jeff Beaulieu as 1978 repeaters on this year's honor squad.

Ulrich, a 5-10, 155-pound quarterback, and Dillon, a 6-0, 185-pound fullback, were first time NWAC selections as offensive backs.

The 22-man NWAC all-conference team featured seven players from the pennant-winning Crookston team that reached the Class A state football playoff semifinals. The Pirates' picks included offensive linemen Robert Hanson and Scott Bigger, offensive back Tim Knotek, defensive lineman Bob Clauson and Paul Holmquist and defensive backs Mark Doda and Rick Schmitz.

Bemidji selections were Tim Kelm, Craig Erhart, Nelson Rotto, Beaulieu and Leonard.

East Grand Forks was represented by Art Hulteng, Terry Mishler, Todd Selk and Dave Swanberg.

Fergus Falls' Daryl Tysdal, Dave Bergerson and John Mielke rounded out the team.

Tysdal and Holmquist, both juniors, were the only underclassmen named to the 1979 all-conference team.

In other conference matters, East Grand Forks officially announced its plans to withdraw from NWAC football competition at the end of the 1980 season, a move first reported in the Times over a year ago. Crookston, as it was mentioned here, too, is expected to follow suit at the league's spring meeting.

But even with the demise of the Northwest Athletic Conference as a football league, conference officials are expected to continue NWAC competition in basketball, baseball, tennis, cross country, golf and track for both boys and girls.

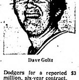
At Pie, Ice Cream Social . . .

Dave Goltz Will Be Here Nov. 26

Dave Goltz, who made a name for himself in major league baseball by pitching for the Minnesota Twins and who made millions by signing recently with the Los Angeles Dodgers, will be a special guest speaker Mon., Nov. 26, at the annual Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club pie and ice cream social.

The event, centered around Lincoln high school athletes and their families, will include the pie and ice cream get together at 6:30 p.m. in the Lincoln cafeteria, followed by a sale of pies, donated by the players' parents, by members of the Sports Boosters. Activity shifts to the Lincoln auditorium for a 7:30 address by Goltz which is open free of charge to the public.

Goltz, a member of the Minnesota Twins organization since 1967, signed as a free agent with the Los Angeles Dodgers for a reported $3 million, six-year contract.



Dave Goltz

Born in Pelican Rapids, raised in Rothsay and now living in Fergus Falls, Goltz pieced together six straight double figure winning seasons with the Twins. He has averaged 14.5 victories per year over the last six seasons and has 96 major league wins to his credit since his debut with the Twins in 1972. A 20-game winner in 1977, Goltz was 14-13 in 1979 with a 4.18 earned run average when he completed 12 of his 35 starts.

After signing with the Twins, Goltz spent five years in the minor leagues at Sarasota, St. Cloud, Charlotte, Orlando, Lynchburg and Tacoma before spending part of the 1972 season with the Twins when he was 3-3 in 15 games.

Goltz was 6-4 for Minnesota in 32 games in 1973, but spent part of 1974 at Tacoma before finishing 10-10 with the Twins in 28 games. He established himself as a solid major leaguer with back-to-back 14-14 records in 1975 and 1976, followed by a 20-11 campaign in 1977 and a 15-10 finish in 1978.

The 6-4, 215-pound righthander played out his option with the Twins last summer and entered the baseball free agent draft where he was the first player ever to be picked by the maximum 13 teams on the first round of the four-year-old draft.

TRFAHA To Start Candy Sale Today

Annual Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) candy sale starts today (Monday) as young hockey players sell boxes of candy on a door-to-door basis to raise funds for the youth hockey program.

Players are scheduled to meet at the city auditorium today to recieve their candy. Bantams, Pee-Wees and Squirts are to meet at 4 p.m., with the 7-8-year-old Tiny Mites gathering at 4:30.

TRFAHA officials urge community support for the candy sale that has helped provide funds for such projects as the $10,000 remodeling project for the old arena, that will be completed in time for the 1979-80 hockey season.

Indians Lose Class B Title Game Friday

Pine-to-Prairie Conference champion Mahnomen lost a 15-6 decision to Gaylord Friday in the championship game of the 1979 Minnesota Class B state high school football playoffs.

Titles in all five classes of competition — AA, A, B, C and nine-man — were decided Friday night at various sites around the state as the Minnesota State High School League-sponsored 1979 state playoffs came to an end.

Columbia Heights won the Class AA championship with an 8-3 victory over Richfield; Rochester Lourdes took the Class A crown with a 22-6 win over Apple Valley; Bird Island-Lake Lillian claimed the Class C title with a 34-6 rout of Harmony; and Russell picked up the nine-man crown with a 17-14 win over Toivola-Meadowlands.

Top Of State Selects 1979 All-Conference

Gene LaDoucer of Karlstad was named winner of the most valuable player award in the Top of the State football conference this fall and Joe Biondi of Warraod was selected as coach of the year as league officials handed out post-season honors.

Members of the 1979 Top of the State all-conference football team include:

Warraod — Tom Roberts, Ed Christian, Jim Cole, Jim Gustafson, Ken Thunder.

Stephen — Bill Sczepanski, Troy Bazey, Greg Rosten, Doug Thiobodo, Craig Hvidsten.

Roseau — Mark Huglen, Jim Pederson, Craig Vacura.

Argyle — Mark Hapka, Greg Lubarski, David Bergeron.

Marshall County Central — Scott Peters, Jeff Johnson.

Karlstad — Gene LaDoucer, Ron Helling.

Hallock — Kelly Plaine.

Lake of the Woods — Mike Punton.

East Grand Forks Sacred Heart — Jeff Kerr.

TOM LYKKEN, a member of the Thief River Falls archery club is recognized as one of the top amateur archers in the nation, a claim backed by a second place finish in the 1979 national field round competition at Detroit Lakes this summer that followed a third place performance in the same freestyle unlimited meet a year earlier at Aurora, Ill. Lykken also owns five Minnesota amateur freestyle unlimited state titles — two in 1979 when he took both the field round the 900 round.

TRF Indoor Archery League Meeting Dec. 6

Tom Lykken Is Among Top Archers In Nation

by Mike Lundgren
Times Sports Editor

Archery, which he began as a money-saving hobby, has turned into a year-round vocation for Tom Lykken, a member of the Thief River Falls archery club who is recognized as one of the top amateur archers in the nation.

In fact, Dana Klos of the Thief River Falls club says Lykken is "maybe the top amateur archer in the nation, or at least in the top two."

Lykken himself would only smile in response to the ranking given him by Klos. However, he certainly has the qualifications to back up such a claim. He placed second in the nation last summer in the highly competitive amateur freestyle unlimited division field round competition at Detroit Lakes. The five-day meet attracted archers from 46 states.

"If I wouldn't have gotten the nerves the first day I would have won," recalled Lykken who placed third in the same meet at Aurora, Ill. a year earlier.

Nerves apparently haven't posed much of a problem for Lykken at the state level where he's won five state titles in the past three years. He won both 900 round and field round titles in 1977, a 900 round championship in 1978 and another double in the 900 and field round shoots in 1979.

A broken wrist kept him out of the 1979 state indoor meet after back-to-back second place finishes in 1977 and 1978.

All that, plus a host of local tournament trophies, belong to an Arctic Enterprises, Inc. engineer who is beginning just his fifth year of archery competition.

"I used to shoot trap, but that started getting too expensive, so I thought I'd try something else. But it didn't turn out to be that way (less expensive)," said Lykken in reference to his switch from gun to bow. Frequent trips to area tournaments, plus those appearances at the state and national meets take a toll on the pocketbook, to say nothing of the cost of the sophisticated equipment needed to compete at that level.

The financial picture has tempted Lykken to turn from amateur competition to professional status where cash prizes and manufacturer sponsorship would be the incentives.

"I probably would have been (pro) already if it wasn't for the location," he said. The Minneapolis-St. Paul area would offer the closest professional competition, and sponsor fees don't cover transportation costs. "There's really not that many financial benefits from being pro," admitted Lykken.

Instead, he'll continue to get his enjoyment from shooting two or three times per week at the Thief River Falls club indoor and outdoor ranges, complemented by a few local tournaments and, of course, trips to the state and national meets.

"I just like to shoot," says Lykken. "And that's what's nice about archery — it's a year-round sport." Archers, pointed out Lykken, can hunt from September through November, compete in the indoor league season from January through March and then shoot in the outdoor league from June to September.

"After being pumped up for the national meet, it's kind of hard to get back into it," mentioned Lykken. "But after a couple of months off, I'm ready to go again."

Thief River Falls club members will begin their 1980 indoor league season in early January, shooting at 20-yard targets above the old arena. A December 6 organizational meeting, designed for all interested archers, will be held at 7 p.m. in the library meeting room.

Some 70 archers competed in last year's indoor league season. Newcomers are always welcome, said Lykken. In 1980 the league will form four-man bow hunting teams limited to bow hunting equipment, and three-man target teams that can utilize any type of equipment. And with five classes of handicap competition, beginners won't be mis-matched against the likes of Lykken and other top Thief River Falls shooters like Jerry Amundgaard, Les Nelson, Mike Lorentz, Dave Mugaas and Rick Bruggeman, who beat Lykken for the 1978 state indoor title.

Although the Thief River Falls archery club has been in operation since the early 1950's, interest has really picked up in recent years. New equipment has had a lot to do with the recent upswing, says Lykken. "New equipment has really brought out the interest. The compound bow has made it a much more enjoyable sport; it's a much easier piece of equipment to shoot. There's really nothing physical about the sport. All you need is a lot of concentration and practice," he says.

Lykken is an active recruiter for archery. "We have nice facilities in Thief River Falls," he says. The indoor league requires shooters to post a weekly score, but the round can be shot at any time. Club and league fees will get an archer a key to the indoor range and the facility will be at the archer's disposal. "Our indoor range has 20-yard targets," mentioned Lykken. "It's great practice for the bow hunter. A person could go out and spend $150 and have really good equipment for the bow hunting league, then be all ready to go hunting, besides." The target team competitors could be spending considerably more if they desire, with prices for equipment starting at the $350 level.

For Tom Lykken the 1980 local competition will get him ready for next summer's national meet at Watkins Glen, N.Y. in July. "I'd really like to win the nationals," he confesses.

Cargill's making sunflowers grow.

The sunflower industry's growing with top quality hybrids like Cargill 204, 205 and 894.

204
- Ideal combination of yield potential, uniformity and disease resistance.
- Produces strong stalks and good leaf cover.

205
- Offers same outstanding agronomic characteristics as 204
- Matures four to five days earlier than 204.

894
- Consistently ranks in the top spots for average seed yields
- Assured Cargill quality.

Check with us today about one of our top quality Cargill sunflower hybrids.

"CREATE YOUR OWN PADDED CELL"

Model rooms above illustrate the concept of the personal "padded cell."

It IS possible to have your own private retreat to get away from it all, a place to hide. And, it can be done in your own house.

Almost every home has a corner or space that isn't used. Looking around with an open mind will turn up one. It could be under the stairs, a corner of the basement or garage, or even in a utility room. (As a last resort there's the far end of the family room or corner of a bedroom.)

"Making such a private and cozy retreat is easier than imagined," explains Betty Tisher, director of the Bissell Consumer Service Institute. "There's an abundance of low-maintenance materials and ingenious ideas one can borrow to create a private place for himself or anyone in the family."

Tisher suggests carpeting as one of the best labor saving and creative materials available. It's versatile enough for a number of decorating applications, not the least of which is a lining for a luxurious padded cell that can be one's own corner of the world. The entire wall surface does not have to be used as a base for applying luxurious and colorful carpet; it often can be glued or stapled just around the edges.

If the area selected is short on sides, make one or more from plywood screens or other room dividers. Inexpensive carpet remnants of the plushest variety or basic indoor-outdoor carpeting will disguise the crudest of partitions.

Carpeting will also transform the roughest basement wall into the most decorative and colorful corner imaginable. The cell can be decorated to one's personal taste with family pictures, posters or graphic art created from contrasting carpet scraps.

Further insulation can be obtained with a carpeted ceiling and floor. It can be done with the least expensive floor coverings available. And it beats painting and carpentry.

Furniture doesn't create a problem, either. Your own constructed storage units, beds and headboards, couches and tables take on decorator elegance when covered with carpeting.

More creativity can be achieved with homemade platforms for alternate seating or sleeping. Carpet covers them for comfort with class.

"Best of all," states Tisher, "enclosed and softened with carpeting, your padded cell will require little upkeep. A brush over with a carpet sweeper and occasional vacuuming will keep your cell shipshape for relaxing and enjoying."

Plans for carpet covered modular couches, beds and headboards, tables and storage units made of plywood are available from the Bissell Consumer Service Institute, Department C, Box 1888, Grand Rapids, Michigan, 49501. They may be easily scaled to individual room size.

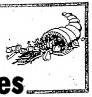
Elderly Recall The Past...

Thanksgiving Is Time Of Memories



by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Thanksgiving is a time for special moments, memories and family gatherings, and the residents of Oakland Park nursing home in Thief River Falls recalled all of these ingredients during a recent Times interview at the home.

John Anderson, 94, an Oakland Park resident for the past two years, was in his teens when the first automobile appeared in his native land of Sweden — on Thanksgiving day. People lined up on roads to see the car, he said. They were lined up between towns 35 miles apart.

"We knew he was comin' alright," he said, smiling. "We heard him tootin' his horn, and then we looked up and there he was. None of us thought that anything like that could ever happen."

Viewers went home to work following this incident, until that evening, when they were invited to their employer's home for a Thanksgiving dinner," he said. "We had geese we raised ourselves and all kinds of goodies," he said. "Thanksgiving was a big day then. The tables were dressed with linens made out of flax. They never used cotton then. We celebrated almost all night and all the workers got presents following the dinner. Boy, oh boy, it was good."

One worker received five krona (approximately $1.25 today) for taking care of the cows all night during the celebration, he said. And all the workers slept in the barn that night.

"I had a nice place there," he said. "I even had my own bed."

"We danced and talked and drank whisky from Denmark because we could buy it cheaper there," he said. "We weren't supposed to bring it into Sweden, but we did anyway. Women would stuff their bloomers with whisky bottles to bring to the celebration. It was cheaper that way," he said, laughing. "We had a good time jumpin' and dancin'."

The owner of the place was paralyzed, he said, so the workers could not make too much noise.

Anderson's work duties consisted of plowing fields with a team of horses each day, he said. Each worker had his own team and when there

Film showings are free of charge and open to children of all ages.

Films to be featured in the morning include: "The Pirates," "Swimmy," "Flash," "Free To Be... You and Me," "Another Fine Mess," "Television Land," and "Playful Pandas." In the afternoon films include "Floorwalkers," "Sand Castles," "Paul Bunyan," "Ben and Me," "It Ain't City Music," "Me and Dad's New Wife," and "The Shout It Alphabet" film.

Hearing At Newfolden On Watershed

Hearing on a petition for a change in the boundary line of the Middle river-Snake river watershed will be held Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Newfolden community center with Bernard Singer as hearing examiner.

A petition to change the boundaries of the district was signed by the board of managers of the district and filed with the Minnesota water resources board on August 23. The district was established in August of 1970.

Anyone who desires to become a party to the case must submit a timely petition to intervene to the hearing examiner. At the hearing Tuesday, however, all persons interested in or affected by the change will be given an opportunity to be heard without becoming parties to the action. Anyone desiring to intervene must submit a written request to the hearing examiner by 4:30 p.m. Friday, November 23.

Lands to be included in the territory of the district include 12 parcels in Tamarac township, 17 parcels in Middle River township, 13 parcels in Alma township, one parcel in Wright township, four parcels in East Park township, seven parcels in Huntly township and 22 parcels in Como township, all in Marshall county.

Scout Troop 59 Members Earn Advancement

Court of awards for Boy scout troop 59 at Zion Lutheran church was held Monday evening with Jim VanSchaick, senior patrol leader, conducting the event.

Doug Amiot was advanced to first class, Corey Arnold, Randy Arnold, Mike Melby, Chris Oakland and Jim VanSchaick to second class and Dan Bartsch, Jeff Michalicek and Craig Olson to tenderfoot rank. Morris Owen presented star rank progress award to Rick Camp.

Brian Casavan is also a member of the troop who took part in the formal awards ceremony. Seven merit badges were presented and parents, grandparents and other family members were in attendance.

Steve Fisher, chief of the Pa-Hin lodge of the Order of the Arrow, encouraged scouts to live by the scout law and promise and set forth goals for them to achieve. Morris Owen stated in his final remarks that to put the world together you must first put the boy together.

Jerry Oakland and Jim Hoks are co-scoutmasters of troop 59.

Mystery Light Noted At Farm Near Goodridge

Another situation involving an unexplained brilliant light light was reported to the Times Tuesday by Gordon Wold of rural Goodridge. He experienced the sighting of a bright light in his yard shortly after 1 a.m. Tuesday.

Wold said he awakened and noticed light in the kitchen of the farm house located nine miles east and half a mile south from the intersection of highways 1 and 219 south of Goodridge. Thinking there might be a fire in one of the buildings or a car in the yard, he got up and looked outside.

He said there was a brilliant light which seemed to be located in front of the garage door about 100 feet from the house. The wall of the garage was brightly lit, he said, and the white light illuminated much of the farm yard. The light was bright enough so that he could easily read the clock on the kitchen wall and it showed 1:03 a.m.

After turning on the yard light initially when he thought someone may have been in the yard, he shut it off and watched the light for several minutes. He said it appeared to be about two feet in diameter. After watching it for a few minutes he went to awaken his wife and when he returned to the window the light had disappeared. He was unable to say if it had moved in disappearing.

Wold said he was unable to sleep for most of the rest of the night and that in the morning his eyes felt like they had grit in them. When he inspected the area in the morning he could find no tracks in the snow nor any evidence of heat in the area, he said.

Wold said he was reluctant to report the experience for fear it wouldn't be believed, but added that he believed such events should be reported for public information.

Market Value Boosted 30 Per Cent

Increase Is Ordered For Ag Lands In Pennington

Pennington is among 10 counties in northwestern Minnesota to be given a 30 per cent increase in market valuation of agricultural lands by the state department of revenue, according to Gerard DeHaan, county assessor. County auditors and assessors were notified of the adjustment in a letter from Dennis J. Erno, assistant commissioner of revenue, and the information was to the Pennington county board of commissioners Tuesday.

Although the market value will be increased, DeHaan said, the proportion of taxes paid by owners of agricultural lands likely will not be substantially changed. This results from a corresponding decrease in the percentage rate applied to the market value of agricultural lands to determine assessed value. It is the assessed value to which mill levies are applied to determine the amount of taxes to be paid.

"It is more than a little complicated and the procedures change every year," the assessor said. "Because of the adjustments made in percentage rates to determine assessed value, however, as well as expansion of the homestead credit from 160 to 240 acres, we expect the mandatory market value increase will have virtually no effect on proportional tax payments."

This is not to say that 1979 taxes payable in 1980 will not increase over last year in dollar amount. If the taxing bodies — county, school district, city or township — budget more local funds for operations in the coming year, more money will be required and levies applied accordingly.

DeHaan said it is expected that Pennington county's limited market value for taxation purposes will be $176 million in the coming year, compared to $134 million for the current year. This is expected to mushroom to near $300 million the following year when the limited value provision is eliminated in the assessment procedure.

Other counties involved in the 10-county area where the 30 per cent increase in market value of agricultural lands was ordered are Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Polk, Red Lake, Clearwater, Mahnomen and Norman.

The letter of explanation sent to county assessors and auditors by assistant commissioner Erno is as follows:

The market value of certain classes of property in the county will be going up before property tax bills are determined for this coming year. This development is a result of action taken by the state board of equalization — that's the commissioner of revenue — directing that percentage increases be made to the market values of properties in those classes.

But don't be alarmed. The percentage increases, when applied to the market value of those property classes, won't cause a rise in the total

UNITED WAY BOARD of directors has announced that the foundation for its pyramid of success is nearly complete. With a goal of $75,000 this year, the Thief River Falls area United Way has received more than $20,000 to date and cash and pledges are being received daily. Mrs. Muriel Olin and Ron Nelson, co-chairmen of the downtown Thief River Falls area campaign, are pictured above as they illustrate the effort needed to reach the goal. They encourage all persons contacted to complete their donor cards and return them to the volunteer workers, and any business not contacted by a United Way volunteer to call 681-4303 or 681-7216. Persons who wish to donate but will not be contacted in the business or professional area may send their donations directly to the United Way at post office box 276, Thief River Falls. There will be no residential door-to-door campaign this year. Nelson and Mrs. Olin remind community residents of the individual's part in the campaign by repeating the slogan, "Thanks to you, it works for all of us, the United Way"

Santa To Visit Area Children In TRF Dec. 8

Retail business association of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce has made arrangements for Santa Claus to pay a visit to the city on Saturday, December 8.

Santa will be headquartered at the city auditorium from 1 to 4 p.m. that date to visit with youngsters and wish them a Merry Christmas. He will also accept letters youngsters may want to bring and his helpers will distribute candy canes and popcorn balls to the young visitors.

Lanham Leaves Scout Council Executive Post

Charles I. Lanham Jr. has been named scout executive of the Baltimore (Md.) area council, Boy Scouts of America, one of the largest councils in the Country. Lanham will assume his new duties in Baltimore on December 1.

Lanham had served as scout executive of the Northern Lights council since July 16, 1975. The council encompasses some 100,000 square miles, including the entire state of North Dakota, a few counties of Montana and South Dakota, and 18 counties in western Minnesota including Pennington.

Teenage Pilot Flies Solo On 16th Birthday

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Nikie Hink did not drive a car on her sixteenth birthday like most young people do at that age. She chose to spend her birthday 1,000 feet above the ground — flying an airplane.

Nikie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hink of St. Hilaire, took her flight solo yesterday at the Thief River Falls regional airport. She is currently the only student in this area to take a flight solo at 16.

Her airplane-oriented family seems to be her reason for becoming involved in the hobby.

"My dad and grandfather are both pilots," she said. "My dad just asked me one day if I wanted to get started flying. I said I did, and he set my goal to fly on my sixteenth birthday. And I did it."

Flight solos occur when an instructor feels the student is ready to go up into the air by himself or herself. The first solo consists of taking off and landing three times. Students fly 20 hours with an instructor and 20 hours without the instructor, according to Greg Swanson, Nikie's instructor for the solo. Forty hours of flying are needed to obtain a private license, which authorizes the person to fly by himself, he said.

A private license may be obtained when ground school courses and flying sessions are completed, and when the student turns 17. With a private license, the pilot is permitted to carry passengers in the plane. At 18, a commercial pilot's license may be obtained, allowing the person to get paid for flying a particular plane. A commercial license can only be obtained after completing a written exam and after 250 hours of flying are completed"

Nikie has had 14 hours of flying so far, she said. Usually, 10 to 12 hours are needed before flying, but because Nikie was only 15 when she flew a plane with an instructor, she was not able to fly a plane solo until her birth-

ICE FISHING ACTIVITY can never come too early for the real enthusiasts, and the action has been underway for some time on the Red Lake river near the Eighth street bridge in Thief River Falls. The river became covered with ice during a cold snap in early November and has remained frozen despite more moderate temperatures of the past few days. Ice in the area of this activity yesterday is four to five inches thick, fishermen report, and the spot is one of the first to harbor darkhouses during the winter fishing season. Because of water movement and recent warm weather, however, river ice is not yet safe.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Fawn Rae Peters And Arnie J. Willett Wed

Fawn Rae Peters and Arnie J. Willett, both of Plummer, exchanged marriage vows at 3 p.m., September 15, at St. Vincent dePaul Catholic church in Plummer.

Parents are Richard Peters, and Alice Peters, both of Plummer, and Joe Willett and Teckla Willett, also of Plummer.

Rev. Larry Weisler officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by 250 relatives and friends. Pamela Hesse, a friend of the bride, was the organist. She played, "We've Only Just Begun," as the processional. During the ceremony, Deb Swanson, a friend of the bride, sang, "Wedding Song," and "That's The Way."

Forming the background for the wedding party were altar bouquets featuring cattails, golden rod, wheat, Indian tobacco, peach roses and asparagus fern. White and yellow bows marked the pews.

The bride, escorted to the altar by the groom, was attired in an empire fashioned gown of white organza. Chantilly lace with irridescents, graced the bodice, traced the Queen Anne neckline, and flowed over the shoulders and onto the bishop sleeves. Her bouffant skirt with triple tiers of ruffled lace, featured a chapel-length train. To complete her ensemble, she wore a white picture hat trimmed with organza flowers. Attached to the hat was a fingertip veil of bridal illusion. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies, white carnations, straw flowers, babies' breath and brown cedar.

Kim Peters attended her sister as maid of honor. Other attendants were Colleen Bergeron, Thief River Falls, sister of the bride; Joyce Magers, Plummer, sister of the groom, and Mary Shetler, a friend of the bride. Their identical gowns of lemon yellow polyester were styled with double spaghetti straps, accordion pleated skirts and yellow chiffon capelets. Their birthstone necklaces were gifts from the bride. Each carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and yellow and white carnations backed by a lace ruffle. Peach daisies were added to the bouquet carried by the maid of honor.

Serving as flower girl was Sarah Magers, Plummer, a niece of the groom. She wore a bright yellow taffeta gown complemented by a white eyelet overgown featuring a ruffled neckline, full sleeves with wide ruffle at the wrists, and a wide ruffle around the hemline of the skirt.

The rings were carried by Shannon Willett, a son of the couple. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a camel colored regal tuxedo with a peach carnation boutonniere centered with a yellow stephanotis.

Bernard Fallon, Plummer, a cousin of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Barry Rewertz, Plummer, a friend of the groom; Danny Willett, Plummer, a brother of the groom; and Gary LaCoursiere, Oklee, a brother-in-law of the groom. The guests were ushered in by Carl Magers, Plummer, brother-in-law of the groom, and Doug Willett, Plummer, a brother of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Peters wore a yellow polyester floor-length gown styled with a laced bodice with a high neckline. Topping the gown was a yellow chiffon cape. Her corsage was of white carnations and yellow stephanotis. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother, who was attired in a pink floral three-piece gown.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Peterson, Mrs. Helen Kostrzewski, grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Sue LaCoursiere, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception in the church parlors followed with Tom Willett and Elizabeth Hamilton, brother and sister of the groom, as host and hostess. Sandra Rosten, a friend of the bride, registered the guests as Mr. and Mrs. Terry Rewertz, friends of the couple, served the punch.

Centering the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with peach and yellow daisies. At the base was a flowing water fountain. Double stairs, with a miniature bridal party on the steps, graced the sides. Topping the cake were two doves backed by a heart filled with peach and yellow daisies. The cake was cut and served by Monica Fallon and Connie Driscoll, aunts of the groom. Dolores Carlson, an aunt of the groom, poured the coffee.

Waitresses were Tammy and Becky Tvedt, cousins of the groom; Jody Kostrzewski and Cindy Kasprowicz, cousins of the bride. The groom's cake was distributed by Elizabeth Hamilton, sister of the groom.

After a wedding trip to Winnipeg, the couple is now at home at Plummer. The bride is employed by the Inter-County Community Council at Oklee, and the groom by Twin City Construction, Thief River Falls. Both are graduates of the Pershing high school at Plummer. Photo, Nordlund, Bagley.

Loyd Haagensons Honored On Their 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Haagenson, whose 50th wedding anniversary was November 16, were honored at an open house at their home on October 14.

Hosting the anniversary celebration were their son and daughter, Lyle Haagenson and Mrs. Orville (Yvonne) Larson and their families.

Special guests for the occasion were Esther Sorum of Redondo Beach, a friend, and Carl Lunke, Mrs. Haagenson's brother. They were attendants at the wedding ceremony on Nov. 16, 1929, when Loyd Haagenson and Emma Lunke were married at the parsonage in Holt with Rev. L. M. Redal officiating. Since their marriage, the Haagensons have made their home on a farm in Agder township, Marshall county.

Adding interest to the anniversary observance was Mrs. Haagenson modeling her wedding dress during the coffee hour.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered anniversary cake, baked and decorated by the couple's daughter. She also made the silk flower corsages and boutonnieres worn by the honored couple, their attendants, the immediate family, Yvonne and Orville Larson, and Ruth and Lyle Haagenson; the grandchildren, Craig and Glenda Larson, Tonia and Doug Booth and Jerald Larson and his fiancee, Darcy Olson; and the great-grandchildren: Kari Jo and Carl Larson.

Grandchildren assisted at the reception. Mrs. Craig Larson cut and served the anniversary cake, Mrs. Doug Booth poured coffee, Loren Haagenson served the punch and Darrin Haagenson presided at the guest book.

Approximately 125 relatives and friends attended the open house. They were from Redondo Beach, Calif.; Madison, Duluth, Clitherall, Henning, Vining, Dalton, Erskine, Newfolden, Warren, Holt, Middle River and the Thief River Falls area.

Among the many congratulatory messages received was a telephone call from Haagenson's sister, Mrs. John Lowry of San Clemente, Calif.

— LOCALS —

Mrs. Robert Hirst and Jimmy of Williams accompanied by Mrs. Tillie Thompson of Newfolden and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Voldness of Thief River Falls attended the Bonawitz-Blaeser wedding in Fargo, N.D. last Saturday evening returning to their homes Sunday evening. While there they also had a chance to visit with the Loren Voldness family of Fond du Lac, Wis., who also attended the wedding. They were house guests at the Harold Bonawitz home in Moorhead.

Diane Keck-Jim Johnson Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John Keck of Thief River Falls announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane, to Jim Johnson, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson of Warren.

A March 15th wedding date has been set.

Good Grief To Study Problems Following Death

Regular meeting of the Good Grief group will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Fireside room at the United Methodist church.

The meeting will include a discussion on books dealing with death, widowhood, and the problems that follow the death of a loved one.

The meeting is open to the public. Those attending are asked to bring any book that has been especially helpful during their period of grief.

Darryl Jarshaws and Darrick to be Feted

Mr. and Mrs. Darryl Jarshaw and their infant son, Darrick, will be honored Sunday at an open house from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Russell Nelson farm, rural Newfolden.

Relatives, neighbors and friends are welcome to attend.

New members were initiated into the VFW auxiliary, 3793, at a meeting of the unit held October 22.

Initiated were Alice Nissen, Dorothy Lawrence, Evelyn Voelks, Barbara Smith, Shirley Austad, Steffie Kasprowicz, Lorraine Adamski, Edith Sorenson and Arlene Olson.

Accepted into membership were Pauline Aubol and Iola Johnson.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Post Commander Aaron Hook, who outlined plans for purchasing a breather machine for the local fire department. Following his presentation, the auxiliary voted to pay half the cost of the machine.

Hook also listed the responsibility which the auxiliary will resume in heading the game fund. He stated that all monies from the project are to be used for charity. It was noted that the fund has enabled the auxiliary to purchase two television sets for the children's ward at the hospital; to donate $100 to Department President Pat Horacks special project for purchasing a van for transporting patients from the Hastings and Minnesota Veterans hospitals to the VA Medical center; and to make donations to Operation Merry Christmas at the Fergus Falls State hospital and to veterans hospitals in the state and at Sioux Falls, S.D.

Other donations made this fall have been to the Eight district COPE program to begin soon in this area, the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy fund, which the united voted to support yearly; and the Prodigal House.

The unit also signed a petition that POW-MIA donations continue until the many missing in action were accounted for. This project has been supported for many years by the local auxiliary.

The next meeting of the VFW auxiliary will be held November 26 at 8 p.m., at the post club rooms.

Sandra Rosten to Wed Darrel Tougas in Dec.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Rosten of Plummer announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Sandra Kay, to Darrell Wayne Tougas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ludger Tougas of Brooks.

The wedding will take place December 15.

Several Events Scheduled By Newcomers Club

Several special events were discussed and planned when the Newcomers club met November 13, at the home of Ruth Tweet.

The first event scheduled was the club's Christmas party. The event will be held December 1 at 7 p.m., at Lon's. Reservations are to be made by calling Jan Quinlivan, 681-6080.

The Children's Christmas party was set for December 9. It will be held between the hours of 2-4 p.m., at the Jerry and Fay Bolin home, 1202 Greenhill Drive.

The cookie exchange will be held at the next meeting of the club, set for December 11 at the Val Bloeman home, 231 Markley. Members are to bring three dozen cookies for exchanging and six cookies for sampling.

Fourteen members attended the meeting, together with guests; Gloria Rand, Joyce Youngbauer and Lori Wicklander. Of special interest was a macrame demonstration given by Val Bloemen, who also won the door price.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Tweet.

Book Report Is Given At DeCor Club Meeting

Book report and a silent auction highlighted the recent meeting of the Decor club of the federated women's club held at the home of Geneva Overum.

The book report was given by Mildred Wick, who led the members through the many adventures of the characters in "The Men Who Would Not Die." The auction featured a sale of baked goods brought by the members. The Christmas party was discussed and the event will feature a dinner, followed by a gift exchange.

Members present were Mildred Wick, Lillian Aasland, Carla Peterson, Signe Miller, Mable Leyden, Eula Kvikstad, Bertha Hastad and Gladys Isaacson. They answered roll callby telling something about Thanksgiving.

A dessert lunch was served by the hostess.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY
DAD and GRANDPA

50th Anniversary Is Observed By Alden Sprays

Friday, November 23, marks the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alden (Hilma) Spray of Fosston and formerly of Thief River Falls.

They were honored at an open house at the Fosston Baptist church on June 17. Joining them was Mrs. Spray's brother, Oliver Hanson Erskine, who was best man 50 years ago. Unable to attend was the bridesmaid, Marless Hendrickson of California. She was represented by her sister, Mildred.

Hosting the open house were the Spray children: A.C. Spray and his wife, Mary Lou, of Bagley, and Carol Roberts and her husband, Earl, of Cohasset. Mrs. W. Lloyd Spray and daughter, Mrs. Richard Melby of Thief River Falls cut and served the anniversary cake. Spray's sister, Mrs. Oscar Wieby, Erskine, poured the coffee. Marcie Erickson, Fosston, served the punch and Mrs. Marvin Hanson, Grand Rapids, presided at the gift table. The women of the church were in charge of serving.

A musical program was presented by The Messengers of Praise of Forest Lake, personal friends of the Sprays. Highlighting the concert given by the quartette were the selections "Happy Anniversary, Darling," dedicated to the couple, and "How Great Thou Art," in memory of Spray's brother, Lloyd. Rev. Harold Erickson of Fosston gave the opening prayer.

Over 100 relatives and friends attended the open house.

Services Held Tuesday For Ina Langer, 64

Funeral services for Mrs. Morris (Ina) Langer, 64, of this city were held Tuesday at 2 p.m., at Zion Lutheran church in this city. Mrs. Langer died Thursday evening at the United hospital in Grand Forks.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the services. Jerry Jorngdal was the organist an Mrs. Harold Storhaug, the soloist. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery with the Belmont Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Rudy Larson, Charles Dablow, Orville Feragen, Willis Johnson, Edward Hendrickson and Francis Poolman.

Mrs. Langer, the former Ina Josephine Sandness, was born in Warroad on April 30, 1915 to Ole and Anna Sandness. She attended school in Warroad and later enrolled in a course in cosmetology in Minneapolis. Upon completion of her training, she came to Thief River Falls and worked for many years at Haaby's Beauty shop. Later, she opened a beauty shop in her home, which she operated until her retirement in 1974.

She was a member of Zion Lutheran church and the VFW auxiliary.

On Feb. 2, 1947, she was married in Thief River Falls to Morris Langer. He survives, together with a daughter, Debra Kae Langer, Minneapolis; a brother, Rev. Trevor Sandness, Robbinsdale; and several nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by a daughter, her parents and one sister.

Services Held For Mrs. Julia Thompson, 97

Funeral services for Mrs. Julia Thompson, 97, of Thief River Falls were held today (Wednesday) at 1:00 p.m., at Trinity Lutheran church. Mrs. Thompson died Sunday morning at Oakland Park Nursing home.

Rev. Berton Hushagen officiated at the services. Mrs. Anthony Rustad was the organist and Sharyl Thompson, the soloist. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery with the Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were Arnold, Sheldon and David Thompson, Jeffrey Olberg, Tony Rustad and Gerald Sanders.

Mrs. Thompson, the former Julia Skreaa, was born March 14, 1882 in Flekefjord, Norway to Amund and Gunhild Skreaa. She was baptized and confirmed in Norway and attended school there. In 1910, she immigrated to the United States with her sister. They settled in Chester township, Polk county.

On April 9, 1912, she was married at Menahga to Thomas E. Thompson. The couple farmed for a time in Chester township, Polk county before moving to a farm in Hickory township, Pennington county. In 1942, they moved into Thief River Falls, where she had since resided.

Surviving are four sons: Theodore Thompson, Babbitt; Bernet, Thief River Falls; Gust, Seaside, Calif; and Arnold, New Brighton; eight grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in November of 1957; two sisters; Tonetta and Adlung, and two brothers: Amond and Thore.

MSBA Delegate Assembly In Minneapolis

Minnesota school boards association (MSBA) will hold its annual delegate assembly on November 26-27 in Minneapolis. Area 26 will be represented by Rev. Roger Raebel, Red Lake Falls, Alva Halos, Crookston, Sanford Moen, Gary, and Cleo Cleveland, East Grand Forks.

Delegates will hear from Minnesota education commissioner Howard Casmey; department staff members Donald Pfaffner and Tom Melcher on transportation aids; and assistant commissioner Ronald Laliberte on computerized information programs.

Vocational-technical education issues will be discussed by school board members Jane Donkers, Red Wing, and James LaaBraaten, Anoka, along with Mankato superintendent Tom Stark and William Knaak, MAAVTI legislative chairman.

Responsibility to non-public schools will be covered by panel members Vern Lueth, Cook county Superintendent; John Markert, counsel, Minnesota Catholic conference; Sandra Schilling, assistant to Commissioner Casmey; and Peter Popovich, counsel, MSBA.

The 143 official delegates will consider and act upon some 90 resolutions during the meeting. Resolutions which are approved will be presented at the MSBA annual convention, January 16 for final approval.

MSBA is the eighth oldest school boards association in the nation, founded in 1920, and all public school districts in Minnesota are voluntary members.

Scout Leaders To Be Honored December 1

Annual Voyageur Trails district, Boy Scouts of America adult leader recognition banquet will be held Saturday, December 1, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the University of Minnesota, Crookston. Dr. Alex Easton, president of Northland community college in Thief River Falls, will be guest speaker.

In addition to Easton's address, various awards and certificates will be presented to volunteer scout leaders for their contribution to local and district Cub scouting, Boy scouting and Exploring programs. All Cub scout, Boy scout and Explorer leaders, friends and general public are invited to attend the event.

Tickets are available at the door of Bede hall cafeteria.

Voyageur Trails district, part of the Northern Lights council, Boy Scouts of America, is comprised of scouting communities in Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Norman and Mahnomen counties. Currently there are about 1,200 youth members involved in the three scout programs.

Northern Lights council is able to provide the scouting program to local communities through the efforts of United Way and sustaining membership enrollment campaigns.

Full-Size Car Reaches 20 MPG Rating

Chevrolet has announced it will break the 20-mile-per-gallon barrier in EPA estimated mileage for full-size, gasoline-powered cars with the introduction of a specially-equipped 1980 Impala coupe.

Robert D. Lund, Chevrolet general manager and a General Motors vice president, said the car is called the Impala SE. It is equipped with a 3.8-liter V6 engine, automatic transmission, larger-aspect radial tires and a 2.41 rear axle.

It cannot be purchased with air conditioning.

"We're not kidding ourselves," said Lund. "This is not a car for everybody. More than nine out of 10 full-size Chevrolets are normally purchased with air conditioning, for example.

"But whatever the effect of the SE on Chevrolet customers, it has already had a positive effect on the Chevrolet engineering organization — the people responsible for our ongoing fuel economy programs. It has been a catalyst. It has fired everybody up.

"Breaking the 20-mile-per-gallon barrier in this inertia weight class with a gasoline-powered vehicle is a little like running a four-minute mile. It's been an unreachable target for an awfully long time."

Manufacturer's suggested retail price for a standard Impala coupe is $6,179.04. Suggested price of the SE fuel economy option, (Z5A in the catalog), is $111.72.

Although the EPA has rated the Impala SE at 20 mpg, the window sticker will display 18 mpg. That's the federal label estimate for the entire fleet of full-size Chevrolets with V6 engines and automatic transmissions.

Highway fuel economy for the SE is estimated at 28 miles per gallon by the EPA. Combined city-highway mileage — the figure used to determine corporate fleet average fuel economy (CAFE) — is 23.
